Like a Miracle

Consumption—Low Condition

Wonderful Results From Taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Miss Hannah Wyatt
Toronto, Ont.

"Four years ago while in the old country (England), my daughter Hannah was sent away from the hospital, in a very low condition with consumption of the lungs and bowels, and weak action of the heart. The trip across the water to this country seemed to make her feel better for a while. Then she began to get worse, and for 14 weeks she was unable to get off the bed. She grew worse for five months and lost the use of her limbs and lower part of body, and if she sat up in bed had to be propped up with pillows. Physicians

Said She Was Past All Help

and wanted me to send her to the 'Home for Incurables.' But I said as long as I could hold my hand up she should not go. We then began to give her Hood's Sarsaparilla. She is getting strong, walks around, is out doors every day; has no trouble with her throat and no cough, and her heart seems to be all right again. She has a first class appetite. We regard her cure as nothing short of a miracle." W. WYATT, 89 Marion Street, Parkdale, Toronto, Ontario.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable and perfectly harmless. Sold by all druggists. 25c.

About your Groceries
FOR THE WINTER.

Many people from distant parts of the county, and from the north, make it a point to purchase their principal Grocery supplies for the winter during this season.

We are ready and anxious for an opportunity to quote prices and show samples. Every department of our store invites comparison, but in the lines of TEAS and SUGARS, as usual, we offer values that cannot be touched elsewhere. The people know our motto: "Small returns and a quick turn-over of goods."

"I TELL ALL MY FRIENDS."

A Lady of Shelburne, Ont., Permanently Cured of Indigestion After Using Two Bottles of South American Nervine —Glad to Let Everyone Know It.

MRS. A. V. GALBRAITH.

With indigestion it is not only that one suffers all imaginable torments, physical and mental, but more, perhaps, than anything else, an impaired digestion is the forerunner of countless ailments that in their course lead to the most serious consequences. Let the stomach get out of order and it may be said the whole system is diseased. When the digestive organs fail in their important functional duties, head and heart, mind and body are sick. These were the feelings of Mrs. Galbraith, wife of Mr. A. V. Galbraith, the well-known jeweller of Shelburne, Ont., before she had learned of the beneficent results to be gained by the use of South American Nervine Tonic. In so many words she said: "Life was becoming unbearable. I was so cranky I was really ashamed of myself. Nothing that I ate would agree with me; now it does not matter what I eat. I take enjoyment out of all my meals." Here are Mrs. Galbraith's words of testimony to South American Nervine, given over her own signature:

"Shelburne, Ont., March 27, 1894.

"I was for considerable time a sufferer from indigestion, experiencing all the misery and annoyance so common to this complaint. South American Nervine was recommended to me as a safe and effective remedy for all such cases. I used only two bottles, and am pleased to testify that these fully cured me, and I have had no indication of a return of the trouble since. I never fail to recommend the Nervine to all my friends troubled with indigestion or nervousness.

"MRS. A. V. GALBRAITH."

The testimony of this lady, given freely and voluntarily out of a full heart because of the benefits she experienced in her own person, have an echo in thousands of hearts all over the country. South American Nervine must cure, because it operates at once on the nerve centres. These nerve centres are the source from which emanates the life fluid that keeps all organs of the body in proper repair. Keep these nerve centres sound and disease is unknown. There is no trick in the business. Everything is very simple and common sense like. South American Nervine strengthens the digestive organs, tones up the liver, enriches the blood, is peculiarly efficacious in building up shattered and nervous constitutions. It never fails to give relief in one day.

She Found A Friend.

Strong and Mighty to Deliver From Troubles.

This True, Tried and Honest Friend Proved to be Paine's Celery Compound.

Nature's Medicine Cures After a Series of Medical Failures.

The half has never been told regarding the suffering and misery endured from day to day by thousands of our Canadian women. Sleepless, nervous, dyspepsia, indigestion and prostration claim a host of victims, who are earnestly desiring and seeking for deliverance from their burden of woes.

We wish briefly to draw attention to the fact that science has placed within reach of suffering women an agency—a cure—that fully meets the case of every woman in ill health. Thousands of Canadian women in all ranks of society have used Paine's Celery Campound with the most satisfactory results. It is the only medicine that has ever been thoroughly endorsed by the best medical men of the times. No other medicine has ever received such strong and flattering testimonials from our best people, and no other has been so much spoken of by the press of this country.

Every woman who is overworked, rundown, sleepless, nervous or dyspeptic, will find a friend in Paine's Celery Compound. This wonderful and life-giving medicine quickly builds up in flesh, muscle and tissue, it braces the nervous tissue, gives health, vigor and youthful strength. There is no earthly reason why women should continue to live in a half dead condition, while Paine's Celery Compound is doing such a work in our midst.

The following letter from Mrs. E. R. Wheeler of Windsor Mills, P. Q., proves that women have a mighty and strong friend to deliver from suffering and trouble:

"I have been troubled with indigestion, sleeplessness and general debility for about three years; I have been under the care of doctors and have used medicines for a long time, but could find no relief from suffering. Your Paine's Celery Compound was highly recommended to me, and I finally decided to give it a fair trial. I am astonished at the great benefits I have received by using your medicine. I am now blessed with perfect digestion, I sleep well, and altogether I am a different woman. I most cheerfully recommend your Paine's Celery Compound to all who suffer from any of the troubles I have experienced, as I am sure it will give them instant relief."

THE QUEBEC LEGISLATURE.

Gist of the Speech From the Throne at the Opening of the House.

QUEBEC, Nov. 20.—The Speech from the Throne will contain in substance the following: It will treat of the inter-provincial conference and its results and of the health congress and the fruits the society derived from it. The French treaty will be overhauled. The agricultural progress has been notable in the province. The Agricultural School at Oka has made wonderful progress and has shown itself to be a needful institution in the land. Mr. Gigault's mission to Denmark has been fruitful, as it has given a new impulse to the dairy industry in the Province of Quebec. There are no more so-called large public works.

The last loan made will eventually prove to be a most profitable one, when the conditions under which it was made are known. It will then be agreed that it was made under the best terms possible.

A bill concerning libel and giving more latitude to newspapers in their callings will be introduced.

A bill to further amend the law concerning the jury will also be laid before the representatives of the people.

The ordinary expenditures have been reduced $400,000. The public amounts are be placed before the House. The estimates are ready to be distributed and ministers' reports are in the hands of the clerk of the House.

Mr. Felix Carbray will propose the address in answer to the Speech and Mr. Allard, N.P.P., for Berthier will second it.

The Canals of Mars.

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—A despatch was received from Percival Lowell at the Lowell observatory flagstaff, Arizona, stating that the canals of Mars as observed on Wednesday night had begun to double, and that Phison and Euphates were seen germinated. The duplication of the canals of the planet Mars is a phenomenon for which astronomers have been watching with a great deal of interest. It was observed by the Italian astronomer Schiaparelli a number of years ago. The cause of the duplication is by no means determined. Mr. Lowell is of the opinion that it is dependent upon the season and has predicted that the canals would not be seen in duplicate until some time in November.

Fatal Explosion in a Cotton Gin.

CALL, I. T., Nov. 20.—The boiler in John Malcolm's cotton gin exploded, killing Charlie Malone, a pressman, and Will Robbins, engineer. Mrs. John Malcolm, wife of the proprietor, Hal. Morris, of Kansas City, George Townsend and Alex Jenking, of Cale, were probably fatally scalded. Two others were badly burned.

A WELL MAN.

No More Robust Individual to be Found in the Village.

RICHMOND, Nov. 30th,—Dr. A. G. McCormick, whose letter respecting his cure from Bright's disease by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills has recently been published, is now attending his patients and is apparently as robust a man as can be found in the village. During the four months that he was confined to the house suffering from the last stages of Bright's disease, his death was several times reported, and no hopes were entertained of his ultimate recovery. His present robust appearance is therefore all the more surprise to residents. It is a safe prophecy that every sufferer from kidney disease in this section will henceforth try the remedical qualities of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Arbitration of Indian Accounts—The Mixing of Wheat.

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—Hon. John S. Hall, Q.C., and Mr. D. Girouard, Q.C., M.P., counsel for Quebec; Mr. H. E. MacHin, Assistant Treasurer of the Province of Quebec; and Mr. P. S. McCaffrey, his private secretary, have arrived to attend the arbitration between the Dominion and provinces to-day in the Supreme Court Chambers. The arbitration is to decide the legal issue in connection with the Indian claims as embodied in treaties with the Hurons and their tribes in the year 1850. It will also be argued whether an appeal to the Supreme Court should be granted the province against that portion of the award granting the Dominion interest at 5 per cent.

The time for receiving tenders for the construction of two sections of the Trent Valley canal has closed. There were a good number of tenders received, but it will take some days before it is known who has got the contract. The tenders are for the construction of nine miles of the work.

Mr. Wm. Gerald, of the Inland Revenue Department, who was appointed commissioner to investigate the mixing of wheat at Duluth and Port Arthur, has returned having completed his mission. He has started to make his report to Government. His report will likely show that Canadian is not in it at far as wheat mixing is concerned. Everything nearly is graded right down before it reaches Duluth and the probability is that the Government will not make any change in the regulations this year. Something may be done next session for next year's crop. Mr. Gerald's report will be in in a few days.

THE RULING MARKETS.

TORONTO, Nov. 20, 1894.

The visible supply of barley at the close of the week was 3,515,006 bushels, which shows a decrease of 478,000 bushels during the week, and is 432,000 bushels less than was in sight a year ago at this time.

The demand for barley was good in Buffalo for small lots, both of Canada and western, and a few sales were made.

Wheat declined in Chicago on lower cables and increase in the visible supply. Corn was weak and showed a net loss at the close of 3-4 to 5-8c for May and 1-2 to 1c for cash. Oats were easy, closing 1-4 to 3-8c lower.

The receipts of sheep and lambs at Buffalo were enormous, 336 cars when all were yarded and more reported which had not reached the yards by the close of the market. Included in the offerings were 25 cars of Canada lambs, only a portion of which sold, the best realizing $3.50 to $3.75. The best natives sold at $2.75 to $3.25. The glutted markets made it advisable that Canadian shippers should hold off until the congestion has been relieved. Lambs bought in Western Ontario at 3c if shipped now will result in a very considerable loss to the shipper.

Except for mining shares the London markets were dull. Americans were flat, closing nearer the worst. St. Paul and Canadian Pacific were especially weak on traffic returns.

The bears made less headway in the New York stock market than during the later days of the previous week. This was not because any cessation of efforts on their part, but by reason of a steady support and the absence of realizations which until recently have assisted the decline. The market was of a most perfunctory character. The grangers did not fully recover from the shock which they sustained by reason of the heavy decrease in St. Paul earnings published Saturday. The only sellers, however, were the bears, with perhaps a few London orders.

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, have no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose to pay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times.

Good Things Can't Come too Often.

The people of Peterborough and surrounding country will be more than pleased to see by an announcement elsewhere that Prof. Dorenwend, the greatest hair goods artist in America, will once more visit Peterborough and will be at the Grand Central Hotel, on Monday, Nov. 26th. On his last visit to Peterborough, a great many had to go away from his showroom unserved, on account of the rush of customers, which a visit of only one day caused, so people in want of his styles should by no means miss this chance. It is something wonderful to see to what perfection he has brought the art of hair goods styles. His fine ladies and gentlemen's wigs, toupees, wavy and plain fronts, switches, etc., are worn by thousands of people, who rejoice in the wearing of such natural looking goods. Don't miss this chance of seeing Prof. Dorenwend.

CHINA HALL.

China Hall will be open for business from and after this date. Further announcements will be made next week. In the meantime intending purchasers should make a note of the fact that the greatest bargains ever offered in Peterborough in this line will be forthcoming.

NEWS NUGGETS.

Paragraphs Picked Up and Pencilled for Public Perusal.

—No arrests yesterday or last night.

—Additional local matter on eighth page.

—The sewer work was carried on briskly to-day.

—The local tent of the K.O.T.M. meets to-night.

—Plans are being rapidly matured for the spending of Thanksgiving day.

—There was not a quorum present at the Sewerage Committee meeting last night.

—Mr. J. S. Fullerton, Q.C., has been definitely appointed City Solicitor, of Toronto, at a salary of $5,000 per year.

—The railroads did a big passenger traffic last week, as all the drummers in creation appeared to be on the road.

—Mr. Wm. Cardwell, of Omemee, writes to the Toronto News that his hotel has not been closed by the bailiff, as was stated.

—A citizen, with his cheek slit open, laid information this morning against those who were instrumental in "doing him up."

—No council meeting has been summoned this week, as yet. In order to keep up the monthly average, next week will have to be crowded full of them.

—Evangelist Moody will not be invited to come to Peterborough. His price of $75 a night is a little to high to pay. The Scriptures declare the gospel is free.

—Mr. A. Mercer, whose death was mentioned in yesterday's issue, had been in the employ of the G.T.R. for about 35 years. He was at one time baggage master at Port Hope.

—The water in the Otonabee at present is so low the various steamers plying the river are obliged to cease running. The steamer Daisy is being placed on her "ways" at the ship yard in Ashburnham to-day.

—The general change of time on the G. T.R. which went into effect yesterday will cause the Lakefield local to leave here at 1.50 p.m. instead of 1.15 p.m. as formerly. This will be the only change affecting Peterborough.

—The Police had to be called in to quell disturbance in a bar, last night. Four local notorieties figured in the affair and an audience of fifty or sixty soon gathered. No one was hurt but the blasphemy was enough to make one's hair curl.

—A large number of the friends of the late Mrs. Dennistoun assembled at the C. P. R. Station, this morning, and awaited the arrival of the remains by the 11.25 train. The funeral proceeded directly to the Little Lake Cemetery, where interment took place.

—A number of the councillors held an informal discussion, last night in the clerk's office, relative to the assistance asked by the Children's Protective Society. The majority were in favour of having the society submit some scheme for discussion.

—The Street and Bridge Committee met last night and opened the tenders for the snow-ploughing. The contract for the southern portion of the town was awarded Breckenridge & Co. at $70.75, and John Parnell secured the contract for the northern portion at $90.

—Over two hundred hogs were marketed this morning, being the largest number yet brought in on any single day since "Livestock Day" has been observed. Mr. Matthews took the entire lot at four cents. All were fine plump specimens, not too large, and averaged about 180 pounds.

—Fur dealers and trappers will bear in mind that by an amendment to the act, at the last session of the Legislature, muskrats may not be taken between May 1 and January 1, of each year, and that they may not be shot during April. Sable, marten, mink and fisher are not protected by the act.

—The wells in the western portion of the village across the river are drained out, and tennants along either side of Lake street are supplied by the brewery artesian well for domestic purposes. Mr. Calcutt is a most generous councillor in seeing that the public in general are supplied free gratis with aqua-pura for the time being.

—The funeral of Mr. John Coty, of Oakville, brother-in-law of Mr. Wm. Rudkins, is reported to have been a very large one. The faculty of St. Michael's College, Toronto, were in attendance, and the funeral services were conducted by Rev. Father Teefey, of St. Basil's church.

—The man who falls in love with the pretty coquette, finds her like trade to the injudicious advertiser—hard to win. But a proper study of her charming vagaries, together with undying constancy, will surely win her; just as the same methods pursued by a judicious advertiser will win business.

—Commodore Calcutt says in his recollection he never saw the water so low in the Otonabee river and Rice lake at this season of the year as it now is. He states on this account the various steamers plying the waters between Harwood and this port have had to leave quite a month's towing undone.

—Richard Newton, a young Englishman, who was working for Mr. Robt. Martin, Hope, left suddenly, on Saturday night, after robbing Mr. Martin of seven dollars, he also took a black mare, saddle and bridle and decamped. It is supposed that he went east and will, no doubt, try to sell the horse. It is thought that he is making his way back to England.

—A most enjoyable game supper was enjoyed a few evenings ago at the Little Windsor Hotel. The game was the result of a hunt recently indulged in by the genial "Mat" and a few of his friends, and being cooked to a turn it was hugely enjoyed. The principal ingredient of the huge pot pie was squirrels and only the initiated can form an opinion of what a tasty morsel the squirrel is to the epicure's palate. The evening was enlivened with speeches, songs and recitations and the time passed so pleasantly that the host has issued invitations for another supper on Friday evening, provided the requisite amount of game can be secured during the Thanksgiving Day hunt.

—The Child's Own Magazine, issued by the Sunday School Union, London, Eng., and crowded full of the most interesting and instructive little stories for the wee tots has just been received at the Peterborough bookstore, and a more appropriate present for the youngsters would be hard to find. Another book which is always looked for eagerly by children of more advanced age is "Young Canada," an illustrated annual containing stories of adventure and travel by authors whose works are considered to be instructive as well as amusing. It is brim full of stories of life in the public schools of old England, such as boys love, and is essentially a book for boys, and every boy should have it on his own particular book shelf. Drop into the Peterborough bookstore and ask to see these two books.

THE ST. JOHN'S YOUNG PEOPLE'S OPEN MEETING.

An Excellent Programme Presented—A Large Attendance.

An open meeting of the Young People's Association of St. John's church, was held in the Sunday school last evening, with a large attendance of members and their friends present.

The chair was taken by the president, Miss Sproule, and the first half hour was devoted to business as usual.

On motion it was decided that the whole membership of the Association be a committee to decorate the church at Christmas and other festival seasons.

It was decided that refreshments be not served monthly, but only two or three times during the winter.

On motion Messrs. Roadhouse and Hodgson were added to the Fatigue Committee to replace Mr. Nicholls, who has left town.

The musical part of the programme was then taken up and Mr. Harold Cluxton selected to take the chair. Mr. Callender's humorous recitation, "The Organ Grinder," was greatly appreciated, as was Miss Clara Clarke's delightful rendition of that sweet Scotch ballad "Annie Laurie." The St. John's quartette, composed of Messrs. Hayden, Varnes, Kingscote and Vigott sang "Eulalie" in a manner intensely pleasing. This quartette bids fair to be one of the best known in the vicinity. As an encore "Spreading Gossip" was given.

Miss Nicholl's sang "Love's Golden Dream" in perfect voice, and Mr. Thos. Baker gave a most humorous reading, which was well received.

Mr. Harold Cluxton's impromptu remarks on "Amusements" was a most interesting feature of the programme. The National Anthem brought the meeting to a close.

CONVICTION IN THE LUBON PAMPHLET CASE QUASHED.

"Julius Cæsar" Connors' Contention Sustained.

In the early part of last year it will be remembered that a young man named Gibbons was convicted by Police Magistrate Dumble, under the criminal code, of unlawfully circulating an obscene pamphlet advertising some proprietary medicine. The conviction was appealed against, and the following report of the proceedings will explain the result:—

Reg. v. Gibbons.—A. G. Murray moved absolute a rule nisi to quash a summary conviction of the defendant by the Police Magistrate for the town of Peterborough, "for that (the defendant) did at the town of Peterborough, on the 10th day of February, 1894, without lawful excuse or justification, expose to public view an obscene book, tending to corrupt public morals, contrary to the criminal code." The defendant contended that the conviction was bad on its face because it did not state the exact offence, and that the court would not amend it because the book in question was not one tending to corrupt public morals. It was a book describing certain diseases, given away to the public with the object of assisting the sale of patent medicines. W. H. Murray, (Peterborough), showed cause. The court held that the conviction was bad on its face, and that it could not now be amended by setting out such parts of the book as might be deemed obscene. Rule absolute quashing conviction without costs and with the usual clause protecting the Magistrate.

Mr. J. C. Connors, theatrical manager, Toronto, was here at the time of the conviction in the interest of the condemned enterprise, and emphatically laid down the law, and pronounced the conviction unjustified by the facts. He will of course accept with his accustomed modesty the court's vindication of his contention.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The ladies are requested to send their donations, for the Thanksgiving reception, to the rooms, on Thursday afternoon.

The young men are promised "good things," at the Y. M. C. A. reception, both in the musical programme and refreshments. Some of the best local talent will assist and Toronto may be heard from.

HOBBS OR ESSERY.

In regard to the Provincial bye-election which is taking place in London to-day the Free Press (Con.) says:—The friends and supporters of Mayor Essery were never more confident of victory in any political contest than they are of to-morrow's result.

The Advertiser (Lib.) says:—From every subdivision of the city the returns of the canvass for Mr. Hobbs have been received. With every vote polled Mr. Hobbs will have a majority of at least 500.

Transfer of Licenses.

The License Commissioners of West Peterborough have to-day transferred the license of Mr. J. O'Shea, Hunter street, to the Commercial Hotel, corner of Brock and George streets. The transfer was also made of the license of the City Hotel from Mr. William Clancy to Mr. James Dolan for the same premises.

Young Women's Association.

Bible study this evening at 8 o'clock, conducted by Miss Code. All young women will be cordially welcomed. Remember the Thanksgiving social. Arrangements are being made by the different committees of the association to make this social a pleasant and social evening by introducing games, excellent music, refreshments, etc, No charge at the door but a thankoffering will be taken up during the evening. Let there be a large attendance.

The Foresters' Concert.

Of Miss Stevenson, who takes part in the Foresters' concert on Thanksgiving day, the Lucknow Sentinel says: "Miss M. T. Stevenson, of London, then gave the solo "Should he Upbraid," and with her well trained voice and pleasing style completely captivated the audience and was loudly encored. She gave three other pieces during the evening, and on each occasion fairly brought down the house. Miss Stevenson is undoubtedly one of the best vocalists that has ever taken part in a concert at Lucknow."

The New Diphtheria Cure.

Dr. Bryce, of the Provincial Board of Health, Toronto, has received four bottles of anti-toxine, the new and successful remedy for diphtheria. One bottle contains enough for an ordinary case of pronounced diphtheria, but the same quantity will serve to render ten persons exposed to the contagion, proof against attack. Dr. Clarke, Medical Health Office, who applied to the Provincial Board of Health for some anti-toxine, has received reply that there is none in the city except four bottles which is required for city use, and that he (Dr. Clarke) would have to send direct to New York or the old country for a supply. Dr. Clarke, in view of the fact that there is practically no diphtheria in town (the single case being convalescent), has decided to defer ordering a supply, pending the results of the use of the anti-toxine in Toronto.

Coughs, colds, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis, and all lung troubles are quickly cured by Haggyard's Pectoral Balsam.

Mr. Wm. Rudkins has returned from Oakville.

Mr. George Edmison is in Toronto on business to-day.

Mr. Perry Goldsmith is home from Trinity University for his Thanksgiving holidays.

Mr. Alex. Richardson and Mr. W. Hutchinson, Lakefield, were in town this morning.

Miss M. A. Campbell, of Norwood, has returned home, after spending a few days in town as the guest of Miss Quinn.

Miss Alice Wood left for Campbellford to-day to-day, to undertake nursing duties at the bedside of a resident of that place.

Miss Lettie P. Gay and her sister, who have been in town since holidays, left to-day for their home in Madoc, where they expect to remain.

Mr. Chas. E. Titton, of Orillia, registered at the Grand Central to-day, as he was passing through on his way home from a hunt in the northern part of the county.

Mr. Geo. Marion of Toronto, who has been a guest at the Little Windsor, left to-day for home, with his game bag well filled with black squirrels and spruce partridge.

Mr. Nelson, of the Bank of Ontario, has sufficiently recovered from his recent illness as to be able to leave for his home in Uxbridge, where he will spend a few weeks recuperating.

The Globe says,—"Mr. H. J. Shirleff, accountant of the Bank of Montreal, Peterborough, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Eddy, of Hull, left on Tuesday, for Chatham, N. B. He was accompanied by Miss Shirleff."

LANSDOWNE LODGE EXPRESSES ITS REGRETS.

One of the Most Active Workers Leaves Peterborough.

Mr. Samuel Kemp, who for some years has been in the employ of Foot & McWhinnie, has accepted a position in St. Thomas, and left last night to assume his new duties. Lansdowne Lodge, S.O.E., of which he was a most active member, assembled and passed the following address, which will be forwarded to Mr. Kemp:—

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Learning as we have with deep regret of your departure from Peterborough, and your severance with the Sons of Ingland here, we cannot permit such an event to take place without placing on record the very high esteem in which you have been held by your brethren of this Lodge. It is not often in fraternal intercourse the fortune of societies to meet with one of such marked urbanity, honourable and genial disposition, as you have always exhibited among your brethren here, and we beg to assure you, with all sincerity, we view your departure from among us with the most profound regret. Yet this regret is happily tempered with the pleasing thought that while we lose in the severance of those fraternal and civic associations, in the sphere of usefulness to which you have removed, you will only have to be known to be as honoured, respected and loved as you are with us. If there is any virtue, any power in sterling qualities of mind and heart as you possess, we can have no fear nor doubt but that you future may be as happy and prosperous, as we sincerely pray it may be.

Signed on behalf of the Lodge,
GEO. CARPENTER, Pres.,
W. J. SQUIRES, Secretary.

THE RUGBY FIFTEEN'S SMOKING CONCERT.

Cigars and "Hods" were on Parade and a Jolly Evening was Spent.

The Rugby Club's great, grand and glorious "smoker" has come and gone, and now is a thing of the past, but the recollections of it will be green in the memory of those who were present last night at the Labour Hall for many a long day.

The musical part of the programme was begun at nine o'clock, and for a couple of hours the fun was fast and furious, wit flowed freely, and merriment abounded.

A chorus by the Glee Club entitled "The Mystic Star," with banjo obligato, was rendered with a zest that almost raised the roof. Mr. Lefevre followed with a selection on the banjo, which he played with taste and good effect. Mr. Strickland's humorous song was good and he was compelled to respond to an enthusiastic encore, after which Dannie Simons took the platform and gave a little "turn" which, figuratively speaking, brought the house down. In response to an encore he gave another song and dance, which was productive of great applause.

Mr. Corrie Smith's song with a good chorus, woke the echoes in every part of the building, as did the applause which it called forth.

Mr. Charlie Brown's reading of "Jimmie McBride's Letter," gave him a chance to work in the "illigint" brogue of which he is such a perfect master, and the audience enjoyed the number exceedingly. He gave "Mrs. O'Hooligan's letter" as an encore. Mr. "Roc'ester" Brown sang "Lather and Shave" in a manner most comical, but refused positively to respond to an encore. It was ascertained, later, that he had not heard the applause, the tobacco smoke being so thick that the sounds of applause failed to penetrate the fumes and reach his ear. He kindly rendered another selection from the back benches.

Mr. Gus. Sawyers sang well and was the recipient of no inconsiderable applause for his clever rendition of "The Whistling Coon." The banjo club, composed of Messrs. Lefevre, Duncefford and Wonham, gave several selections on their instruments, which were greatly appreciated, being airs of a most catchy style and well suited to the occasion. Mr. MacKenzie sang that old Scotch ballad "Bonnie Prince Charlie," in a manner which at once identified him with the glens and crags of "Auld Scotia." As an encore he gave "Lochiel." Mr. Strickland kindly responded to a call for another song and it took well, as did its chorus, which was caught up and carried with a vim indeed.

Mr. Leefe's "Landlord, Fill the Flowing Bowl" also called for a chorus and the audience complied with a will and "whooped it up" to a degree which put the neighbouring windows in danger. "The Larbord Watch", a trio, by Messrs. Alex. Elliott, Thomas Dunn and Gus. Lech was one of the very best numbers on the programme presented, and was awarded most liberal applause. Mr. Wonham's rendition of that well known French dialectic song "The Wreck of the Susan Jane" was most amusing indeed. Mr. "Pop" Moore sang "A Capital Ship" with great gusto, but the song of the evening was a topical one, composed by he and Mr. "Heck" Robinson. The following verses of it were caught as they floated around on the smoke :

Oh! there once was a town of great renown,
Which a team of players had ;
They spilled their gore, and got blows galore
In the game of football mad.

CHORUS.

Then the Cap would tear his hair,
And cry in despair,
And curse like mad because he had
Such elephants on his hands.

Now their captain bold, was both stern and cold,
He gave his men a nightly run ;
And deep indigo ruin at once began brewin
On each luckless son of a gun.
—CHORUS.

For he wanted them to run all night,
He wanted them to work all day,
And 'twas great relief to poor old Leefe,
When each run had passed away.
—CHORUS.

As time went on and some games they won,
Their team got very gay ;
To Toronto they sent with a bold intent,
To again their powers display.
—CHORUS.

But as the game drew nigh, the wind grew high
In favour of Osgoode Hall :
And eleven to eight was the team's sad fate
For having too much gall.
—CHORUS.

For although they ran all night,
And also worked all day,
And MacIntosh scrapped with a red-headed chap,
Yet their milk was turned to whey.
CHORUS.

So great were their demands
Of the various brands,
They drank like mad because they had Such elephants on their hands.
—CHORUS.

The tune was that of "The man with the elephant on his hands" from the Opera Waong and the chorus was loud enough to reach De Koven's ears in New York.

"Suanwee River," by the Glee Club, preluded the National Anthem, bringing to a close about the jolliest evening which any of the boys will pass for many a day.

The chair was occupied by Mr. A. Colyer and Mr. Poussette drummed up the participants in the programme.

PALESTINE BROUGHT TO PETERBOROUGH.

The Result of Mrs. Mountford's Realistic Lecture on Oriental Life—A Large Attendance—An Eloquent, Interesting and Instructive Address.

Mrs. Mountford, the celebrated lecturer on Oriental life, was greeted with a very large audience at the opera house last night, and it must be a mild form of expression to say that everybody was delighted.

Promptly at 8.15 the curtain rose upon the interior of a home in Palestine, the dozen or more members of the family, picturesquely stretched on the low divans that surrounds the room, in various postures of oriental lassitude. The Scripture texts on the wall, the mark of the protecting hand, the grain chest, and the mill, the low lamp stand and all the distinguishing features of a home of the humbler classes in the Holy Land were shown, and the picture was a pretty one. The attendants were Mrs. Mountford's assistants. With these, calling them to the front of the stage, she illustrated the distinctive dresses of three classes in Palestine, the tent dwellers, the country people living in villages, and the dwellers in the cities. The shepherd was also in evidence, and the manner in which he cared for his flocks, and "carried the lambs in his bosom," illustrated ; the shepherd's rod, (or rather club), and staff were shown illustrative of the Psalmist's reference. The wayside form of salutation was given by Mrs. Mountford and assistants, and the length of time consumed served to point the divine injunction to the apostles to "salute no man by the way." The "bed" in illustration of the paralytic let down through the roof at our Saviour's feet, was also shown, also the grinding in the mill, and the significance of the various Scripture references made clear, or emphasized. The peculiar graphically described and illustrated ; and a hundred other subjects dealt with in a manner to throw light upon Scripture passages, which cannot be fully understood without such illustrations. For over two hours, Mrs. Mountford held the breathless attention of her audience, the interest never for one moment flagging and frequent applause greeting the eloquent lady lecturer as she scored some emphatic point. No attempt at report could do justice to the wonderfully dramatic and realistic representation Mrs. Mountford gives of Oriental life, and any who wish to understand hundreds of Scripture references, which are now only dark sayings, should not fail to hear Mrs. Mountford. She is a cultured eloquent speaker, with a nice fluent and forcible delivery, with just enough of foreign accent to make it piquant, and with a sly vein of dry humour running through her speech. Her address last night was intensely interesting and educative as well. To-night she will appear again at the opera house, when her subject will be upon the life in the cities ; and, as the ladies will be pleased to know, a treasury of magnificent oriental attire will be exhibited illustrative of the lecture, and the attendants will also be present to assist in, what, if it is anything like the splendid lecture of last evening, will be one of the finest entertainments ever presented in Peterborough.

YET ANOTHER COMMERCIAL ADVANCE.

Mr. M. Carton's New Wholesale Establishment.

It is a little singular that a town of the importance and unsurpassed shipping facilities of Peterborough, should be without a wholesale mercantile establishment. If this be a reproach to our enterprise, Mr. M. Carton has determined to remove that reproach. He has opened a wholesale grocery house at 306 Simcoe street, in the premises formerly occupied by the biscuit factory of Reid & Gilmour, next west of the Lock Works. These premises are well adapted to the business, the whole four stories being available for the storing of stock, besides a near annex to be used as a bonded warehouse for tobaccoes and other exciseable goods. Entering at the front door on the right is a sample room where samples of all the goods in small parcels are neatly arranged on shelves ; to the left is the counting room, and to the rear the ware rooms proper, and the stairs to the upper stories. The basement will be devoted exclusively to syrups, the first floor to sugars, the second to teas, coffees, the third to meals and dry provisions, while wooden ware will be put upon the fourth flat.

Mr. Carton has several car loads of his stock already in place and other consignments arriving daily.

He buys direct from the manufacturers, refiners and producers, and thus saves the cost of the extra handling and extra freight that has to be paid upon the goods ordered in Toronto, Kingston and Montreal. This will be a special advantage to local merchants because they need not carry such heavy stocks. They can "sort up" with Carton at any time and pay lower prices than elsewhere, because there is only one freight bill from the first producers to Peterborough and cost of an extra freight charge and an extra handling is saved. Mr. Carton has for some two or three years been wholesaling on a small scale in connection with his retail business, and has received such encouragement that he has decided to devote his whole attention to the wholesale trade and retire from his retail business, which he will do during the present week. It is to be hoped that Mr. Carton will meet the encouragement his enterprise deserves, and that his wholesale grocery house will not only be a source of convenience to the merchants of the town and district, but a source of profit to himself and a credit to the town.

The harder the times, the more business is done by Grafton & Co., Clothing Manufacturers.

A "Cold" Day!

You caught a cold last week—one of those long, lingering sorts of colds that's sneezy thing to get. Everybody you knew, and some people whom you had never been introduced to, told you what to take, and the more you took the more cold you took. Finally you went to see a doctor. He felt your pulse, told you to hold out your tongue, which felt like an all wool blanket, and advised you to drink plenty of COLD WATER, take two grains of quinine every two hours—and wear a good warm Overcoat. "Two dollars, please," said the doctor, and as you paid him like a little man, you made up your mind that if you had bought an Overcoat when you should, you would have saved your two dollars, the quinine, and wouldn't have to drink so much COLD WATER.

We Will Back Our Overcoats
Against any Others In Canada

for saving doctors' bills, and you couldn't have better advice than to get into one of GOUGH'S tip-top Overcoats FORTHWITH.

Buy a $4.00 one if you can't afford a better one, as that may save a five dollar doctor's bill. Buy an All-Wool $10 one for $6.50 if you want a better one—or if you want a heap o style for your money, we've got the extreme styles at from $12 to $15.

OUR 1/2 PRICE SALE
BOOMING! BOOMING! BOOMING!

People who complain of hard times need only to stick their heads in here and take a look at the crowds surrounding every department and they'll be convinced of the truth of our statement. And the best of it is—there's no limit to what's going—just as good to-day as on any day last week when the big crash commenced.

when pimples, boils, carbuncles and like manifestations of impure blood appear. They wouldn't appear if your blood were pure and your system in the right condition. They show you what you need—a good blood-purifier; that's what you get when you take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It carries health with it. All Blood, Skin, and Scalp Diseases, from a common blotch or eruption to the worst Scrofula, are cured by it. It invigorates the liver, purifies and enriches the blood, and rouses every organ into healthful action. In the most stubborn forms of Skin Diseases, such as Salt-rheum, Eczema, Tetter, Erysipelas, Carbuncles, and kindred ailments, and with Scrofula, in every shape, and all blood-taints, if it fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back. It is the cheapest blood-purifier sold.

MRS. E. D. SOUTHWORTH.

The Close of Her Long and Busy Career is Being Passed at Her Home, at Prospect Cottage.

On the 26th of next December Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth will be 75 years of age. The close of her long and busy career is being passed at her home, Prospect Cottage, Georgetown, D.C. Her literary life is ended, and her declining years will be tenderly watched over by her son, Dr. Southworth, and his wife. Though feeble in body, her mind is still clear and active. She is invisible until about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, but at that hour generally receives one or two particular friends, whom she delights with selections from her vast store of reminiscences. She is also an admirable story teller, particularly of the humorous sort, her dialect and mimetic efforts being especially delightful. Mrs. Southworth was born in Washington, her ancestors on both sides having been in America since 1632. Her father died when the future authoress was a mere child, but a kind-hearted step-father later gave her the advantage of a good education. While yet a girl the death, under unusually pathetic circumstances, of a young friend suggested the plot of a romance, which was printed in a Baltimore publication. This was followed by a number of short stories, all of which met with success. Up to this time the authoress received no pay for her work, which was all done con amore. Her marriage was not a happy one, and she went to Washington, where she secured a position as school teacher at a salary of $250 a year. Finding it difficult to support herself and her two children on such a small amount, even in these days of simple habits, she wrote "Retribution," which appeared as a serial in The National Era, being the first ever published in that form in America. It was also the first novel ever reprinted from a newspaper or magazine. Its success was so great that Mrs. Southworth decided to devote her whole time to novel writing. Her stories have all had a foundation in fact, "Capitola" being in her own judgment the best she ever wrote.

MRS. E. D. E. N. SOUTHWORTH.

Prospect Cottage is an odd-looking building, a story and a half high and commanding a fine view of the Potomac. Scattered through the interior are specimens of embroidery which have been obsolete for many years, not a little of the furniture being equally old fashioned. All of it, however, is highly prized by the venerable writer, Mrs. Southworth is a Swedenborgian in creed, and holds the doctrine that in another state of existence each soul finds its elective affinity.

Liber—"What are you tearimg up that manuscript for?" Scriptus—"It's no good. You see it's some verses to be sung in comic opera, and I found a couple of lines which made sense."—Chicago Record.

"It's a great building," said a man who is working on the new postoffice. "It'll come pretty near lasting forever." "Well," said Mr. Dolan, "if it lashts till it's done, begob Oi t'ink it'll hov to."—Washington Star.

THE QUEEN OF COREA.

She Wears But Few Diamonds and Smokes American Cigarettes.

The Queen of Corea is now 41 years of age, being just one year older than her husband. She is of medium height and her form is slender and straight. Her manner is pleasing and she is always described as every inch a queen. She is by no means bad-looking. Her face is long and every line of her features beams with intelligence and vivacity. She has a high forehead, a long, slender, aristocratic nose, and her mouth and chin indicate determination and character. Her cheek-bones are high, her ears are small and her complexion is the color of rich Jersey cream. Her eyebrows are after the approved style of Corean beauty, the hairs having been pulled out so that they form an arched thread of black over her eyes. These are almond in shape and they fairly snap with life. They are keen-business-like eyes, and they see everything, being intellectual rather than soulful. The queen's hair is jet black. It is parted in the middle, is combed perfectly smooth away from the forehead and brought down over the ears and rolled in a low coil that rests on the nape of her neck. Here it is fastened with hairpins of gold or silver, each a foot long and as big around as your finger. The queen has a good mouth, full of well-formed, large teeth: and when she laughs, which is quite often, shows the upper ones.

The queen has a large wardrobe, the dresses of which she changes frequently. During her mourning for the queen-dowager she was dressed for weeks in a white silk gauze, which is the color of mourning in Corea. She is not fond of jewelry.

Her hand, which are long, thin and shapely, never sparkle wih diamonds; her only rings are heavy gold bands, and she always wears these in pairs, two rings on one finger. She wears neither bracelets nor necklaces, and her clothing is more like that of a retiring woman of the west than of the queen of the most gorgeous oriental court of the world. Her feet are clad in Corean shoes of the softest of skins, finely embroidered, and more like slippers than shoes. She wears a diamond-studded American watch; and, as is the custom among Corean women, she is by no means averse to a smoke. She does not however, affect its long-stemmed Corean pipe with its bowl of silver or brass, but prefers a cigarette and I was told at Seoul that she orders her cigarettes from the United States and smokes them quite freely.—Demorest's Magazine.

Waterproof Varnish.

One of the cleverest and most useful inventions of the age is the "Millerain" process, by which materials of all kinds are rendered rain and damp-proof. Now that velvets and velveteens are increasingly fashionable, it is delightful to know that we can buy them so successfully treated by this process that they are as absolutely impervious to wet as the most reliable mackintosh. The uses to which such ideal materials can be put are endless; but for children's hats, coats, suits and frocks, as well as for grown persons' wear, velveteen that will not spot, and possesses the quality of resisting damp without any of the unpleasantly unhealthy attributes so often attached to waterproofed goods, is a gift for which it is impossible to be too grateful.—Philadelphia Record.

One Thing He Had Not.

There is at least one human ailment that a tramp is exempt from—a splitting headache.—Richmond Dispatch.

A Terrible Experience:

Mr. Geo. Tribe of Straffordville, Ont. a pretty village near the shores of Lake Erie, went through an experience lately that he will never forget. He tells it in his own words:

"For three years I suffered from skin disease in its worst form. I tried Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura remedies, and doctored one year with the best physicians in the land, but got no benefit; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but failed to remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard, white scales; the itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. I can truly say I owe my good health to B. B. B., and I advise all sufferers to use this splendid medicine.

CHARACTER IN CURLS.

TROLLEY RINGLETS WORN BY WOMEN FULL OF HIDDEN MEANING.

Some Are Lachrymose, Others Gay—But All Have an Individuality That Cannot Be Mistaken by a Close Observer.

Have you ever noticed closely those queer little curls worn by women right in the middle of their foreheads? It goes without saying that when the curls are good, they are very good, and when they are bad, they are horrid. They undoubtedly show a great deal of character of one kind or another. A very "tough" girl is sure to have a very "tough" curl; an artistic girl is likely to have an artistically touzled curl. A tailor made young woman, if she be thorough, will have a curl that is smooth and perfect and curved like the bow of Eros. So when the whole question of curls is sifted down to an identity of character, a student of human nature without any occultism whatever can tell just what kind of a girl is asking him to contribute to church fairs. He can also gauge a girl's appetite for ice cream, and discern her capacity for faith and frivolty.

A great deal of disaster has been wrought by the trolley curl. It is a blow aimed directly at mankind's peace of mind by designing woman. It is a historical fact that it Helen had been a pug-nosed woman Troy would never have fallen. Her nose was sharp and straight as an arrow of Cupid, and she found it convenient to project it into the the affairs of nations. In a similar manner the hirsute fishhook dangling from the forehead of the fin de siecle girl is baited with a tremendous and dangerous fascination that is generally fatal to the youth of the land.

DELLA FOX.

Some have gone so far as to assert that it is the invention of the devil. It is not. Della Fox is said to have been the first one to discover its coiling and pichensile power. She sprung it on a Wang audience one night, and it occasioned great laughter among the bald heads and feather heads and frapped dudes. Other girls came, saw, and were converted. It's fame waxed apace. Breach of promise cases multiplied. Domestic misery increased. The crops of "God Bless Our Home" mottoes in the second-hand auction stores was marked down to a song. Every where the trolley curl has wrought havoc.

CAROLINE MISKEL.

Upon the forehead of Della Fox you may see the original curl. It took like a soft and frivilous "see that-hump" hook. It dangles down between her eyes like an inverted interrogation point, or a straight exclamation that has been warped by circumstances. When she dances it waves up and down in a rhythmic Runic fashion that is captivating. When she kicks it flutters. When she smiles it quivers. It is blonde and bamboozling, and it is the little yellow mother of curls.

It is only a step to the curl of Blanche Walsh. Blanche the Fair—Blanche the lily-maid of Centre street. This is what Tennyson would have called her. Miss Walsh has a high forehead and high principles. Her curl is not obtrusive. It twists above her left eye like a pigeon's wing and imparts a classic carelessness to her features. The Fox curl carries a geometrical design in every hair. That of Miss Walsh tumbles down as carelessly as though it had never felt bandoline or curling iron. It is not a curl that will maintain its crimp in all climates, however. California air does not agree with it.

Caroline Miskel's curl is large and comprehensive. It sweeps down in a sort of fairy hammock, and is altogether "sorter careless like," as Josh Billings would say. It is one of those curls that look like a natural accident, if such a thing may be. No combination of wind and weather can take the crimp out of that curl, because it seems to be fastened at both ends.

ANNA O'KEEFE.

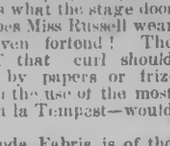
The curl of Anna O'Keefe is a wonderful affair. It is pretty enough, but it looks as though it were stricken with hasty consumption. It might have had originally more than six hairs. If so, the rest have deserted and rejoined the main flock. The few vagrants that are left do their duty finely. When Miss O'Keefe marches down to the footlights in her tartan plaid the little curl bobs and quivers and shakes at every step in a way that is very fascinating to the stage door "Johnnies."

It would not do for Emma Eames to have a ordinary curl. Her's is a very complex affair. It is full of criss-crosses, that act as braces and staunchions in times of severe vocal effort. It is a dignified curl and the student of curlology will find nothing frivilous about it. It is built to withstand high C's and the tremendous throes of Wagnerian opera. It has trembled with Marguerite, languished with Lucia and shuddered with Desdemona. Altogeter it is a characteristic and emotional curl.

EMMA EAMES.

Lulu Glaser has a generous curl. It cannot properly be called a curl. It is more like the nest of a humming bird, and forms a careless and pretty thatch for Lulu's bright eyes. She does not seem to care half so much about it as do the bald heads in the front row. She runs her fingers though it occasionally but it always flies back into its pristine kink. Sometimes Lulu reinforces it with another curl on the other side of her forehead, but the general effect is not particularly enhanced.

One of the most clearly outlined curls on the stage is that of Marie Tempest It is in the shape of a somewhat irregular letter "S," but nobody seems to know who it stands for. Everybody in the theatre whose name begins with "S" has doubtless felt flattered at one time or another on account of that curl. It is said that Miss Tempest does not use curling tongs. She curls her hair with the emulsions which she receives from footlight admirers. They are burning enough to kink the most refractory locks. Miss Tempest's curl never falters in the gamut from laughter to tears.



LULU GLASER.

The curl of Miss Kate Davis is one of the most remarkable varieties to be found. There is a differentiation about it that is peculiar to everything that Miss Davis does. It is in the shape of a ring, large enough for a bracelet, plastered smoothly down over the forehead. It is not in the least coquettish. In fact it is in thorough keeping with the character of Miss Davis—staid, dignified and intensely respectable.

Miss Lillian Russel—airy, fairy Lillian—has a curl that is a work of art. Of course she herself is not responsible for it only in so far as a watchful supervision goes. It is a hair dresser's dream, a bang curler's delight. It ripples down over her forehead like a whorl of gold from a horn of plenty. It is a wisp of burnished bullion that coils and hangs about her brow like a spray of golden rod. At least this is what the stage door Johnnies think. Does Miss Russell wear curl papers? Heaven forfend! The golden dream of that curl should never be spoiled by papers or frizzling irons. Even the use of the most amatory epistles—a la Tempest—would be sacrilege.

MARIE TEMPEST.

The curl of Amanda Fabris is of the buzzy-fuzzy variety. It is pretty enough and captivating enough, but like the curl of Miss Davis, it is of an individual character. It is purely Fabrian. It makes no pretence of being a Sunday go to meeting curl. It is simple and well fitted for the exigencies of comic opera, more especially to the ground and lofty athletic roles played by Mr. Francis Wilson. Miss Fabris does not pay much attention to her curl. To her it is a matter of secondary consideration. "Art first, curl afterward," is her motto. Miss Fabris may be right, but there are those who would like to see more curl and less art.

There are a great many possibilities in the curl of Miss Julia Arthur. It coils and twists and tumbles in a way that is thoroughly spell binding. It is probably the most careless variety, as well as the most studious in the lot. A thoroughly home curl, it makes no bid for the notoriety and adulation of more pretentious curls. It is probably a curl that can bend above a sleeping baby or a Thanksgiving turkey with equal grace and equal affection.

KATE DAVIS.

The most lachrymose curl before the New York footlights at present is that of Miss Olga Nethersole. It hooks in from either side, with a most sorrowful twist. It it cannot grasp a leading man's shoulder with a frenzied clutch it belies its looks. Pathos and tears tremble from each point. Still it is not an affair that can be easily spoiled with a bedshivelled handkerchief. That wild, unstudied "mamma, where am I" gesture, used by actresses upon awakening from a stage trance, would have no other effect upon it than to enhance its beauty. A backward fall would only lend additional lustre to it. Stage death in its most horrible form would only twist it into the splendor of a post mortem aureole.

LILLIAN RUSSEL.

There are other actresses who have curls, but the foregoing are the most pronounced. Juliet Cordon has one of the touch-me-not species, and Johnstone Bennett has none at all. It has disappeared through stage evolution and footlight necessities. Julia marlowe has two. They look something like the tails of Biela's comet at perhelion, but they are effective and pretty.

JULIA ARTHUR.

As far as localities are concerned, the fifth avenue curl is most careless and prosy. They do not have to curl their hair up in the palaces of swelldom. Money makes the hair go, no matter what aspect it may wear. The sharpest and primmest curls are those worn by the Harlem girls. Oculists do a good business in that neighborhood with young men who have their eyes partially hooked out by the curls of their best girls. There are very few curls in the Bowery. The girls down there are too proud to follow any fashions but their own. From time immemorial the smooth, even, hayrick bang has prevailed, and will continue to prevail until some ether fashion of equal simplicity is discovered.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

THREE RUNNING SORES
PHYSICIANS FAILED
BUT B.B.B. CURED

DEAR SIRS—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. I was treated by a skilled physician but he failed to cure me. I had three Running Sores on my neck which could not be healed until I tried B. B. B., which healed them completely, leaving the skin and flesh sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

A SCALY ERUPTION
UNENDURABLE ITCHING
Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B.B.B.

GENTLEMEN—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured. I tried other remedies, such as Donald Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura Remedies, but all to no good. I doctored one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and scaly. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. B.

ONTARIO CROP REPORT

Last Bulletin for the Year From the Bureau of Industries.

AN INTERESTING SUMMARY

Reports From Various Parts of the Province Give the Condition of the Various Cereals -- Fruit Not the Average--Dairy Report Encouraging.

TORONTO, Nov. 20.—The November crop bulletin, the last to be issued by the Ontario Bureau of Industries for the year, contains interesting statistics relating to the weather conditions in the province as compared with other years and to the growth of the crops. The bulletin states that the most remarkable feature of the weather during the year was the lack of rain, or, more properly speaking, its unequal distribution. In the growing months from April to September, the rainfall was only 0.58 less than the average for twelve previous years, but more than one-third of the total fall came in the month of May. During August the province suffered most severely from want of rain. The following is a summary of the reports of the condition of the various crops:

FIELD CROPS.—Fall wheat is in general reported as being of good quality, some being extra heavy; spring wheat, light in weight and shrunken in many districts; barley of good color but inclined to be under weight; oats variable, on the whole under the average in quality; rye very good but very little reported; peas, very "buggy" all through the western counties—some say "more bugs than peas," quality therefore not so good as was expected. The drouth was the principal cause of falling off in crops. Corn suffered severely from the drouth, but after September 1st the recovery was rapid and most marked. On the whole it is somewhat under the average. Buckwheat is not quite up to that of 1893, but is fair. Hops are reported to be under the average. Flax, on the whole, a good crop; rape only fair; sorghum not so extensively grown as formerly.

CLOVER.—Red clover suffered much from winter killing. The drouth affected it as much as most other crops, causing a short crop. Owing to lack of fodder much red clover was pastured that would otherwise have been allowed to form seed. The crop of clover seed, as a consequence, is short this year in all parts. The midge was reported destructive by very few correspondents. Alsike has turned out much better, it may be set down as being very good.

NEW FALL WHEAT.—As to acreage very few report an increase; most correspondents give a decrease from 5 to 50 per cent. At the time of reporting the general statement was that it was never in better condition. Little or no injury of any kind was reported. The varieties are too numerous to be referred to here.

POTATOES.—The yield of potatoes will be considerably below the average, chiefly owing to the drouth, although many correspondents in the counties east of Peel and along the St. Lawrence speak of a good return. As a rule the tubers are small in size, but frequent references are made to their "mealy" quality, and there is comparatively little rot.

ROOTS.—Turnips have suffered from various causes. Early in the season the drouth was trying to the crop, and in many counties, but more especially in Huron, Grey and Perth, much injury was done by grasshoppers. With the fall rains the crop revived to an encouraging extent and generally speaking, it has been an off year for this class of roots. Mangels did not suffer so much from drouth as turnips, and made a good deal of late growth. Carrots were set back by the drouth, but revived considerably with timely rains in September. Where well cultivated the crop will be much better than was expected in August.

FALL PLOWING.—In Essex and Kent comparatively little plowing has been done as correspondents wrote, corn and fruit demanding the more immediate attention of farmers. Judging by the remarks of several correspondents there will be more land left in pasture for dairy purposes than in former years.

FRUIT.—The supply of marketable apples is not as large as that of the average year, except in some of the Bay of Quinte and St. Lawrence counties, although there is more than enough for home supply in most sections. Pears, although not free from blight in a few local sections, have yielded well, and the peach crop has also been large and on the whole satisfactory. Where the curculio was destroyed or prevented plums gave good returns, but the ravages of the black knot amongst both plum and cherry trees is referred to by correspondents in tones of regret. References to grapes are less than usual, but vineyards appear to be in good condition, and so also are fruit trees except in the cases cited above.

BEES AND HONEY.—The surplus honey has been chiefly from alsike and basswood. A case or two of foul brood was reported in the West Midland group. On the whole bees appear to be in healthy condition, but in many instances feeding back may be necessary.

POULTRY.—The keeping of poultry on the farm is regarded by correspondents from a variety of standpoints. Some claim that there is more loss than profit in fowl as ordinarily kept. Others hold that the destruction of insects by fowl is of great benefit to agriculture, and that they can be fed largely upon scraps and poor grain that otherwise would be wasted. It is also pointed out that the product of the hennery pays the grocery bill. With the exception of a few odd cases of cholera and roup but little disease was reported among fowl.

PASTURES AND LIVE STOCK.—The long drouth of summer left pastures in a rather bare condition, but fall rains revived them to a wonderful extent. The supply of cattle was greater than the demand, and although few fat stock were offering they were in good general condition. Sheep also were in a healthy and vigorous state, but the demand for lambs was light, except at such low prices that few holders cared to sell. No mention was made of disease among live stock, and but for low markets the season would be counted a successful one. There will be plenty of fodder, although straw is rather short.

THE DAIRY—This branch of agriculture is more than holding its own. While there was a great falling off in the milk flow in several counties in Western Ontario owing to the midsummer drouth, the returns from that half of the province are still encouraging, while the reports from the dairy counties along the St. Lawrence are even more satisfactory. A most decided improvement is reported in the quality of butter, and most of that product has been disposed of at a paying price. Correspondents in all the districts refer favorably to the visits of the traveling dairy to their respective sections.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, acting through the blood, reaches every part of the system, and in this way positively cures catarrh.

FOOTBALL.

The Knox College Association Football team, of Toronto, one of the best aggregations in the Queen city, play the provincially known Norwood team, on Saturday next, at Norwood. On the evening previous the Knox College Glee club will give a concert in the village. Mr. Frank Roxburgh, son of Mr. W. E. Roxburgh, Norwood, is the captain of the team.

A big crowd is expected down at the Driving Park, on Thanksgiving afternoon, to witness the Rugby football game between that crack organization, of Toronto, known as the Lornes, and the local team. The home boys have been practising hard and are all in splendid trim to put up a fast game, so the match will, without doubt, be a good one.

THE TRIGGER.

The Gun club holds a shoot on Thanksgiving afternoon.

There will probably be a large gathering of crack shots at the Curtis Brickyards, on Thanksgiving, as a shoot for geese and turkeys will be held.

A little flurry of snow, to-morrow, will put everything in good shape for rabbit hunting, on Thansgiving. Quite a few will go out if the weather is propitious.

CURLIANA.

The Port Hope Curling Club has met and organized for the season.

The officers for the current year are:
President—Capt. W. J. Colwill.
Vice-President—E. Brown.
Sec.-Treas.—Stanley Paterson, jr.
Chaplain—Rev. J. Cleland.
Auditors—W. J. Renwick and W. D. Stephens.

A MILLBROOK BANK BURGLARIZED LAST NIGHT.

Messrs. Wood & Kells Establishment Broken Into and Robbed.

Millbrook is in a state of great excitement, this morning, by reason of a bank burglary, which occurred there sometime last night.

This morning, at nine o'clock, when the private bank of Messrs, Wood & Kells was opened up in the village for the day's business, it was found that some one had been there earlier than the officials, as the rear door had been forced open and the bank burglarized.

The work bore every indication of having been PERFORMED BY EXPERTS.

The door of the vault was drilled and blown open, as was the door of the safe inside. The latter presented a most wrecked appearance, this morning, the whole interior being shattered by the force of the concussion, when the explosion occurred.

The tools with which the drilling was executed, were evidently secured from the Grand Trunk station, as a kit was missing from there this morning. A large sledge hammer was also taken from the blacksmith shop of Mr. W. D. Nugent, which was forced open during the night.

The members of the banking firm announce that the burglars were only successful in securing fifteen dollars, as the result of their night's work, though nearly every drawer or receptacle in which money could be kept, and the contents turned out on the floor in the mad search for gold.

The burglary is thought to have been committed between midnight and day light, as at the former hour the Foresters were wending their way home from a lodge meeting. A curious crowd hung around the premises all day speculating regarding the identity of the miscreants. It is the general belief that the burglary was the work of a portion of the Streetsville gang, which was broken up by the Toronto detective force not along ago. The drilling, etc., could have been performed by none other than an expert. No clue whatever is in the hands of the local constables.

Conservative Victory in Forfarshire.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—An election took place in Forfarshire, Scotland, on Saturday last for a member of parliament to succeed Sir John Rigby, formerly Solicitor-General and later Attorney-General, recently appointed Lord of Appeal. The Conservatives have won a victory and gained a seat, Ramsey, Conservative, having 5,145 votes, against 4,859 for Robson, Liberal. The Liberal majority last time was nearly 900.

A Blizzard in New York State.

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Nov. 20.—A blizzard prevails throughout northern New York. The mercury here registers 10 below zero while the wind is blowing almost a gale filling the air with light snow that has recently fallen.

Girl Cricketers.

Philadelphia girls play cricket, and play it well, too. Just at present the Tioga C. C. of that city has an eleven of sturdy, sun-browned maids hard at work practising for a game with the masculine eleven, in which the latter are to be handicapped by being restricted to left hand batting and single stump bowling. The girls, who are confident of victory, even wear leg pads—underneath their skirts.

Our 60 Day's Sale

A Pronounced Success

Nothing succeeds like success, and nothing succeeds thats lack the element of Real Worth. If a thing have worth in it and if it supplies a need, it will make its way.

It is because our 60 Days' Sale possesses this element that it to-day enjoys such extensive patronage and popularity.

During November

Up to the present date, sales have been the largest we have ever had; and if this is to be the index, this Clearance Sale of the lines we have advertised, will be ranked as the most remarkable of our record.

Thanksgiving Week

Prices will continue every day much below even Clearance Prices and your experience every day will prove that our VALUES are THE BEST in the trade—that you get more for your money here—that "the Ribbon is Ours."

"It's Fair's Way." We're all enthusiasm—

Now for the Proof

FOR INSTANCE—

TAKE MANTLES!—There is no dormant energy in this department. Fair's is the people's Mantle House—

—200 High-Class German Tailor-Made Mantles, ranging in price from $8 $15 each, can be purchased now for $3.50, $5 and $8 each.

—200 yards Tweed Ulsterings, reduced from $1.50 to 75c.

TAKE SEALETTES!—30 per cent. reduction on Lister's celebrated Sealettes ought to convince skeptical readers that we have reduced in earnest. Here are the figures to prove it:—

$13 00 per yard Sealette for $9 00
11 00 per yard Sealette for 8 00
8 50 per yard Sealette for 6 00
6 50 per yard Sealette for 4 50
5 00 per yard Sealette for 3 00

TAKE FLANNELS!—Surely these are things you need. What are the facts:—

—40 pieces All Wool Grey Flannels, worth 20 and 25c., sale price 15c per yard.

—30 piece Flannelettes, worth 8c., for 5c. per yard.

TAKE UNDERWEAR!—Ther will be urgent need of heavier Underwear from this on. We have all the wanted kinds for men and women, but the whole secret lies in selling first-class quality at a second rate price. Look here for value:—

—Men's Knights of Labour All Wool Shirts and Drawers, worth 85c., sale price 65c.

—10 dozen Men's Natural Wool Shirts and Pants, worth $2.00, the garments clearing at $1.25 each.

—20 dozen Ladies' Undervests, worth $1.10 each, sale price 85c.

—15 doz. All Wool Vests, former price 75c., sale price 65c.

TAKE DRESS GOODS!—We want to "shame" the other fellows out who are crying Bargains under the ordinary conditions:—

—50 pieces Black and Coloured High-class Dress Goods, imported to sell at 75c. to $1.25 per yard, your choice for 50c.

—500 yards 54-inch Dress Tweed Suitings, worth $1.00, sale price 50 to 60c. per yard.

—300 yards All Wool Black and Coloured Dress Goods, worth 50 to 60c., sale price 35c.

—500 yards Double-Fold Costume Cloths, your choice for 25c. per yard.

—$1.00 B & C Corsets really selling at 65c., and Fair's Half dollar Corsets at 35c.

And so on all over the store. If you are paying "regular" prices elsewhere, you are not doing yourself justice, that's all.

The Use of Glasses.

Speaking from over twenty years' experience, I can sum up in a few words some of the results of indiscrimate use of glasses. In the case of odd eyes—gradual weakening of the good eye and making it much more susceptible to disease, such as glaucoma, iritis, etc. In cases of astigmatism unsuitable glasses will cause neuralgic pains in the eyes, frontal headache, nausea, paralysis of the accommodation, resulting in permanently impaired vision which no skill can restore. The time will come, and I hope soon, when sight-testing opticians will be placed on the same footing as dentists and chemists, and have to pass an examination before being allowed to practice. Very truly,

TURNBULL'S

MANTLES.

Our Mantle trade this season has so far exceeded our expectations that it has cleared out several lines and left room for new ones, which we have secured at from $3.00 to $3.50, less than original prices on the better lines. Our customers will reap the benefit of this reduction in the wholesale cost. A full range of all styles and prices now in stock at prices that are never undersold.

BLANKETS.

We have run across a line of All Wool Blankets, in large sizes, woven similar to a Sheeting but combed; they are very desirable and are selling at $3.00 a pair. We have also a splendid assortment of Light and Dark Gray Blankets in all sizes.

UNDERWEAR.

As the season advances we sometimes run across what dry goods men call snaps. We have secured one of these now in Men's All Wool Underclothing, in both natural and flesh colours, at $1.00 a suit. The best line ever offered for the money. Plenty of lower qualities always in stock.

SKIRTINGS.

We are introducing a line of heavy Blanket Skirtings, one of the most desirable materials we have found yet in Ladies' wear. They are 40 inches wide and only 35c a yard.

CAPS AND MUFFS.

Just received a splendid assortment of Astrachan and Gray Lamb Caps, in both wedge and band shapes. Also Sealette Caps and Muffs.

Our prices for Scotch Tweed Suits made to order are a surprise to everybody. We have just passed into stock several nobby lines in Serges and Suitings. A perfect fit guaranteed every time.

Our Motto is to Undersell and Never be Undersold, and to always keep Our Stock Well Assorted.

AN OUTRAGE AVENGED

Salvador Franch, the Barcelona Anarchist, Executed.

THE DEED FOR WHICH HE DIED

He Was the Principal in the Terrible Outrage at the Lyceum Theatre at Barcelona, by Which Fifteen Were Killed and Many Badly Hurt.

BARCELONA, Nov. 21.—Salvador Franch, the chief conspirator in the Lyceum theatre outrage, was executed this morning.

The crime for which Salvador Franch suffered death was committed on the night of November 7, 1893, in the magnificent Lyceum theatre, in Barcelona, one of the largest edifices of the kind in Europe. On that night 4,000 persons had assembled to hear the opera "William Tell." At the height of the performances two bombs were thrown to the ground floor from one of the upper galleries. Only one of the bombs exploded. The effect of the explosion was awful, fifteen persons being killed instantly and fifteen others injured so badly that they died in the course of the night and following day. Besides these about 80 persons were hurt, some very severely.

During the next few weeks many anarchists were arrested charged with being connected with the outrage. The principal culprit, Salvador Franch, alias Santiago Salvador, was traced to the city of Saragossa, and was arrested there on January 1. Franch came of a respectable family, but his personal antecedents were bad. He was born in Castelseras, Province of Teruel, Spain, about 32 years ago. At the age of 14 he left his home and went to Barcelona, where he had since lived, doing no settled work and giving himself up to the plots and revolutionary designs of the anarchists, with whom he assumed a leading position. He was a tall, heavily built man, with a fair complexion. His wife and young child live in a village near Barcelona.

Immediately after his arrest Franch made two attempts to kill himself and succeeded in wounding himself with a revolver. During his examination he declared that he alone made and threw the bombs and that he deeply regretted that so few people had been killed by the explosion in the theatre. When he recovered from his self-inflicted wounds he was removed from the Saragossa to Barcelonla for trial. The indictment against him named twenty-four accomplices. The trial of Franch was begun and finished on July 11th and he was declared guilty and sentenced to death. He heard his sentence without displaying the slightest trace of emotion.

Some weeks ago Franch's disposition seemed to change for the better, and he accepted the religious minister which he had at first rejected. The change was affected, it was said, through a perusal of the works of the learned priest and writer, Balemes. In prison he learned the monks of St. Francis and put on the habit of the order. In a statement concerning his conversion to Christianity he said: "To-day, thanks to Balemes, I know the truth and am no longer an anarchist. I now deplore with all my soul the deeds I have done. Had not divine grace touched me I should have gone to the scaffold more calmly, believing I was thus serving humanity. I now mean to die a believing Christian, with true contrition and repentance in proportion to the enormity of the crime I committed."

This penitent mood continued as long as his appeal to a higher court was pending. As soon as he heard that the court had decided against him he cursed God and man with all his old time anarchistic fervor. Later he feigned insanity and he accused the prison chaplain of trying to poison him.

THE FORFARSHIRE DEFEAT.

It is Principally Traceable to the Embargo on Canadian Cattle.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The objectionable embargo on Canadian cattle is now a factor in British politics. The Liberal journals admit that it is one of the causes for the ministerial defeat in Forfarshire Scotland, on Saturday. Sir Charles Tupper's speech to the deputation of Forfarshire and Perthshire farmers on Wednesday last at Dundee, when he strongly denounced the action of the British government in this matter, evidently had great weight with the electorate. The Chronicle, in referring to the defeat, says that Right Hon. Herbert Gardiner, president of the Board of Agriculture, is following the protection policy of the Right Hon Henry Chaplin, of the Salisbury ministry "This election," the Chronicle concludes "may compel Mr. Gardiner to re-open the cattle question." It may also be added that the result of the election will not, in view of the comments and gossip in the connection tend to make Sir Charles Tupper's popularity with the British Government any greater.

Armenian Massacres Confirmed.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 21.—The government has received despatches from Erzerum confirming the reports of the massacre of Armenians. The Turkish soldier killed many Kurds who refused to help them kill Christians.

HOBBS WINS IN LONDON

The Liberal Candidate Succeeds in Capturing the City.

EIGHT HUNDRED HIS MAJORITY

The Result Naturally a Surprise to Both Parties—The Vote by Wards—Comparison With the Vote Polled in the Election in June.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 21.—After a short and sharp campaign the Liberal party have won the city of London by the largest majority ever rolled up by any candidate in this city. Although the Liberals confidently looked forward to a victory they were completely surprised at the majority as the opinion on all sides was that the majority either way would be narrow.

When the returns began to be received showing the majorities for Hobbs the excitement became intense, and the jubilant Liberals expressed their satisfaction by making the city ring with their cheering, intermingled with horns and anything that would swell the noise. A large procession was formed, which finally brought up at the opera house, where speeches were delivered by the prominent members of the party.

Following are the detailed and correct figures of the election by wards:

	Hobbs.	Emery
Ward 1	606	431
Ward 2	586	496
Ward 3	790	592
Ward 4	733	595
Ward 5	655	563
Ward 6	477	340
	3,817	3,017

Majority for Hobbs, 800.

In the contest between Meredith and Hobbs last June there were 7,540 persons entitled to vote, and of that number 6,409 turned out. They have had registration here since, and now the total vote is 7,940, an increase of 430. The vote by wards was as follows in June:

	Meredith.	Hobbs.
Ward 1	461	453
Ward 2	540	475
Ward 3	621	609
Ward 4	657	610
Ward 5	631	561
Ward 6	363	428
	3,273	3,136

Majority for Meredith, 137.

MARITIME LUMBERMEN.

Matters Touching Their Interests Discussed at a Conference.

MONCTON, N.B., Nov. 21.—The interprovincial lumbermen's conference, held here yesterday, was attended by about 50 lumbermen, among whom were G. R. Prescott, Shulle, Cumberland; Geo. Fullerton, Pictou. D. J. McLaughlin, St. John, presided and J. G. Forbes, St. John, was secretary. The secretary explained that the objects of the meeting dealt with the sawdust question. He suggested that a private member next session introduce a bill at Ottawa embodying the views of the lumbermen. Several lumbermen presented statistics showing that codfish on rivers where sawdust was thrown in had decreased.

After further discussion it was resolved that in view of the great importance of the lumber interests of the maritime provinces, this meeting respectfully petition the Dominion Parliament, asking such remedial legislation as would empower the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to exempt from the operation of the recent Act of Parliament mills which it can be shown do not seemingly affect fishery or private interests or impede navigation.

The chairman announced that there are a number of lumbermen interested in the railway traffic for lumber which was increased unbearably. It was resolved that a committee be appointed to wait on the proper authorities and direct their attention to the present high tariff on the Intercolonial and ask from them such modifications as would be equitable.

An association, to be known as the Lumbermen's Association of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, was formed.

Mysterious Shooting at Mono Mills.

MONO MILLS, Nov. 21.—A mysterious shooting affair has taken place here. John Harkiss went to Orangeville, where his wife was staying, to bring her home. They returned some time in the night. Mrs. Harkiss entered the house while her husband went to put his horse away. When he returned to the house he found the door fastened. Forcing in a panel, he inserted his arm and endeavored to unfasten the door, when he was shot in the arm by someone in the house. The occupants of the house at the time were, besides Mrs. Harkiss, Harkiss' father and his mother-in-law. The constables are investigating.

The Fast Line.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—In the Times is a letter from the Allans' manager at Glasgow commenting upon the article in the New York Journal of Commerce, in which William Smith, Canadian Deputy Minister of Marine, denied that he disputes the accuracy of the view of Capt. Wakeham. The Allans say that the dissemination of the views attributed to these officials, differing as they do from those adopted by their parliamentary chief, could not but be distasteful at headquarters. No one should be surprised at what has followed.

No Trace of Kerngood.

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Nov. 21.—From Syracuse to St. Thomas the railway has been searched and no trace has been found of the missing traveller, J. S. Kerngood. His brother thinks it hardly possible he has committed suicide and there seems to be no probable theory on which to base his disappearance. Another search of the ditches, culverts and watercourses along the track is proposed.

Instantly Killed by a Train.

OTTAWA, Nov. 21.—William Chugg, a laborer on the Ottaw and Parry Sound Railway, employed on a construction train near Egan, fell from the train and was run over and almost cut to pieces. Death was instantaneous. Chugg was unmarried and the sole support of his mother.

FATAL MINE EXPLOSION

A Bad Accident the Work of an Inexperienced Hand.

SEVEN MINERS WERE KILLED

Two of the Victims Blown a Hundred Yards From the Mouth of the Mine—The Second Fatality From a Similar Cause at This Mine.

STEUBENVILLE, O., Nov. 21.—By an explosion of coal dust yesterday in the Blanche coal mines, seven miles east of Steubenville on the Panhandle railroad, seven men were killed and four badly injured.

Those killed were Michael Roney, Thomas Jordan, Thomas Tucker, David Rowlands, John Donnelly, Antonio Sattie, Maxzie Gessideo. The injured are Jose Rifle, Raphael Neckie, Jasper Lawrence and Thomas Morris.

The disaster occurred in No. 9 entry, 1,000 yards from the mouth and was caused by a new Italian hand firing an overcharged blast which ignited the coal dust. There were 48 men in the mine at the time. Donnelly and Roney were going toward the entrance. The force of the explosion blew them nearly 100 yeards out of the mouth of the mine and landed Roney on the track killing him while Donnelly landed in a gulley, striking his head against a post and spilling his brains all over it. His wife was the first to find him, and she may die of the shock.

Hundreds crowded about the mouth of the mine, where some tragic and sorrowful scenes were enacted. A rescue party, consisting of George Benbow, Nick Kemis, Arthur Ward, John Muter, John Stewart and William Davis went in after the bodies and brought them out. The sight of the dead men caused several women to swoon. Prosecuting Attorney Cotton and Coroner Wilkinshow of Wellsburg arrived shortly after the accident and took charge of the bodies. They will conduct a rigid investigation as this is the second accident of this kind that has occurred at this mine. The other happened November 21, 1892, when three men were killed and seven burned and injured.

The mine is owned by W. E. Smith of Wellsville and L. C. Smith of New Cumberland. The miners blame the accident on the inexperienced Italians, and declare they will not work with them any more.

Prohibition in Maine.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 21.—A despatch from Bangor, Me., says: "Considerable amusement was created here and much surprise by the report made to the convention of W. C. T. U. in Cleveland by Mrs. Bullock, of Elmira, N. Y., that the W. C. T. U. is more feared in Maine than Pinkerton detectives, and that she saw only one drunken man in this State in three months and that one was in Bangor. This statement is not borne out by the facts. In Bangor with about 200 saloons running wide open in spite of prohibition law, intoxicated men are not infrequent. In this city and vicinity the W.C.T.U. cuts no figure whatever in regard to the enforcement of law and is not feared by rum sellers. Public sentiment does not appear to be behind the prohibitory law in this city.

Indignant at Col. Ingersoll.

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 21.—Col. Ingersoll lectured here on Saturday night, and was more than usually sarcastic in comments on the Bible. A meeting of ministers concerned has been held and speeches denouncing the authorities for permitting the lecture was made. A resolution was offered that the ministers take immediate steps to secure Ingersoll's arrest on the charge of blasphemy. There was some opposition to this, and after exciting discussion the meeting adjourned without action.

Typhoid Traceable to Oysters.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 20.—There are now being treated in this city 42 cases of typhoid fever. Many of the people who are ill attended a society dinner at which raw oysters were served, and it is believed the unusually large number of cases are traceable to these oysters, which are thought to have been fattened in water through which sewerage flows.

A Woman's Fatal Jump.

SYRACUSE, Nov. 21.—Mrs. William Francis, who with her husband is held at the police station here on a charge of swindling, jumped from the window of the women's detention room, on the third floor of the police building, to the street below, a distance of 40 or 50 feet. Her back was broken and she will probably die.

Funeral of Ex-President McCosh.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 21.—The funeral of ex-President James McCosh of Princeton university was held yesterday in Marquand chapel. The interment took place at Princeton cemetery in a lot adjacent to the graves of Jonathan Edwards, John Witherspoon, John McLean and the former presidents of Princeton.

Mr. Blake's Proposed Retirement.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—In his recent speech at Longford Hon. Edward Blake did not say that he meant to retire at the dissolution of the present parliament, as some of the papers here suggest. He spoke of his exile from those he loved in Canada, and said he would certainly go through the present parliament, but if re-nominated he could not undertake to remain through the whole of the next parliament or attend very constantly. His reception was a most hearty one and the honorable gentleman was assured of continued support. It is an open secret, however, that dissension in the party and covert attacks upon his actions have, at times, made Mr. Blake desire a release from the British parliament.

The Health of the Queen.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Labouchere's Truth says in a paragraph concerning the Queen's health: "Her Majesty has aged very much during the autumn, and walks only a few steps owing to recurring rheumatism in the knees." Truth also confirms the report of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg Gotha's illness. He is said to be suffering from neuralgia, eczema and internal troubles.

Daily Examiner.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1894.

NOT IN THE INTERESTS OF BUSINESS OR THE TOWN.

[Last spring certain conditions suggested to the EXAMINER the advisability of writing a few remarks as to the evil of careless speculations respecting the standing of business men. Similar conditions seem to exist now, and therefore the remarks then made may be repeated]:—

The credit of business men is a very sensitive thing, and too much care cannot be exercised to avoid speculative and gossipy discussion of the position of merchants and other business men. The recent retirement from active business of a certain establishment, has been a fruitful source of rumour. Many persons are in the habit of forming groups and discussing the standing of local business men with a freedom of surmise which is characterized by a large ignorance of the financial standing or business conditions of the persons whose concerns and prospects are handled without gloves; predictions and guesses as to speedy "trouble" are freely hazarded. When such a group separates, these, almost invariably purely speculative surmises, by a process which all are familiar with, whispered here and suggested there, soon become certainties in the mouth of rumour. In consequence, men of undoubted stability begin to be quoted as "shaky;" a feeling of unrest and uncertainty is engendered; possibly the conditions of credit are thereby rendered more difficult, or demands are made prematurely, which, in the regular order of events, could and would have been successfully met. During the past week gossip and rumour have been particularly busy in the direction referred to; gossip has developed into rumour and rumour into positive statement, which, in many cases, is absolutely without foundation. No citizen, especially a business man, who has the interests of the town at heart, will, if he pauses to reflect, be a party to the circulation or discussion of such rumours. If he is not restrained by a consideration of the evil tendency of such a practice, he should set before himself a copy of Burne-Jones' powerful painting, the "Wheel of Fortune," which depicts one man rising and another falling, and think, that in a world of changes, where trade is often coy or elusive, and "riches take wings," he may too soon be glad to have gossip refrain from meddling in his affairs and to receive that consideration in the matter of his stability or credit which he, unthinkingly, it is to be hoped, fails to accord to others. A thoughtless suggestion whispered into the wide ear of rumour, may blast a woman's name, and a doubt cast upon a business man's credit may have equally unfortunate results.

THE BABCOCK TEST TESTED.

The Babcock milk test, though its advocates and opponents are wide apart as to its merits, seems destined to be a factor in the practical estimate of the fat bearing qualities of milk. There are points in favour of its employment and points against its use, differences which will doubtless require considerable practical test to settle. Without taking either one side or the other, we may refer to a test of the Babcock test made at Springfield, Ont., the other day on the occasion of the visit of the Travelling Dairy. Two samples of whole milk were produced, and these, with a sample of buttermilk from the cream churned that day, were tested. The tests were respectively: For the whole milk 4.7 and 5.0 per cent. of fat respectively, and for the buttermilk one-fifth of 1 per cent. It was subsequently discovered that the two samples of milk were from the same cow, but to the one had been added a little water to see if the Babcock Milk Tester was really to be relied upon. It was remarked that this little episode had very forcibly impressed the farmers present with the reliability and accuracy of the test.

Payment of British Commoners.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Many members of the London Trades Council, among them the most conspicuous labor commoners, called as a deputation yesterday upon Lord Rosebery to urge the expediency of paying members of parliament. The Premier promised to consider the question when he should frame the programme of the next session. John Burns said he did not approve of paying such large amounts as were received by American congressmen, and Lord Rosebery indirectly acquiesced by expressing the opinion that high salaries would lead to corruption.

Insurance Men at Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Nov. 21.—The National Fraternal Congress began its eighth annual session here yesterday with about 300 delegates representing nearly every fraternal insurance association in the country, over 50 in number, having a membership of 2,000,000, with an aggregate of benefit funds or insurance in force of about $2,400,000,000. Dr. John S. King, of Toronto, president of the Canadian Fraternal Congress, was the guest of honor at the afternoon session. Dr. Oronhyatekha, of Toronto, is a member of the committee on legislation of the organization.

Woman-hood

has its own special medicine in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. And every woman who is "run-down" or over-worked, every woman who suffers from any "female complaint" or weakness, needs just that remedy. With it, every disturbance, irregularity and derangement can be permanently cured.

It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and strengthening nervine, and the only medicine for women so safe and sure that it can be guaranteed. In periodical pains, displacements, weak back, bearing-down sensations, and every kindred ailment, if it fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back. Is anything that isn't sold in this way likely to be "just as good?"

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation, liver-ills, indigestion, dyspepsia, piles and headaches.

For Healthy Lungs.

Milburn's Cod Liver Oil Emulsion with Wild Cherry and Hypophosphites combines the curative powers of the pectoral remedies mentioned in the most perfect and palatable form. Price 50c. and $1.00 per bottle.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Mr. R. C. Heard, who has been employed in Mount Pleasant foundry, for the past two years as blacksmith, left on Monday, of last week, for his home in Bridgenorth, where he has secured another situation. Mr. Heard will be greatly missed in the I. O. G. T.

Geo. Seney and John Boyd returned on Thursday, from the back country, bringing three fine deer with them.

Mr. J. D. Denny has resigned his position of teacher in our school. He will be greatly missed by the members of the C. O. F., of this place. J. D. intends attending school in Peterborough, for the next six months. We wish him every success.

Mr. Stacey, of Franklin, has been engaged as teacher in our school for next year.

Mr. Casey, who has been engaged in Mount Pleasant cheese factory, for the past season, left on Saturday, for his home in Mitchell. We expect to see Sam. back again next year.

Rev. Wm. McKay, of Knox College, Toronto, occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church, Sunday morning.

A. P. McLean was home on Sunday.

The Mount Pleasant baseball team expect to hold a concert some time next month.

The fowl supper held on the 16th inst. under the auspices of the Presbyterian church, was well attended. We noticed several from Peterborough, Millbrook and Omemee. Supper was served from 5 to 8, after which the chair was taken by Rev. Jno. Ewing, of this place, and a very lengthy programme gone through, consisting of:

Opening hymn	by choir of church
Prayer	Rev. Mr. Johnston, Millbrook
Chairman's address	Rev. Jno. Ewing
Solo	Prof. G. W. Mulligan, Peterborough
Address	Rev. N. Hill, Omemee
Solo	Rev. D. N. McCamus, Millbrook
Address	Rev. Mr. Yeoman, Toronto
Quartette	by choir
Solo	Mrs. (Dr.) Mark
Address	Rev. D. N. McCamus
Solo	Prof. Mulligan
Address	Rev. Mr. Johnston, Millbrook
Solo	Prof. Mulligan

The night being so far spent the meeting was closed by Rev. Mr. Johnston pronouncing the benedicti.

There being so much fowl, etc., not being consumed that evening, the committee decided to hold a ten cent social in the hall Wednesday evening. Proceeds amounted to $40.

Mr. H. Folliott spent a few days in Lindsay last week.

We noticed Mr. Lane, editor of the Omemee Mirror, at the fowl supper here on the 16th.

Kossuth Offends the Hungarian Press.

BUDA PEST, Nov. 21.—The Hungarian ministry will be questioned to-day as to the bands playing a seditious melody at the banquet to Francis Kossuth in Debreczin. The majority of the guests, including Kossuth, were annoyed by the incident. Nevertheless Kossuth, on the same occasion, addressed a telegram of greeting to King Humbert of Italy. The press demands that the government stop the Kossuth rumpus.

Negro Laborers Killed by Whites.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 21.—The white laborers employed at Williams' lumber camp in Escambia county objected to the presence of 50 negroes who had just been brought in and fired into a party of them, killing three. The remainder of the negroes fled from the camp.

Worked the Tin Box Game.

CHILLICOTHE, Ohio, 21.—William A. Jones, the wealthiest farmer in this county, was buncoed out of $7,000 by two strangers who worked the tin box game on him. The box contained a letter to Mr. Jones advising him to be a little shrewder when next he bet.

Fashionable Residences Destroyed.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—The Knox and Dupont apartment building, on 44th street and Greenwood avenue, Kenwood, the fashionable residence portion of the south division, were destroyed by fire yesterday.

To destroy worms and expel them from children or adults use Dr. Low's Worm Syrup.

UNION MEETING.

All the Young Peoples Societies of C. E. belonging to the town local Union, will meet together in George street S. S. room, next Monday, Nov. 26th, at 8 p. m.

The following persons are invited:—All the voters and young men of Peterborough to hear Rev. J. J. Rae speak on "Good Citizenship." All Christian Endeavourers to hear Rev. Dr. Torrance's address on "Missions and systematic giving," and Miss Kennedy's talk on "Responsibility of the senior C. E. to the juniors."

All parents and S. S. teachers to hear Rev. A. McWilliams speak on "relation of the Junior C. E. to the Sunday School."

The fact is everyone is invited to hear the short, pithy and pointed addresses, to help make the singing good and take part in the collection

COLDSPRINGS.

This society intend holding an open meeting, on Friday night, of this week. It is expected that a bus load will go down from town to help in the meeting. If you want to go you can be accommodated with a seat, if you are at the Y. M. C. A. rooms that evening. Good speakers will lead the meeting and a good time is expected.

HOW TO USE THE BIBLE.

1. Have for constant use a small portable Bible, with complete marginal references.

2. Carry a Bible or Testament with you.

3. Mark freely with ink upon it:

Promises such as Isa. xli., 13, to Christians: and invitations to unconverted, Rev. iii., 20, and xxii., 17.

Brief notes may be written upon the margin.

4. Do not be satisfied with simply reading a chapter thrice daily, but study out the full meaning of at least one verse a day.

5. Study to know the whole truth contained in a single incident or a single miracle—when and why written, how it applied to self, and how to use it for others.

6. Study to know what for and to whom each book of the Bible was written.

7. Believe every word of the Bible.

8. Learn one verse of Scripture each day. Verses from memory will be wonderfully useful in your work for the impenitent.

9. Study how to use the Bible to lead a soul to Christ.

10. Set apart fifteen minutes each day for studying it; this will be grand in result.

11. Read the book as if it were written for yourself only.

12. Always ask God to help you understand it and then expect He will.

The local junior societies will hold a rally in the Y.M.C.A. rooms on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 1st, at three o'clock. An excellent programme is being prepared and it is expected that this rally will outdo all previous gatherings. The different societies will present the plan of work they propose taking up during the winter. All those interested in the junior work should attend. The parents of the children will be made welcome.

The next number of the Endeavour Herald will be devoted to the junior work. It will be illustrated; cuts of the most prominent junior workers of the province will appear, also cuts of the juniors who took part in the junior rally at Kingston.

The juniors of St. Paul's church had a business meeting Monday night. Officers were elected for the ensuing term, and different plans of work discussed. Miss Quinn is superintendent of this society.

On Monday evening, Nov. 12th, St. Andrew's Junior Society held a special missionary meeting, and a very interesting meeting it was too. The members supplied the programme. This society has a patch work quilt and by the payment of ten cents you can have your name placed upon one of the patches. The money raised in this way is devoted solely to missions.

A junior society has been organized at Charlotte street church. Miss Kennedy is superintendent of this society.

St. Paul's society will hold their monthly consecration meeting, on Sunday night next, immediately after church. This plan was adopted to allow the members to attend the rally to be held in George street church Sunday school room, on Monday night next.

The Lookout Committee of this society will meet every Wednesday evening, at 7.40, for prayer.

The young men of this society propose holding a social, at an early date, the entire programme to be supplied by the male sex.

At the last meeting of the local executive, convenors were appointed to call the different committees—convenors of societies represented in the Union together for the purpose of comparing the different plans adopted by each society in conducting the different portions of the work. The conveners should see that they all meet before the next meeting of the Executive, so they can report as to whether these conferences were helpful.

HOW TO TREAT A BAD TEMPER.

Starve it. Give it nothing to feed on. When something tempts you to grow angry do not yield to the temptation. It may for a minute or two be difficult to control yourself, but try it. Force yourself to do nothing, to say nothing, and the rising temper will be forced to go down because it has nothing to hold it up. The person who can and does control the tongue in the face of great provocation is a hero. The world may not own him or her as such, but God does. The Bible says that he that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city.

What is gained by yielding to temper? For a moment there is a feeling of relief; but soon comes a sense of sorrow and shame, with a wish that the temper had been controlled. Friends are separated by a bad temper, trouble is caused by it, and pain is given to others as well as to self. That pain, too, often lasts for days, even years, sometimes for life. An outburst of temper is like the bursting of a steam boiler—it is impossible to tell before hand what will be the result. The evil done may never be remedied. Starve your temper. It is not worth while keeping alive. Let it die.—Canadian Forester.

ENDORSES DR. ROSE.

A Quebec Physician Who Corroborates Dr. Rose's Opinion.

PORTLAND, Nov. 21.—The letter of Dr. A. G. McCormick, of Richmond, Que., testifying to his complete and permanent cure from Bright's disease by Dodd's Kidney Pills, has been read with much interest here, supporting as it does the recent letter of Dr. E. A. Rose, of this place, who was cured of diabetes by the use of these pills. Of course no further corroboration of the curative qualities of Dodd's Kidney Pills was required other than the testimony of Dr. Rose, but it is a satisfaction to know that other medical men are able to join the Dr. in testifying to the worth of the pills from personal trial.

A Hamilton Trolley Accident.

HAMILTON, Nov. 21.—J. Bidwell Mills, Superintendent of the Insane Asylum, was injured by collision of his buggy with a trolley car at the corner of Bay and King streets. The doctor was cut badly about the head and otherwise bruised, while the buggy was wrecked.

Brakesman Killed at Gravenhurst.

GRAVENHURST, Ont., Nov. 21.—While shunting here a brakesman named Chas. Beatty, of Allandale, in the employ of the Grand Trunk railway, was run over and instantly killed, his head being completely severed from the body.

STORMS IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

The Worst Gales in Many Years Raging Throughout the Island.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Nov. 21.—A fierce gale, the worst experienced here in many years, is now raging throughout Newfoundland. Reports from all sections of the island announce its intensity. The steamer Brenton from Montreal passed Cape Race two hours before the storm broke. It was only six hours run from here, and the steamship has not yet arrived. She was driven to sea and must have suffered severely. The shipping in the harbor also had a rough time. Several vessels broke their moorings and drifted to sea being recovered only with great difficulty by tugs. The overdue Allan line steamer Corean has not yet arrived and must be disabled. If she was near the coast the storm may have resulted disastrously to her.

Fire at Acadia Mine.

WESTVILLE, N.S., Nov. 21.—Smoke was discovered issuing from buildings at the mouth of the Acadia mine last evening and in a few minutes flames burst out in every direction. All the buildings around the pit with the exception of the blacksmith shop were totally destroyed. About fifty men were working in the mine at the time and, the telephone connections not being in order, men had to be sent down the slope to notify the miners, who were about 4,000 feet from the surface. The men all got out of the pit about 9 o'clock in an exhausted condition. Two of the men who went into the pit to assist the miners in their ascent were injured by the cage running away, caused by the fire burning the rope. The origin of the fire is not known, but it is supposed to have caught in the screening house. The loss to property will amount to several thousand dollars.

Disastrous Fire in Midland.

MIDLAND, Nov. 21.—The Bennet and Laurandeau blocks were destroyed by fire here and $25,000 worth of property destroyed. The losses are, W. H. Bennett, M. P., four stores and several offices together with his law library and furniture, N. Laurandeau's two stores, dwelling, boot and shoe stock, Mrs. Arbuckle's dry goods stock, R. J. Temmin's furniture stock, Mechanics' Institute library, Dr. Robins dentist office, D. Hewis' liquor store, damage glass, H. E. Macartney, druggist, damage to stock and building, Misses O'Connor and Murphy, dressmakers. The Laurandeau family were the only residents of the buildings and they saved only what clothes they could put on in a hurry. The buildings will be rebuilt as soon as possible. Cause of the fire is unknown.

Toronto's Boodle Investigation.

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—The civic boodle investigation was re-opened yesterday. At the morning session Otto E. Guelich, of Detroit, was the principal witness. In the afternoon Mr. Nesbitt called the attention of Judge McDougall to a report that had reached him to the effect that some of the witnesses were being threatened if they went into the box they would be arrested. He was not prepared to state names. Judge McDougall replied that any intimidation or subordination of witnesses, if the guilty parties were discovered, would be visited with very severe punishment. City Engineer Keating was examined, and then Ald. Hewitt was called into the witness box. After to-day's session the investigation will be adjourned until Monday.

Trolley Collides With a Fire Engine.

HAMILTON, Nov. 21.—A trolley car on Barton street collided with the chemical engine of the fire department, when the firemen were responding to a call from the north end of the city. Fireman Heath was seriously, but is thought not dangerously, injured. Firemen R. Berryman and R. Aitchison were badly bruised. The chemical engine, which cost $2 500, is a total wreck, and the front of the trolley car was smashed. The horses were uninjured.

"I TELL ALL MY FRIENDS."

A Lady of Shelburne, Ont., Permanently Cured of [illegible]gestion After Using Two Bottles of South American Nervine —Glad to Let Everyone Know It.

MRS. A. V. GALBRAITH.

With indigestion it is not only that one suffers all imaginable torments, physical and mental, but more, perhaps, than anything else, an impaired digestion is the forerunner of countless ailments that in their course lead to the most serious consequences. Let the stomach get out of order and it may be said the whole system is diseased. When the digestive organs fail in their important functional duties, head and heart, mind and body are sick. These were the feelings of Mrs. Galbraith, wife of Mr. A. V. Galbraith, the well-known jeweller of Shelburne, Ont., before she had learned of the beneficent results to be gained by the use of South American Nervine Tonic. In so many words she said: "Life was becoming unbearable. I was so cranky I was really ashamed of myself. Nothing that I ate would agree with me; now it does not matter what I eat. I take enjoyment out of all my meals." Here are Mrs. Galbraith's words of testimony to South American Nervine, given over her own signature:

"Shelburne, Ont., March 27, 1894.

"I was for considerable time a sufferer from indigestion, experiencing all the misery and annoyance so common to this complaint. South American Nervine was recommended to me as a safe and effective remedy for all such cases. I used only two bottles, and am pleased to testify that these fully cured me, and I have had no indication of a return of the trouble since. I never fail to recommend the Nervine to all my friends troubled with indigestion or nervousness.

"MRS. A. V. GALBRAITH."

The testimony of this lady, given freely and voluntarily out of a full heart because of the benefits she experienced in her own person, have an echo in thousands of hearts all over the country. South American Nervine must cure, because it operates at once on the nerve centres. These nerve centres are the source from which emanates the life fluid that keeps all organs of the body in proper repair. Keep these nerve centres sound and disease is unknown. There is no trick in the business. Everything is very simple and common sense like. South American Nervine strengthens the digestive organs, tones up the liver, enriches the blood, is peculiarly efficacious in building up shattered and nervous constitutions. It never fails to give relief in one day.

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, have no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similiar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose to pay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times.

Good Things Can't Come too Often.

The people of Peterborough and surrounding country will be more than pleased to see by an announcement elsewhere that Prof. Dorenwend, the greatest hair goods artist in America, will once more visit Peterborough and will be at the Grand Central Hotel, on Monday, Nov. 26th. On his last visit to Peterborough, a great many had to go away from his showroom unserved, on account of the rush of customers, which a visit of only one day caused, so people in want of his styles should by no means miss this chance. It is something wonderful to see to what perfection he has brought the art of hair goods styles. His fine ladies and gentlemen's wigs, toupees, wavy and plain fronts, switches, etc., are worn by thousands of people, who rejoice in the wearing of such natural looking goods. Don't miss this chance of seeing Prof. Dorenwend.

You must wear what has wear in it, if you would be proof against attacks of seediness, and Grafton's clothing possesses the wear that gives satisfaction.

Paragraphs Picked Up and Pencilled for Public Perusal.

—Business is brisker.

—Only four weeks till Christmas from Tuesday next.

—In a George street family is a canary seventeen years old.

—Carnations and chrysanthemums are now the favourite flowers.

—A full attendance is desired at a meeting of the Sons of Canada to-night.

—The Little Lake looks very black with its fringe of ice, where Jack Frost has already gotten in his work.

—The Dickson raceway is frozen over hard and firm, but the ice is hardly thick enough to be safe for skating yet.

—There will be no service in St. John's this evening, but a sermon will be delivered at eleven o'clock to-morrow morning.

—Keep your feet dry. An eminent throat specialist says that the best chest protector is worn on the sole of the feet.

—A certain nimrod in town has a couple of puppies which answer to the name of Brandy and Soda. They should be lively.

—The residents in the vicinity of Perry and George streets are complaining that the electric light on that corner is in poor working order.

—The street cars will run round trips for single fares to-morrow, as was the custom on Tuesdays and Fridays during the summer months.

—The councillors have almost decided not to purchase any stone to be broken up during the winter, as a great quantity of that broken last winter still remains unused.

City Lodge, No. 404, I. O. G. T., will meet this evening. General business will be transacted, and at 9 o'clock the doors will be open to visitors, after which a first-class programme will be presented.

—The young men are promised "good things" at the Y. M. C. A. reception to-morrow, both in the musical programme and refreshments. Some of the best local talent will assist and Toronto may be heard from.

—The Young Women's Association will give a very nice entertainment in their rooms to-morrow evening, when an excellent musical programme will be presented and refreshments served. All young women are invited to be present.

—It was with a feeling akin to pain that many of the citizens witnessed the felling of the shade trees in front of the new Bank of Commerce building. It was queried whether any private corporation could thus ruthlessly destroy what was cultivated at such expense, without first bringing the matter before the council.

—What the Hamilton Spectator says of Mrs. Martin Murphy's singing:—The fact of Mrs. Martin-Murphy's musical talents being warmly appreciated by numerous admirers was proved by the presentation to her of three large boquets and a magnificent floral basp." Opera House, Dec. 4th.

—The police court was densely packed, this morning, as it was known that Charlie Pogue had laid information against a couple of men charging them with assaulting him. When the first case came up, Mr. Stone, who appeared for the defense, was successful in turning the tables on Pogue and proving that he himself was the assailant in the case. Mr. Pogue was therefore compelled to go down in his pocket and pay $3.85 costs. In the other case he was more successful, and his assailant was fined $2 and costs. Before any of the men left the court room the Chief of Police took a hand in the information business, with the result that Pogue was fined a couple of dollars and costs, as well as his first assailant for being disorderly. On the whole it was rather an expensive experiment for Pogue to endulge in when he laid the information.

Swamp Lake Dam.

During the summer forest fires have destroyed the dam at the outlet of Swamp Lake. Mr. Stratton, M.P.P., placed the matter before the Ontario Government, with the result that an inspection has been made by Mr. Thos. Walters, and a new dam will shortly be erected—one that will more satisfactorily serve the intended purposes. This will be good news to the settlers of Galway. Should it have been decided to not rebuild, the pine and hemlock of the settlers in Galway would have been tied up high and dry. This stream empties into Nogey's Creek, and each season large quantities of pine and hemlock are floated to market.

Musicians, Attention!

The piano to be used at the Herr Yunck concert on Dec. 4th, is a cabinet grand specially selected and loaned by Whaley, Royce & Co., Toronto, and is manufactured by the Reimer Piano Co., and contains one of Wessel, Nichol & Gross' best American actions. The touch is light and elastic—the very acme of perfection. It has great power and volume of tone, combined with a rich quality that delights and captivates. A Tone Liberator, a Patent Muffler, which, when put into operation, produces the softest tone possible, and enables the performer to practice at any hour of the day or night, without disturbing any one in the house or neighborhood, and a Metallic Key-board Support, are special features of these instruments. If this instrument is not sold within a few days after the concert, it will be returned to the show rooms on Yonge street, Toronto.

WILL BEGIN ON SATURDAY.

On Saturday, Nov. 24th, the sale of the China Hall stock will begin, and continue for two weeks—or until the whole stock has been disposed of. The goods have been reduced from 25 to 50 per cent., and in some cases 75 per cent., so there will be big bargains for everyone. Dinner, Tea and Chamber Sets, Silver Ware, Lamp Goods, Ornaments, etc., at prices that cannot be repeated again. Buy now for Christmas. China Hall and Silver Bazaar, Saturday, Nov. 24th.

HYMN OF THANKSGIVING.

From north to southern bound, from east to western ocean,
Throughout the fair domain of our beloved land,
Let every grateful heart, with reverent devotion,
Unite in glad thanksgiving for the blessings of God's hand.

The heavens, as of old, tell of his wondrous glory;
And still the morning stars for joy together sing;
Obedient to His will God's earth repeats the story,
And lays her rich oblations at the feet of Heaven's King.

The coral and the pearl beneath the surging billow,
In adamantine bed the gems of every hue,
The fragrant breeze that sweeps through palm-tree, pine and willow—
In joyous adoration all their vows to God renew.

When Spring's life-giving sun salutes the white peaked mountains,
Who in obeisance smile and doff their caps of snow,
Unbar the frozen gates that lock their pent-up fountains
And down through rill and rivulet the limpid waters flew.

Cheered by their crystal draught, the hill and vale and meadow
Give thanks and don their dress of daisy-spangled green;
The trees put forth their leaves, and 'neath the cooling shadow,
The panting kine at noon rejoice in happiness serene.

So when the golden grains wave their bright plumes of yellow,
The purple clusters hang on every vine-clad hill,
The orchard branches bow with fruitage ripe and mellow,
Awaiting now the harvester, his hungry barns to fill.

Let every heart rejoice from east to western ocean—
Throughout the fair domain of our beloved land,
From holy altars raise with reverent devotion,
Your voice to God who scattereth the bounties of His hand.

THE LECTURE ON JERUSALEM.

A More Than Delighted Audience at the Opera House.

Mrs. Mountford gave another of her interesting entertainments, last night, in the Opera House, to an immense audience, who, during the evening, frequently interrupted the gifted lecturer with the most enthusiastic applause.

During the course of the evening, Mrs. Mountford gave most apt illustrations concerning the ancient and modern modes of life lead by the inhabitants of Jerusalem and her descriptions and explanations regarding certain passages and parables in the Scriptures were most vivid and satisfactory. The portions of the testament referring to the rich man and Lazarus, and the true meaning of the Almighty in saying that it was easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the Kingdom of God, was simplified and explained to an extent, rendered it apparent to all that the rich were not by any means debarred from Paradise, but before entering had to be stripped of the burden of false pride, etc., which they had assumed, together with their riches.

George street Sunday school has put the citizens under a lasting obligation by arranging to have Mrs. Mountford here for the past two evenings.

German Jealousy of England.

BERLIN, Nov. 21.—The Cologne Gazette prints a long reply to the article which appeared in the London Standard on November 16, analyzing the position of Germany in Europe and defining the relations of the Dreibund to England. The Gazette denies the assertion that the Dreibund is dissolving because Italy thinks England's help is needed. On the contrary the Dreibund is firmer since England's manœuvre. The fact is that Anglo-German relations have become very much worse of late. Germany, the Gazette declares, will not endure England as an obstacle in her colonial policy. England knows that Germany has both the strength and the will to prevent any such action.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

OTONABEE MILLS ONCE MORE IN OPERATION.

VASTLY IMPROVED AND UNDER A NEW MANAGEMENT.

Davidson, Munro & Co. Have Taken Hold of the Concern and its Old Time Popularity With the Farming Community Will Doubtless Once More Revert to it.

On Friday afternoon last head miller Lindsay pressed the button and with a rumble and roar the Otonabee Roller Mills were once more in operation after lying idle for about six months.

Messrs. Davidson, Munro & Co. compose the new firm of management. Mr. Wm. Davidson is an experienced man in the business and has a large business connection, being formerly the junior member of the firm of Meldrum & Davidson. Mr. S. N. Munro is his nephew and is also well known throughout the country.

The Otonabee Roller Mills are known far and wide in this vicinity for the quality of work which has hitherto formed their output. With the many improvements which have been introduced by the new firm, this former vast trade will, doubtless, again revert to them with a probable additional amount of traffic. The farmers of Douro, Otonabee, Dummer and Ashphodel will nearly all pass directly by the door of the mill at the East end of the Hunter street bridge on their way to the Peterborough markets and this is a source of great advantage. After Mr. Mulhern moved out of the mill for six months and the mill was forced to lay idle during this period.

At the expiration of this time, the reconstruction of the mills was decided upon by the Dickson Company and the contract let after a keen competition. The contract for the mill wright work was was awarded to Mr. C. O. McKeown, a citizen of Peterborough and well known to the milling fratenity. The Dickson Company have spared no pains or expense in making the mills a perfect model in every respect, and with its characteristic zeal, the Company saw that every improvement, which was introduced would be one which would insure a lasting success. An action of this kind taken by a company reflects great credit on of its management.

The mills are being operated by Davidson, Munro & Co., who are giving the closest attention to all details of the business and putting their flours well before the trade. Annexed to the mill proper is a large wheat elevator, having a switch from the Grand Trunk railway right to the door, where the wheat is unloaded and received into a large hopper weighing machine before being elevated to the storage bins.

THE STORAGE CAPACITY of the wheat elevator is 50,000 bushels.

The wheat on being received into the mill, a building of six storeys, including basement, first passes through an elaborate and effective system of Eureka wheat cleaning machinery, consisting of zigzag separators, close scourers and smutters, built by the old established firm of Simeon Howes, of Silver Creek, N.Y.

The wheat after being thoroughly cleaned, passes to the roller floor where are located nine double sets of rolls for the reduction of the wheat and middlings.

The wheat after undergoing a series of six reductions on the rolls, is elevated to the top floor and received into three double new Era sieve scalpers manufactured by Wm. and J. G. Greey, the well-known mill builders of Toronto. The middlings after being scalped and separated from the break stock, passes on to the purifier floor, where are located six purifiers built by the Geo. T. Smith Company of Stratford, Ont. The consists of the passing of the middlings over a vibratory sieve covered with bolting silk and subjected to a strong current of air caused by suction fans on the top of the machine. After a thorough purification of the middlings it passes on to the grinding floor, where another reduction is made by the smooth, chilled iron rolls before being elevated to the flour dressing reels and centrifugal bolting machines. The flour-dressing machinery consists of eleven Greey round reels and seven G. T. Smith centrifugals. The reels and centrifugals are covered with different numbers of silk bolting cloth, graded to suit the stock, heated by steam before being finished and sent on to the packing room, where are located four packers for filling the flour into different sized packages, sacks and barrels.

THE BRANDS ADOPTED

by the new firm are as follows: "Best Patent," "Victory," "Strong Bakers," "Calla Lily" and choice bakers' "Eureka." Annexed to the mill building is the new wheel room, where the power is furnished to operate the mill. The water wheels are three in number and consist of two new American Turbines of 40 inches diameter and one Vulcan turbine, 48 inches diameter, for furnishing power to the wheat elevator and chopper.

The capacity of the mills are two hundred and fifty barrels per day. They throughout by steam and lighted by electricity manufactured on the premises.

WILL BE HEATED

The practical management of the mills is under the care of Mr. A. J. T. Lindsay, formerly with W. W. Ogilvie, Montreal. A chopping and exchange business is also carried on direct with the farmers, the mill having formerly enjoyed a very extensive trade in this line of business. The mill has been painted and calcimined throughout, and presents a very neat appearance. An office has been handsomely fitted up in the western end of the mill building.

Found.

A red-leather pocket book containing a marriage license, procured at W. J. Green's, 145 Hunter street, also a receipt for a pair of Green's $3.00 pants. The pocket book also contained a considerable sum of money, representing the savings of the owner by purchasing his clothing at W. J. Green's, 145 Hunter street.

In is nonsense to spend money, it matters not how small the amount, for poor clothing. Wisdom consists in buying Grafton & Co's make every time.

THE LONDON ELECTION.

The election in London of Mr. T. S. Hobbs, the Liberal candidate, by the overwhelming majority of 800, is a triple triumph—a triumph for the candidate—for the Mowat government and for the Liberal party. Mr. Hobbs had the chances decidedly against him at the outset of the contest; he had against him an adverse majority of 137 at the last general election, he had against him the record of London, which since Confederation, 27 years, had not elected a Liberal; he had against him a candidate of the Conservative party, whose strength was shown by his having been elected to the prominent position of mayor of the city. In spite of these adverse influences, Mr. Hobbs, by virtue of his personal qualities and the cause he represented, converted a minority of 137—the figures of Mr. Meredith at his last election—into the magnificent majority of 800, a gain of nearly a thousand votes in the short space of a little over four months. This change may, it is reasonable to hint, be accounted for largely in two ways. The election was a critical one. The government, while having a large majority over either of the parties in the house, had not so strong a front against both parties if they should by any chance become allied. Thus the electors of London were required to make a choice between strengthening and supporting the Mowat administration and declaring in favour of a possible combination or coalition, which might by some chance replace a government that has wisely and ably ruled the province for over twenty years. And the decision was a most decided and emphatic declaration for the Mowat Government. In face of the adverse influences against the Liberal candidate, and in face of the political record of London, which had opposed the government ever since it came into power, that city declared in favour of good government. In the elections of the past twenty years, the electors of the city of London were not called upon to virtually decide the existence of the Government which had, as a rule, a strong following, and doubtless the fact was borne in mind that even if the Mowat Government were defeated, the Conservatives had a capable, trusted leader, around who they would be proud to rally. They have no such leader now. Conservative London, with a straight Conservative record of nearly thirty years in provincial politics, has repudiated Mr. Marter's leadership. Mr. Marter has gone down at the first tilt—unhorsed and disarmed. The electors of London would have none of his pantry politics. He chose to flood his audiences during the contest with puerile drivel about eggs, anchovy sauce and lemons; invading the provincial larder, and checking the number of eggs an asylum official chipped of a morning and that sort of statesman-like twaddle. He made this particular style of attack upon the government's administration of our public institutions in a city that contains one of the largest of the asylums, where the electors would have personal knowledge of the manner of administration, and he has got his answer. He appealed to the electors on the narrow lines of sectarian bigotry, and he has got his answer. He appealed to the temperance element on the strength of his achievements past and promised in behalf of temperance and he has got his answer; he appealed to the electors generally to oust the Mowat Government in favour of his chaotic following of less than one fifth of the House, and he has got his answer. The Conservative riding of London was called upon to decide a square issue—for or against the Mowat Government and they have declared in no equivocal manner in its favour.

GOOD Tory London has made a Martyr of the Opposition leader.

IN spite of the balminess of this 21st of November, is a cold day for the Opposition leader.

MR. ESSERY will probably partake lightly of his Thanksgiving poultry, for fear of seeing Hobbs-goblins in his dreams.

THE electors of London may like Muskoka well enough for a summer resort, but they decidedly object to it as a winter resort.

MR. MARTER'S asylum eggs were badly addled—none of them hatched—though the London electorate "sat on" them hard enough.

IT is said that His Holiness at Rome, after hearing the result of the London election last night, went to bed and slept soundly, something he has not done since Essery started his P.P.A. campaign.

Curious People.

Why will men persist in giving nearly twice as much for their clothing when they can have the same made to order at W. J. Green's and save their extra cash for a rainy day?

A "Cold" Day!

You caught a cold last week—one of those long, lingering sorts of colds that's sneezy thing to get. Everybody you knew, and some people whom you had never been introduced to, told you what to take, and the more you took the more cold you took. Finally you went to see a doctor. He felt your pulse, told you to hold out your tongue, which felt like an all wool blanket, and advised you to drink plenty of COLD WATER, take two grains of quinine every two hours—and wear a good warm Overcoat. "Two dollars, please," said the doctor, and as you paid him like a little man, you made up your mind that if you had bought an Overcoat when you should, you would have saved your two dollars, the quinine, and wouldn't have to drink so much COLD WATER.

We Will Back Our Overcoats

for saving doctors' bills, and you couldn't have better advice than to get into one of GOUGH'S tip-top Overcoats FORTHWITH.

Buy a $4.00 one if you can't afford a better one, as that may save a five dollar doctor's bill. Buy an All-Wool $10 one for $6.50 if you want a better one—or if you want a heap o style for your money, we've got the extreme styles at from $12 to $15.

MOODY AT TORONTO.

A Brief Reminiscence of His Visit to That City Ten Years Ago.

The visit of Mr. D L. Moody, perhaps the greatest evangelist of the present century, recalls his last visit to Toronto 10 years ago. Mr. Moody, on that occasion, was invited to conduct a Christian convention here by the Ministerial Association. Mr. H. C. Dixon, who has for many years taken an active part in evangelistic work in Toronto, visited the noted evangelist at Rome, New York state, where the latter was then conducting revival services. Mr. Dixon expressed the hope that Mr. Moody would soon pay Toronto a visit. The latter, who was just about through with his labors in New York state, said he would willingly conduct a convention in Toronto, but that he would come only under the auspices of the Ministerial Association. Mr. Dixon lost no time in arranging to have a delegation of Toronto Christian workers meet Mr. Moody at Buffalo, N. Y., for the purpose of extending to him a hearty invitation to conduct a convention lasting three days in Toronto.

A large delegation of about 30 ladies and gentlemen, among whom were Mr. Wm. Gooderham, the late ex-mayor Howland, and many other prominent Christain workers, met Mr. Moody at Buffalo, and arrangements for his visit to this city was made. The convention opened December 3, 1884, in the Metropolitan church, and continued until the 5th. Majors Cole and Whittle, two well known evangelists, assisted Mr. Moody at the convention. Nearly every church in the city took an active part in the proceedings. Three meetings were held daily and at each during the convention immense crowds attended. The morning and afternoon meetings were devoted to the discusion of subjects suggested by Mr. Moody or any of the audience, bearing on Christian work. The meetings in the evenings were purely evangelistic. So great were the crowds at the latter that it was found necessary to hold overflow meetings in Knox church. The singing at the meetings was conducted by Mr. and Mrs McGranahan, and members from all the church choirs composed the immense choir. The meetings were brought to a close on December 5, the evening being devoted to an address to men by Mr. Moody. At the conclusion a large number of men in the vast audience stood up and professed their desire to become Christians.

The convention was productive of much good, and roused local Christian workers to renewed efforts in the work.

Double Blankets.

There may be commercial, economic or other reasons why blankets should be woven double, says a writer in an American paper for women. But I can imagine no reason for keeping them double when in use. A double blanket is heavy and inconvenient to handle and air, and the average bed-maker labors under the delusion that it should be put on the bed with the doubled edge toward the head of the bed, thus compelling every one who wishes to turn off some of the clothing during the night to engage in a tussle with the blankets and disarrange things generally. Some severe struggles with the bed clothing at hotels are among my earliest traveling recollections, and I never think of getting into a strange bed nowadays without first examining it to see whether the blankets are double and are in proper position or not. In a majority of cases I have to rearrange them; therefore, I maintain that double blankets should always be separated before being used on beds.

WHAT THE CHINESE EAT.

Their Breadstuffs Seem Sad, Solemn, Saddened and Bilious.

A member of the English Parliament, Forence O'Driscoll, has a lively paper in the November number of The Century describing life and street scenes in Canton. Mr. O'Driscoll says:

The food purveyors made a most striking display; the fruiterers exposed on flat trays bananas, pineapples, melons, figs, pears (the latter beautiful to the sight, but hard and tasteless), together with many Chinese fruits, whose shapes and tastes were familiar to me but whose names I knew not. Some of these fruits were most artistically peeled, pineapple peeling being quite an art. A great variety of vegetables was offered for sale. Among them were the white shoots of the bamboo, which seemed to be a favorite article of diet. But to what use, indeed, may not this wonderful grass be put? From it Chinamen make almost everything conceivable; hats, cloaks, sheets, carpets, roofs, buildings, baskets, chairs, carrying-goles, fishing-tools—the list might be prolonged ad infinitum. And then they eat it as well.

Preserving ginger in many forms was a noticeable trade. The roots were washed and left in water, and as an English cook treats potatoes before boiling them. A number of men and women holding a two-pronged fork in each hand sat around a table with the tubs of ginger roots out of the water, and, laying them on the table, pierced them all over very rapidly with both forks until quite soft. The pierced roots were then put into another tub, where they were boiled in syrup. The ginger went through various minor processes, until eventually it was packed in the earthenware jars in which it is sold in European shops. The whole process was certainly a clean one, and the smell of the aromatic root in preparation was both grateful and pleasant.

In the bakers' shops I saw nothing corresponding to our European loaf; solid-looking little yellow patties, slabs of flably brown cakes, emblematic of concentrated dyspepsia; scones, or an equivalent, apparently of fried batter; and great flakes of milk-white, slippery-looking paste not above an eighth of an inch thick—to be rolled up and deftly sliced with a clever-shaped tool into long strings like macaroni. These foods were to be seen everywhere in the city, but nothing light and open. To my eyes the breadstuffs seemed sad, solemn, soddened, and bilious.

No Sense of Humor.

"Judge," said the young man with the torn clothes and the black eye, "considerin' the way the police done me up, I think you ought to let me down easy."

"Young man, if you came here expecting this Court to be a parachute," replied the Judge, with a harsh, Police Court laugh, "you are away off your trolley. Ninety days."—Cincinnati Tribune.

He Wasn't Particular.

"Sir," remarked the rich father to the suitor, "after the investigations I have made into your character I cannot give you my daughter Emma."

"All right," answered the persistent suitor, "Then how about one of the others?"—Fliegende Blaetter.

The only way to cure catarrh is to purify the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood and tones up the whole system.

A Terrible Experience:

Mr. Geo. Tribe, of Straffordville, Ont. a pretty village near the shores of Lake Erie, went through an experience lately that he will never forget. He tells it in his own words:

"For three years I suffered from skin disease in its worst form. I tried Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura remedies, and doctored one year with the best physicians in the land, but got no benefit; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but failed to remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard, white scales; the itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. I can truly say I owe my good health to B. B. B., and I advise all sufferers to use this splendid medicine.

GOLF IN HIGH FAVOR.

IT IS 600 YEARS OLD AND STILL MUCH ADMIRED.

During the Past Six Years Many Clubs Have Been Formed in This Country, Where Scientific Shinny is Played With As Much Enthusiasm as It is in Scotland—What it Costs, Etc.

When golf was played by a colony of summer residents at Yonkers a few years ago it was looked upon merely as a development of Anglomania. The fondness of Americans for outdoor sports has since placed the ancient Scotch field sports on the same basis as lawn tennis and polo, and nowadays a suburban colony is not considered "smart" unless it has a mile or two of golf links.

An antiquity of 600 years is claimed for golf in Scotland, but as an American game it is only six years old. At present there are in the United States fifteen well-established golf clubs. The organization of the St. Andrew's Golf Club of

READY TO MAKE "THE DRIVE."

Yonkers dates back to November 15, 1888, and its members say that it is the oldest in the United States. The links of the club are two miles long, with nine holes, and covers a two hundred acre field. Residents on Long Island have organized the Meadowbrook, and the Southampton and Shinnecock Hills Golf Clubs. The members of the Staten Island Cricket Club have laid out for themselves two miles of links. At Morristown, N.J., the Morris County Golf Club was started recently with a list of 400 members, a club house, and some exceptionally hazardous links. The Staatsburg Golf Club boasts of ten links, the distance once around being two and a quarter miles. Tuxedo has a golf club. At Lenox a large field belonging to Miss Furnis has been arranged for golf. Boston people have the Essex County Golf Club. The golf club at Newport is two years old. For Washington enthusiasts a course of nine holes has been laid out across the Potomac river in Virginia on Fort Meyer Heights. The golf contagion has got as far West as Chicago, and some exceptionally good scores were made at a

THE "HIGH LOFTING STROKE.

Windy City handicap match on July 21. The youngest golf club in the country is that formed at Bar Harbor in connection with the Mount Kebo Club.

Golf has been called scientific shinny, and an authority on the game said recently that a good shinny player invariably made an apt player of golf. As a shinny player frequently concludes a game with black and blue bumps on his ankles and scraped knuckles, so the golf player often returns from a tour of the links with lacerated shins or a bandage about his head. In the course of his training the novice is told particularly to take a firm hold on his golf stick, and if this admonition is not heeded painful accidents may follow. As the force of a stroke badly aimed is usually received upon the foot, the golf pupil suffers principally from pounded toes. The head of the stick is loaded, and when the handle is not securely held the head has a tendency to turn inward and scrape the ankle.

A well-known Wall street broker, after listening to a description of the game by a member of a golf club, said the other day:

"I would like to know where the fascination of golf comes in. I have had my hat smashed, my collar torn off and my coat ripped up the back on the floor of the Stock Exchange for a good cause, but I don't see what in golf would compensate me from running the risk of having my shins broken."

LADY GOLFER AND HER "CADDIE"

"Accidents are the exceptions in golf," answerd the golf player to whom he spoke. "I will tell you why golf is fascinating to me. Last Saturday afternoon I went to the links. I did not intend to stay, but I became so interested watching the ball obey the strokes of the different sticks that I remained until dark. Golf is to the experienced player what a scientific game of whist is to the disciple of Cavendish. When a hand at whist has been partly played a good whist player can tell what effect the card he plays will have on the game. The player picks out the particular stick for that stroke, and if his aim is true he can do what he pleases with the ball. During a round of the links the ball will furnish situations in endless variety. The fascination lies in the art of selecting the right one of the thirteen sticks used and watching the ball obey the blow. As in whist the play of a wrong card means the loss often of a trick, so in golf the use of the wrong stick means the loss of points. The use of the golf stick is as interesting as the motions of the cue in billiards. Golf has all the excitements of old-fashioned shinny without any of the boisterousness."

"Is golf an expensive game?" asked the broker.

"No, it is not," answered the golf player. "An erroneous impression has gone out that golf involves extravagance. Golf is not as expensive as polo or bicycle riding. It costs about as much as lawn tennis. The main expense is in laying out the links. Land is usually cheap. Land that is undesirable for almost any other purpose is perfectly adapted to golf. If there is a stream or a deep depression in the land so much the better. Such things form hazards. Golf sticks costs about $2 each, and the average player does not use more than six in the course of a tour of the links. Until recently all golf sticks were made in England, and the best of them come from England now; but a few American dealers in sporting goods are manufacturing golf clubs, and in a year or so the sticks will be much cheaper. After the links have been laid out and a small house has been built for the storage of implements, the only remaining item of expense is the golf professor.

"The coach usually receives $100 a month. One instructor is enough for a good-sized golf club. It is his duty to coach beginners and to be a general giver of pointers. While as a whole a golf club is expensive, the individual cost is so small that golf is one of the most inexpensive sports of the day."

While the Englishman dresses as carefully for golf as for dinner, the American is bound by few rules. An unwritten law says that ladies shall wear skirts reaching to their ankles and golf shoes and gaiters. Men have only to put on golf shoes with rubber knobs on the soles to keep the feet from slipping. The typical English golfer wears a small cap of large checked cloth, a single-breasted jacket, usually of the Norfolk design, baggy knickerbockers fastened just below the knee, large garters, heavy ribbed stockings and golf shoes, either high or low. The American freedom in respect to dress results in a picturesque variety of costumes. On the links of the Morris County Golf Club at Morristown a visitor recently counted eight women and five men, the costumes of only two of whom were similar in color and cut. One woman looked cool and comfortable in a suit of white duck. The skirt reached to her ankles. Over her golf shoes she wore long gaiters. Over her loose skirt waist was a short jacket of white duck. A wide, flat-brimmed straw hat, with a bright red band, shaded her face. He dress was pointed out as being an ideal golf costume. It would have been equally appropriate for tennis, a luncheon party, or a 5 o'clock tea. Another woman looked as if she had dressed for an ascent of Mount Blanc instead of a game of golf. Her dress was of rough Scotch stuff, with rows of braid around the bottom of the skirt. The waist was made after the model of a Norfolk jacket, with plaits and a wide belt. The costume was completed by an Alpine hat of light straw, with a wing shooting up on one side. A third woman, who was pointed out as being "sensibly dressed," wore a dark-blue skirt, a loose waist of thin white and blue striped material, and a dark blue straw hat. Still another woman wore a light-blue skirt, a dotted shirt waist and a light straw hat. The men appeared in even greater variety of costume. One man wore a conventional English suit of jacket and small clothes. His costume was conspicuous in comparison with the plain attire of his fellow players. Two of them, so far as appearances went, might have stepped over from a neighboring farm. Their trousers were turned up and were covered with dust. They wore no coats, and on their heads were straw hats with immense drooping brims. The hats looked as if they might have come from a Coney Island bath house. The "caddie" who follows the players and carries the golf clubs, usually wears loose knickerbockers. He receives 15 cents for the first hour and 10 cents for every subsequent hour he follows the golfer.

The costumes of golf players of former days were hardly appropriate. In the days of big hoops and peg-top trousers the skirts of the ladies were so large that the handles of the golf clubs had to be lengthened. When Mary Stuart played golf on the famous links of the St. Andrew's Club she wore the flowing skirt and the enormous ruffle of the time. The court gallants played in their costumes of velvet and satins. Flemish golfers in 1500 wore red blouses and sky-blue stockings, light green blouses and red stockings, or dark red blouses and white stockings. Among Englishmen and Scotchmen to-day it is considered proper to wear scarlet coats while playing.—N.Y. Sun.

FRANK WESTWOOD MURDER CASE.

A Young Mulatto Woman Arrested on Suspicion.

Clara Ford, a Tailoress, Jailed.

TAKEN INTO CUSTODY AT HER YORK-ST. BOARDING HOUSE.

It is Claimed That she Dressed in Male Attire, Called at the Westwood House and Shot Frank Down—A Revolver of the Same Calibre as That With Which Westwood was Shot, Found in her Room, Together With a Suit of Men's Clothes—Was Known to be in the Habit of Wearing Men's Clothing—Was Acquainted With Westwood—This may Explain the Boy's Reticence.

Clara Ford, a mulatto, who has been employed as tailoress with Samuel Barnett, 154 York street, off and on for the past eight months, was arrested, last evening, on a charge of being the murderess of Frank Westwood, who was shot down at the door of his father's house, at the foot of Jameson avenue, on Saturday night, Oct. 6th.

The girl gives her age as 33 years, but looks more like 25. She is best described as a "yaller" girl, and would almost pass for a white woman. She was born and raised in this city, but for some months past has resided in Manitoba. Returning about eight months ago, she went to board at Mrs. Dorsay's, 152 York street, where she has resided ever since, working at her trade as a tailoress in the various Hebrew tailor shops in the vicinity.

THE FIRST CLUE.

Detectives Slemin and Porter never ceased working on the case since the shot was fired. Three weeks ago a pointer was obtained through words dropped in conversation by a woman. Then the officers went on a still-hunt for Clara Ford, but not until yesterday did they succeed in locating her.

THE ARREST.

At 4.30 yesterday afternoon Detectives Slemin and Porter entered the store of Samuel Barnett, 154 York street, and enquired the name of a young girl who was working at a sewing machine. When told it was Clara Ford, one of the detectives said: "The Inspector of Detectives wishes to see you at headquarters."

"All right," replied Clara, "I will go with you. Wait till I go upstairs and get my things on."

"No; we will go with you," was the reply, and Clara, accompanied by the detectives, went upstairs to the room occupied by the girl in Mrs. Dorsay's boarding house adjoining. There they found a 38-calibre revolver with two chambers discharged and a full suit of men's clothing, besides two men's shirts.

They escorted the girl to headquarters, where she was told the charge upon which she had been arrested. She received the intelligence very cooly. She was afterwards interviewed by Inspector Stark, and as a result of the interview was locked up and a charge of murder registered against her.

MRS. DORSAY'S STORY.

When Mrs. Dorsay was seen at an early hour this morning she was not aware upon what charge Clara had been arrested. She was told it was upon suspicion of murdering Frank Westwood. "Oh! My God!" she cried, "It's not true! It can't be. She was an industrious, hard-working girl, and never went out at nights."

Mrs. Dorsay knew very little of the antecedents of Clara, except that she was an orphan with one sister. Mrs. Dorsay could not tell from memory what time of night Clara returned to her boarding house on Saturday, Oct. 6th, the evening Frank Westwood was shot, but was sure she could not have been out till 11.30 o'clock. "I don't give my boarders latch keys," said Mrs. Dorsay, emphatically, but let them in myself. Clara always came in between 9 and 10 o'clock, and if she came in that night late I certainly would have remembered it.

ALWAYS CARRIED A REVOLVER.

"There nothing in the finding of the revolver," continued Mrs. Dorsay. "Clara owned that revolver. I've seen it often. She always carried it when she went out nights to protect herself, and slept with it under her pillow. She also wore men's clothes sometimes. She was very masculine, and frequently went out in male attire, often wearing a pair of men's pants under her dress.

HER EMPLOYER.

Samuel Bartlett, the girl's employer, also said that Clara was steady and industrious. She had worked for me on three different occasions during the past eight months, said Mr. Barnett, coming here the last time on Saturday, Sept. 15th. Since then she has been working continuously, often until 9 and 10 o'clock at night. I am sure she worked on the day of the Westwood shooting, and also the Monday following, because I remember her remarking that morning, when we were reading the account of the shooting, that "it wouldn't be safe for anyone to go to the door after this." She never spoke much to the other girs, but attended to her work.

When the detectives took Clara away, they did not inform Barnett as to the crime with which she was charged, and he knew nothing of the suspicion against her that she was the murderess of Frank Westwood. There were several tailoresses in the shop at the time and they were dumfounded when they heard the news. The girl had certainly made no confidants of any of them, nor let drop anything that would lead them to suspect her in connection with the tragedy.

The girl lived for a long time in the immediate vicinity of the Westwood place, and was consequently familiar with the locality. She is known to have been acquainted with Frank Westwood; two witnesses swear to having seen her on more than one occasion prowling in Jameson avenue in male attire.

THE THEORY OF THE TRAGEDY.

The theory of the detectives is that the girl deliberately killed young Westwood for revenge. That it is the old story, but with a different ending. They were working on the hypothesis that when Clara Ford lived in Mrs. McKay's cottage, which was only a few yards distant from the Westwood house, she and Frank were intimate. Then the girl disappeared, and according to the story told to Mrs. Dorsay, she had been in Manitoba until she arrived at the York street boarding house eight months ago. Since then, they believe, she has been plotting the crime which was carried into effect on Oct. 6. She has short curly hair, and dressed in men's clothes, would readily pass for a young man, as she has a masculine walk and carriage. Her presence in the vicinity of the Westwood house thus attired would indicate that she was watching for a favourable opportunity to carry her design into effect, and finally hit upon the expedient of calling the young man to the door, having first watched the family retire upstairs. Her escape is easily accounted for. Familiar with the locality, she could readily have run from the front door across the Westwood lawn to Hawthorne street, a fence a foot high alone dividing the street from the grounds. She would emerge just about the spot where Mrs. McKay's cottage stood, and could cut across the vacant land to Victoria crescent and easily escape. Whether or not Frank Westwood knew who it was who shot him, and went to the grave with the secret locked in his breast, is, of course, unknown. If he did, and Clara Ford shot him, this may explain his remarks in his ante-mortem statement that "Mum's the word," and "You can't pump me."

—The Child's Own Magazine, issued by the Sunday School Union, London, Eng., and crowded full of the most interesting and instructive little stories for the wee tots has just been received at the Peterborough bookstore, and a more appropriate present for the youngsters would be hard to find. Another book which is always looked for eagerly by children of more advanced age is "Young Canada," an illustrated annual containing stories of adventure and travel by authors whose works are considered to be instructive as well as amusing. It is brim full of stories of life in the public schools of old England, such as boys love, and is essentially a book for boys, and every boy should have it on his own particular book shelf. Five Persons Were Killed.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 21.—It has been definitely learned that there were five people killed in the wreck on the Pennsylvania railway at Larimer station, 20 miles east of here, by the wrecking of a trestle, letting sixteen cars fall into the ravine. The names are: George Rice, August Thorne, and his son, Fred Thorne, and two Italians, names unknown, as they went by numbers. All were miners employed by the West Moreland Company.

Mr. Sovereign Re-elected.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 21.—The Knights of Labor met yesterday and received the report of the Finance Committee, which was approved. Grand Master Workman Sovereign was re-elected without opposition to his old position. Messrs. Bishop, of Massachusetts, and Murdoch, of Colorado, were nominated for Grand Master Foreman, and Bishop was elected. Secretary-Treasurer Hayes was re-elected after some opposition.

Deaths by the Earthquake in Sicily.

ROME, Nov. 21.—The deaths caused by the earthquake in Southern Italy and Northern Sicily are now known to number more than 400. In Procopio alone 200 were killed. Forty-eight bodies have been recovered from the ruins of the church and several are still under the fallen walls.

The alarm caused by the earthquakes is subsiding in all towns except Milazzo, near Messina, where heavy shocks are still felt. The damage to buildings has been enormous. In Palmi alone it is 2,000,000 lire, without reckoning the loss of furniture and other portable goods. In Reggio the prefecture town hall, post office, court house and prison have been so unsettled that it is unsafe to occupy them.

Custom Tailoring.

The gratifying activity of our Fall trade in this department is a proof that we have got what's wanted in seasonable and fashionable Cloths, and that in the matter of making we are correct in style, sure in fit, and none better in finish. Remember we guarantee every garment or no sale.

15 to 20 per cent. REDUCTION

will be made on all Clothing made to order from now to New Years. We have too large a stock of Suitings, Pantings and Overcoatings, and offer the above liberal inducements on genuine goods in order to reduce our large stock.

☛See our window dressed with an exhibition of our fabrics and prices.

Our $3.50 Pants have had a great run and it still continues.

Overcoats and Ulsters

That will wear and give satisfaction, ready-made. If you are a big or small built man, your size Coat is here ready to put on. Keep nothing but the best—this store does'nt do a catch business. Good clothes cost no more than poor clothes, if you go to a reliable clothier.

A large proportion of our stock of Overcoats and Ulsters for men and boys are our own make, cut and trimmed up on our own premises, under the eye of our regular cutter, and are as good as if made to order—but very much lower in price.

UNDERCLOTHING.

Decidedly colder—and it makes you feel the demand for something warmer to wear—whether in Underwear, Hosiery, Gloves or Flannels. Prices so low that no one need go cold.

Our 60 Day's Sale

A Pronounced Success

Nothing succeeds like success, and nothing succeeds thats lack the element of Real Worth. If a thing have worth in it and if it supplies a need, it will make its way.

It is because our 60 Days' Sale possesses this element that it to-day enjoys such extensive patronage and popularity.

During November

Up to the present date, sales have been the largest we have ever had; and if this is to be the index, this Clearance Sale of the lines we have advertised, will be ranked as the most remarkable of our record.

Thanksgiving Week

Prices will continue every day much below even Clearance Prices and your experience every day will prove that our VALUES are THE BEST in the trade—that you get more for your money here—that "the Ribbon is Ours."

"It's Fair's Way." We're all enthusiasm—

Now for the Proof

FOR INSTANCE—

TAKE MANTLES!—There is no dormant energy in this department. Fair's is the people's Mantle House—

—200 High-Class German Tailor-Made Mantles, ranging in price from $8 $15 each, can be purchased now for $3.50, $5 and $8 each.

—200 yards Tweed Ulsterings, reduced from $1.50 to 75c.

TAKE SEALETTES!—30 per cent. reduction on Lister's celebrated Sealettes ought to convince skeptical readers that we have reduced in earnest. Here are the figures to prove it:—

$12 00 per yard Sealette for $9 00
11 00 per yard Sealette for 8 00
8 50 per yard Sealette for 6 00
6 50 per yard Sealette for 4 50
5 00 per yard Sealette for 3 00

TAKE FLANNELS!—Surely these are things you need. What are the facts:—

—40 pieces All Wool Grey Flannels, worth 20 and 25c., sale price 15c per yard.

—30 piece Flannelettes, worth 8c., for 5c. per yard.

TAKE UNDERWEAR!—There will be urgent need of heavier Underwear from this on. We have all the wanted kinds for men and women, but the whole secret lies in selling first-class quality at a second rate price. Look here for value:—

—Men's Knights of Labour All Wool Shirts and Drawers, worth 85c., sale price 65c.

—10 dozen Men's Natural Wool Shirts and Pants, worth $2.00, the garments clearing at $1.25 each.

—20 dozen Ladies' Undervests, worth $1.10 each, sale price 85c.

—15 doz. All Wool Vests, former price 75c., sale price 65c.

TAKE DRESS GOODS!—We want to "shame" the other fellows out who are crying Bargains under the ordinary conditions:—

—50 pieces Black and Coloured High-class Dress Goods, imported to sell at 75c. to $1.25 per yard, your choice for 50c.

—500 yards 54-inch Dress Tweed Suitings, worth $1.00, sale price 50 to 60c. per yard.

—300 yards All Wool Black and Coloured Dress Goods, worth 50 to 60c., sale price 35c.

—500 yards Double-Fold Costume Cloths, your choice for 25c. per yard.

—$1.00 B & C Corsets really selling at 65c., and Fair's Half dollar Corsets at 35c.

And so on all over the store. If you are paying "regular" prices elsewhere, you are not doing yourself justice, that's all.

IS THERE A CONFESSION?

The Police Reticent With Regard to the Suspected Parkdale Assassin.

NO POSTIVE MOTIVE KNOWN

The Authorities Are Quite Certain of Their Grounds for Their Action—The Woman's Career in St. Paul—Her Preliminary Trial on the 28th.

TORONTO, Nov. 23.—Nothing new has been developed in connection with the arrest of Clara Ford for the murder of young Westwood on October 6. A morning paper published a statement that she had confessed to the crime, but the police refused to admit or deny it, and nothing has transpired to confirm the statement, which is probably based on the fact that the prisoner accidentally pleaded "guilty" when charged in the police court, quickly changing her plea to "not guilty." The early history of the accused shows that she has an illegitimate daughter aged 14, and that some years ago she lived in man's attire in St. Paul and learned the drug business. No theory is advanced as to her motive for killing Westwood in case she is guilty. The police, however, insist that they have ample grounds for their course of action.

The preliminary trial of the accused woman will take place next Wednesday.

The remarkable character of the woman charged with this terrible crime lends a decided romance to this already sensational case. Her story as told by herself and those who know her creates an interest in the case so intense that little else is talked of throughout the city. While the theory that she committed the deed out of revenge for the exposure of her masquerading in man's attire by Frank Westwood is considered plausible, there is an under-current of feeling that some other stronger motive lay at the bottom of the crime. This will probably be found to be the case when the affair is fully sifted, and the preliminary investigation next week is looked forward to with intense interest. Frank Westwood was not the first who was the target of her bullet. She shot at a man on a previous occasion, and he is throughly alarmed lest she get out of jail and shoot him. He is so in dread of her that he has with great difficulty been persuaded to become a witness. She is an immensely strong woman, and is known to have exhibited her strength by knocking down two men.

THE FISHERIES DISPUTE.

Complaint of the American Fishermen Will be Heard in the Courts.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 23.—A Washington special says the letter of the Lake Erie fishermen complaining that the Canadian officials on the ram Petrel illegally removed their nets from their portion of the lake belonging to the United States has been referred by the state department to the British embassy. As the state department it was stated that it is a case to be decided in the courts. If the American fishermen had set their nets north of the imaginary line which is drawn directly through the lake from east to west, then they were in Canadian waters and Canadians had a right under the treaty to seize their nets and contents. If, however, they can prove that their nets were set south of the line or in other words in American waters, then they will have a good case for heavy damages and the United States authorities will back them to the utmost.

However, the matter is one that must be determined by a law suit and until the courts decide, the United States government can go no further.

SANDUSKY, O., Nov. 23.—The United States cruiser, Fessenden, arrived here yesterday from Detroit, Captain Hodgson being under orders to investigate the alleged outrages against American fishermen by the Canadian cruiser, Petrel.

A Serious Thing for Farmer Bevin.

CHATHAM, Nov. 23.—Charles Bevin, the farmer who was held up on the Raleigh highway on the night of September 23 by colored footpads and robbed of all his money, has been arrested on the charge of shooting William Ellerbeck on the same night. Ellerbeck lost his leg. The evidence points to the fact that after being robbed Bevin returned to the city, armed himself and set off home, vowing to get even with the next man who stopped him on the highway. The next man happened to be young Ellerbeck, a respectable man, who knew nothing of the highway robbery and innocently accosted the desperate farmer. If the charge can be proved, it will mean not alone a criminal matter, but also a suit for damages heavy enough to take Bevin's whole farm.

Windsor's "Jack the Hugger."

WINDSOR, Nov. 23.—William Marshall yesterday finished his term of imprisonment for assaulting Miss Bertha Mitchell two months ago. He is Windsor's "Jack the Hugger," and as he was about to leave jail, Jailor Sparks again arrested him on the charge of assaulting Miss Jessie Dickson. He was taken to Windsor police station and remanded by the magistrate till Wednesday when Miss Dickson will appear to give evidence.

POLITICS OVER THE LINE

Ex-Speaker Reed a Possible Candidate for the Presidency.

HE SPEAKS ON THE SITUATION

He Finds a Good Deal to Rejoice at in the Result of the Recent Elections—The New Congress Will Probably Have Him for Its Speaker.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 23.—Thomas B. Reed, ex-Speaker of the House of Representatives, and who will probably hold that position in the new Congress, and will not unlikely be the Republican candidate for president two years hence, was the principal speaker at the banquet of the Home Market Club last evening. Here are some pungent quotations from his speech referring to the result of the recent elections:

"How richly they have deserved their fate these statesmen of the proud boast and the paltry fulfilment. Did it ever occur to you that if the brightest man among you had had placed before him on March 4, 1893, a sheet of white paper and had been told to write down all the foolish things he would have liked to have the enemy do in order to compass their own destruction, he would have left out 50 per cent. of the things they actually did? Is there any one of you that would have dreamed of what your Massachusetts Democratic convention called the firm and vigorous foreign policy of the administration?

"Did any one of you ever picture the chairman of the Ways and Means with his knees under British mahogany receiving the plaudits of our business rivals for good service already tendered and better service expected? Did you ever think of David B. Hill as candidate for governor of New York and as a necessary consequence an unregistered and homeless president? Had you anywhere hung in the chambers of fancy the picture of a head without a party and a party without a head? Well, the retribution has certainly been tremendous. You don't half realize how immense it was. But I do not desire to waste your time in exultation though I am obeying scripture when I rejoice with those who do rejoice. Nevertheless we have got something else to do beside rejoice. Victories bring responsibilities and as I have pointed out to you, our victory is so great that it probably means responsibility for many years.

"Of those many years I shall not now speak. If we have wisdom for two years we will be trusted for more and the wisdom for the next two years seems to be easy. We have neither the President nor the Senate and all we can do is to let the country try the results of the folly of 1892. While in the long run this may be wisest just now it seems a great misfortune. There are compensations however. We shall have two years to look over this situation so as to do the best we can when our time has fully come. So far we have done all that lay in our power. The bad work cannot go on even if the good work cannot commence. This country is in favor of the doctrine of protection, largely in favor of it. Everything shows this and no man whose brains are not suffering from recent concussion from the heels can think otherwise.

"What we need now is not general belief in our doctrines. We need teaching which comes from practical results: We need a distribution of the facts. When I say to you that protection will cheapen goods and make better goods, you may yield assent, but it may not be a fighting faith. But when I show by facts and figures that ground glass, for example, though raised 100 per cent. by the McKinley tariff, has reached almost the same price as before, and the consumer gets American glass worth 20 per cent. more and every inch of it made by American labor, I show something which is an ever present answer to all the theories of the world."

The Knights of Labor Convention.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 23.—In the Knights of Labor convention yesterday morning a resolution that each assembly shall make a maximum scale of wages above the regular scale adopted by the National Trades Assembly was adopted. Another resolution was adopted by which grievances and complaints must come up in the local courts of the assemblies within sixty days. A resolution was submitted allowing ex-representatives to the general assembly to be elected as officers. The resolution was defeated. The recommendations of the general master workman that legislatures should enact laws providing for the creation of state labor bureaus in each of the states was adopted. A proposition was adopted that all trades men shall affiliate with organizations of their own trade. Another resolution was passed that in all labor parades no flags shall be carried except the national colors. The general master workman's recommendation that a plank be inserted in the preamble against gambling in farm products or options was adopted.

A Big Strike Coming.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 23—Six thousand workmen in this city will be affected by the strike ordered by the United Garment Workers of America at their annual convention in New York. The strike will be for the purpose of abolishing the sweating system existing here. The Baltimore Garment Workers held a meeting last night and agreed to strike as soon as the official order was received from New York. Ten per cent. of the weekly wages of each member of the local union has been voted for the immediate benefit of striking cloakmakers in New York city.

A Buffalo Man Hangs Himself.

BUFFALO, Nov. 23.—When Mrs. John Heinake arose yesterday morning she proceeded to the kitchen to prepare the family breakfast and upon opening the door was horrified to see the body of her husband suspended by a clothes line attached to a beam overhead. His body was cold and stiff and it was evident he had been dead several hours.

LOSS OF THE CHEN YUEN

China's Most Formidable Vessel Meets With an Accident.

HER COMMANDER SUICIDES

China Is Now Practically Powerless on the Sea—Troops Marching Southward to Attack Port Arthur—The Chinese Fleet at Talien Wan.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—A despatch from Chee Foo to the Central News says that all the vessels of the Chinese fleet are now at Talien Wan and troops are marching southward to attack Port Arthur. The Chinese there are making preparations to present a determined front against the enemy.

The captain of the Chinese warship Chen Yuen, Lin Tai Sau, committed suicide by taking a large quantity of opium because of the stranding of his ship. The vessel struck on a rock and is probably a total wreck. The Chinese authorities at Shanghai, however, have arranged to send ships and men to her assistance, believing that the Chen Yuen can be floated and repaired.

The Daily Graphic hears from Tien-Tsin that Commissioner of Customs Detring has started for Japan to arrange the terms of peace. From Port Arthur the Graphic has this despatch, dated to November 19. Port Arthur resembles a city of the dead. The streets are empty. The soldiers of which there are 20,000 here occupy the houses. All the troops here are of superior quality and are well armed and drilled. Ammunition is plentiful and the town is victualled for six weeks."

A despatch bearing the Shanghai date, but of doubtful authenticity, says that the Mongolians are rebelling on accouut of Gen. Yek's execution of six Mongolian princes and many Chinese soldiers are joining them.

The Times correspondent in Shanghai says: The road from Tien-Tsin to Pekin is occupied by Hunanese troops and is becoming unpleasant for travellers. The Catholic fathers remain at their stations in Manchuria, but the Protestant missionaries have returned. The latter report that the Chinese fought stubbornly under Gen. Sung and if well led would repel the Japanese. The cold weather is setting in.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The Herald's special from Shanghai says: "The question is openly discussed whether Li Hung Chang, at the head of his own Hwai troops, will refuse to obey any further orders from Pekin.

Hunan and Kiang-Nan troops have been despatched to Tien-Tsin with a view to keeping him in check. The Viceroy's German advisers are supporting him in his attitude of independence towards the Imperial Government.

Count Oyama is now advancing upon Port Arthur. A portion of the Chinese fleet is inside Port Arthur. The remainder is at Wei-Hai-Wei, which is blockaded by the Japanese.

The Navy Department has an official cablegram announcing that the Chinese battleship Chen Yuen, the most formidable vessel in the Chinese navy, was damaged by a torpedo on leaving Wei-Hai-Wei on the 18th inst. and is now useless. Commodore Lin, in command of the Chen Yuen, committed suicide after the accident. With the loss of the Chen Yuen China becomes practically powerless on the sea. This vessel was very much like the Maine of the United States navy. She was 7,430 tons displacement and 6,200 horsepower, her length being 308 feet, beam 59 feet and draught 20 feet. She had a belt of 14-inch composite armor, her turrets being 12 inches thick. She was armed with four 12-inch Krupp guns, two of 15 centimetre calibre, four of one ton, eight machine guns, two light rapid firing rifles and was provided with two torpedo launching tubes. She was finished at a cost of about $3,000,000 in 1892. Her speed was 14 1-2 knots.

The Disaster on the Wairarapa.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Nov. 23.—The inquiry into the recent wreck of the passenger steamer Wairarapa, which went on the rocks during the voyage between this port and Auckland, has been ended and judgment will be given on Nov. 30. Several witnesses said that when the steamer struck the captain jumped from the bridge and he was not seen again. There was much delay in lowering the boats and this is believed to have been largely the cause of the great loss of life. Had there not been a total lack of discipline the witnesses said the death list could never have approached 100.

Anti-French Feeling in Madagascar.

MARSEILLES, Nov. 23.—The steamer Iraddy arrived here yesterday with news from East Africa. Her officers say that a strong anti-French feeling has developed in Madagascar. The Queen's sister and aunt have traversed the capital and the villages in the vicinity preaching the holy war, and Prince Rakotemana and the fanatics are agitating the populace. The people were greatly excited on the occasion of Le Myre de Vilers' arrival at Antananarivo. Many outrages such as the burning of foreigners have been committed and allowed to go unpunished.

Radicals Oppose the Expedition.

PARIS, Nov. 23.—In the Chamber of Deputies M. Paschal Grousset, Radical, moved that the debate on the question of granting a credit and sanctioning the expedition to Madagascar be adjourned until the general situation could be carefully studied. The motion was defeated by an overwhelming majority. M. Alype, radical, and M. Jourdan, socialist, spoke at length against the proposal to send the expedition to Madagascar.

The Armenian Massacre.

VIENNE, Nov. 23.—The Politeche Correspondens prints a letter from an official Turkish source whose intention is to minimize the significance of the Armenian massacre in the Sassoun district. The letter repeats the old statements as to Armenian rebellion and asserts that at Sassoun all the Armenians fell in open combat. The troops, the writer admits, killed 3,000 of them.

SAMOA'S STUBBORN NATIVES.

White Residents of the Island Bear the Burden of Taxation.

APIA, Samoa, Nov. 23.—Correspondence per steamer Mariposa to San Francisco states that peace still reigns in Samoa although it is a peace which would be better described as armed neutrality. No native taxes are forthcoming and the Government's current expenses are met by the proportion of custom revenue which the great powers have decided the Government is entitled to. Naturally the white residents who solely contribute towards this branch of revenue are much disgruntled and the wonder is that they continue to be law abiding when no stress is taken to enforce native taxation.

The most important event of the month has been the visit of the land commissioners to the district of Falealili, where they were permitted to establish themselves without molestation and during their stay had no cause to complain of the rebels residing there.

The British warship Curacoa and the German man-of-war Buzzard are still in Apia harbor

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 23.—Several Mormon elders who have been doing three years' missionary service among the South Sea Islands arrived on the Mariposa. Their work was entirely among the natives and they report great progress, there being over 400 converts among the Samoans. The elders say that the rebel Samoans if left to themselves would have no trouble in overthrowing King Melletoa, and that it is only the presence of the English and German men-of-war that prevents the breaking out of hostilities.

With the elders are two Samoan children a boy of 11 and a girl of 8. The Mormons claim they are taking the children to Salt Lake City to be educated, but Commissioner of Immigration Stradley will investigate their cases. It is stated that the children were sold by the natives.

IN THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

An Attempt to Overthrown the Government Frustrated.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 23.—Correspondence by the steamer Mariposa from Honolulu, under date of Honolulu, Nov. 15, says: "President Dole has returned to Honolulu after spending seven weeks on the island of Hawaii. He was well received everywhere and addressed the natives at their own request. President Dole has been making a practical study of the land question. He says the present land statutes are extremely faulty and that he is engaged in the preparation of an Act that is intended to be comprehensive. If the royalists contemplate any decisive move, as has been stated during the past six weeks, there is not the least bit of evidence of it. The loyal Hawaiians say they stand solidly to resist assault from any quarter directed at the present government."

The steamer, Mariposa, which arrived from Honolulu brought news of an attempt to overthrow the government by Claud H. Wetmore, a newspaper man who formerly represented New York and Chicago papers there. Wetmore had several hundred royalists connected with him in plot which was to have been sprung on the day after the last steamer from Honolulu, the Australia had sailed. On the morning of the steamer's departure Wetmore was summoned to Attorney-General Smith's office and told that the government was in possession of full details of his scheme, and he was given the alternative of departing on the Australia or being thrown into prison for treason. He took the former course.

The Witness Was an Infidel.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 23.—The prosecution of Ned Smith and W. S. Richardson charged with lynching six negroes near Millington, Tenn., this county, last August, received a severe set back when Butch McCarver went on the stand and stated that he was an infidel and was therefore incompetent under the laws of Tennessee to give testimony before a jury in a vital case. Butch McCarver is the man upon whom the State most relied for a conviction.

A Big Jump for Their Lives.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 23.—An Ohio street boarding house in a congested district was burned yesterday. Some half dozen inmates were obliged to jump from the third story window in their night clothes but singularly none were badly injured. There were many narrow escapes and had the fire not been promptly discovered a dreadful holocaust would have resulted.

HERBERT SAYS IT IS RIGHT.

His Opinion of the Offer of Canadian Troops for Imperial Service.

OTTAWA, Nov. 21.—It was generally believed here that the statement of Sir Charles Tupper in Scotland that the Canadian Government had offered the Royal Canadian regiment of infantry for the services of the Imperial Government was more or less of a bluff. The general understanding has always been that the Canadian militia was for the purpose of protecting Canada, and not taking part in any foreign wars in which Britain might be engaged. That has been the principle which heretofore has been followed. Major-General Herbert was seen by a correspondent regarding the offer. He said that the statement of Sir Charles Tupper that such an offer was made was correct. Asked under what regulations or order could the regiment be ordered to go abroad, as there was nothing in their attestation papers providing for the same, the general replied that there was nothing at all to prevent it, providing the men were willing to take their pay from the British Government instead of the Canadian Government. Britain loaned, so to speak, some of her military men to Canada, and Canada could therefore reciprocate. He did not see any trouble about the matter. The general also pointed to a precedent when the Australian government sent, in 1885, a regiment to assist Britain in the Egyptian war. While this is the view of the major-general the Canadian militia officers do not exactly share the same opinion. They believe that the whole understanding between Britain and Canada at the time of Confederation was that the Canadian militia and all its branches were to be for the defense of Canada within and without its borders. Mr. Patterson, Minister of Militia, was too busy to be interviewed, but admitted that the cable was correct.

GALWAY.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Death entered the home of Mr. John Reid, of lot 7 and 8, concession 16, Galway, last Monday evening, and claimed for its victim a bright little daughter, about eight years old. She endured an illness, which lasted nearly two months before the spirit deserted its earthly tabernacle of clay. It was borne to the R. C. cemetery, in Galway, on Wednesday. The funeral was largely attended. The parents have the sympathy of the entire community in this their hour of trial.

A hunting party, composed of Messrs. F. Dettman, C. Greaney, Jas. Gaffigan, J. Molyneaux, Geo. Dunbar and Geo. Wilson, returned from Bass Lake, in Galway, about a week ago. They succeeded in capturing a few beautiful specimens of the forest and were well satisfied with their three weeks' sport.

Mr. Goslin, a butcher of Peterborough, landed on the beautiful shores of Swamp Lake in the township a couple of weeks ago to try his skill in hunting. He, however, succeeded in slaying a fine deer. He went home to fully equip himself for a good season's hunt, and brought with him on his return a friend, a couple of canoes and hounds. In vain they searched the forest in the immediate vicinity of the lake, and had to return back to Peterborough without anything, excepting a pleasant sail on Swamp Lake.

Diphtheria has broken out in a home in the village of Kinmount, and two of the occupants are down with it, but the most rigid precautions are taken to suppress it at once.

MEDICAL MEN

Are Interested in the Discovery of a Remedy for Bright's Disease.

Montreal, Nov. 23.—The subject of kidney disorders and diseases is one receiving special attention from the medical profession just now, probably owing to the fact that a disease of these organs caused the death of Russia's Czar. Among other points attractive to the profession is the case of Dr. McCormack, of Richmond, Que., a practitioner well known throughout Quebec and Ontario. He has lately published a letter announcing that he was cured of Bright's disease by Dodd's Kidney Pills. This case has a peculiar interest for medical men, because, until these pills were offered for sale, this disease was universally considered incurable. That belief is now thoroughly exploded by the success of this remedy, to which numerous victims of the disease owe their lives and sound health.

Germany's Anti-Socialist Bill.

BERLIN, Nov. 23.—The Augsberg Post says that the Bavarian clericals will oppose in the Reichstag any anti-socialist bill which gives the police or judiciary discretionary powers. It advises the clericals throughout Germany to prepare for the rejection of the anti-socialist bill and the dissolution of the Reichstag.

Stealing From Passenger Trains.

MONTREAL, Nov. 23.—J. R. Brodeau who gave his address as St. Albans, was arrested last night at the Grand Trunk station on a charge of stealing passengers goods from the trains. In his possession was found plans of the cars of nearly all the railroad lines in the country. Brodeau is believed to be an old hand at the business, and the police believe they have made a very important capture.

Caught in a Quicksand.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 23.—Five work men were caught in a quicksand in a sewer here yesterday. Patrick Connors was killed and Peter Van Berg had both legs cruhed, the others escaping without injury.

An Italian Spy Sentenced.

SAN REMO, Nov. 23.—Capt. Romani, a French officer convicted of spying upon the Italian army and forts, was sentenced to fourteen months' imprisonment and was fined 1,200 francs.

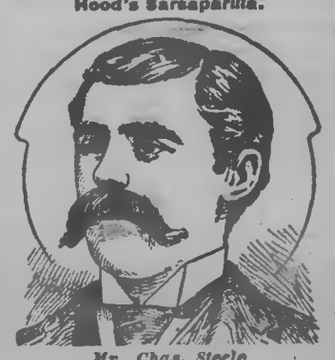
Broken in Health

That Tired Feeling, Constipation and Pain in the Back

Appetite and Health Restored by Hood's Sarsaparilla.



Mr. Chas. Steele
St. Catherine's, Ont.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"For a number of years I have been troubled with a general tired feeling, shortness of breath, pain in the back, and constipation. I could get only little rest at night on account of the pain and had no appetite whatever. I was that tired in my limbs that I gave out before half the day was gone. I tried a great number of medicines but did not get any permanent relief from any

MORWOOD NEWS NOTES.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Miss L. M. Scott is visiting her home here.

Mrs. H. Defoe, Marmora, is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. S. Patterson.

Miss Lizzie Askey returned last week after a short visit to friends id Keene.

Friday following Thanksgiving Day having been declared a holiday in the schools here, most of the non-resident pupils left for their homes Wednesday evening.

Monday evening about 10.30 a noise was heard in the room to the rear of Mr. T. Fraser's office. On investigation it was found that a hinge on the door leading in the office had been cut into. Most likely the would-be burglars were frightened by some passer by.

In the report of the High School printed in last issue, a slight typographical error was made. We said 29 new pupils entered the school at the beginning of the fall term. The figures should have read 79.

A literary society was organized Monday evening by the students of the High School with the following officers :

Hon. President.—J. Davidson, M.A.
President—S. E. Hill.
1st Vice-President—Miss A. Healy.
2nd " —J. Breckenridge.
Secretary—J. Roxburgh.
Treasurer—Miss Campbell.
Councillors.—P. Anderson, Miss Brown, H. Wasson and Alex. Eason.
Executive Committee—Misses Lewis and McLachlan and Otto Howson.

Arrangements have been made by the High School football club for the visit of the Knox College team and glee club this week. A grand concert will be given in the town hall on Friday evening, Nov. 2nd by the glee club. A rare treat in the musical and literary line may be expected. Saturday afternoon a football match will be played between the High School and Knox College teams. The visiting team is one of the strongest in Canada, and the match will be an interesting one.

Service will be held in the Presbyterian church Thanksgiving Day at 10.30 a.m. In the Methodist church service will be held at 11 a.m.

The following officers were elected at the meeting of the Model School Literary Society, Friday night :—

Hon. President—Mr. Perney.
President—J. Masterson.
1st Vice-President—Miss Meharry.
2nd " —C. Howson.
Sec.-Treas.—D. Easson.
Editor—E. Porter.
Assistant Editor—Miss H. Howson.
Critics—Miss M. Campbell and A. B. Patterson and Chas. Boyce.
Reporter—W. Stubbs.

A happy event tood place in the R. C. church here, Monday morning, being the marriage of Edward E. Fitzpatrick, son of Mr. John Fitzpatrick and Miss Ellen English, daughter of Mr. Michael English, both of Ashphodel. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Conway. The bride was supported by Miss Ella Fitzpatrick, while John English, of Hastings, acted as best man. After the ceremony, the happy couple drove to the home of the bride's father, where a large number of relatives and friends of the contracting parties joined in the usual wedding festivities.

MILLBROOK.

(From Our Own Correspondent.

A very exciting runaway took place on Sunday evening as the people were on the way to the different churches. A man named Elger came driving up King street. When in front of Fee's hotel he collided with a cart in which were Thomas Hutchison and a young lady were seated. The cart was upset and the occupants thrown out, after which the horse took to the sidewalk on the north side of the street, and went dashing eastward at a terrific pace. When about in front of the post office the animal again took the road and continued its flight until in front of Wood & Kell's bank, where it slashed into a phaeton driven by Mr. Earl, who was on his way to church, accompanied by his sister. Both vehicles came to a standstill, Hutchinson's horse being thrown from its feet and lying on its side. After a few lanterns had arrived on the spot it was found that Hutchison's horse had its two hind legs through the spokes of one of the hind wheels of Earl's phaeton with the hoofs securely fastened in the gearing. After some difficulty the horse was set free and raised to the ground, none the worse of its experience. Fortunately, no one was hurt, although the occupants of the cart had a narrow escape, as did several persons on the street at the time. The two hind wheels on Elger's buggy were turned inside out. Hutchison's cart is almost a total wreck, while three wheels on Earl's phaeton were destroyed, besides other damages. The accident was due to reckless driving on a dark night—a thing that is getting entirely too common of late.

W. T. Wood, S. W. Clarke, H. Johnston and A. A. Smith, were in Beaverton over Sunday, visiting their old friend A. T. Elliott, a former resident here.

Union services of the Methodist, Presbyterian and South Cavan churches, will be held in the Presbyterian church on Thanksgiving morning.

Miss J. Hiller returned home Saturday, after visiting in Toronto and other places.

Ernest Clarry and Norman Armstrong, who have been duck shooting at Rice lake, returned home on Saturday.

SALEM—OTONABEE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Mr. John Martin has been busily engaged these last few weeks building a stone foundation for his barn. He purposes moving it from its present site. Mr. Jenkins, Ashburnham, did the masonry work. Mr. Allan McCarty, Ashburnham, the far-famed house mover, is now busily engaged moving the barn and placing it on the foundation. Part of the stable underneath will be fitted up for pigs, in the most modern style. Mr. Martin has decided to go into hog raising extensively. He is a young man of energy and good business ability. We wish him success in his enterprise.

Mr. Evans Ingram is building a commodious straw house to the front of his barn.

Mr. W. S. Wood has built an addition to his stable.

A meeting was held in our cheese factory on Monday afternoon for the purpose of closing up business for the past season. It was largely attended by the patrons and they all seemed well pleased with the working of the factory. The whey was sold for the coming season to Mr. John Martin. Our factory under the management of W. S. Wood & Son is fast coming to the front, and will soon be ranked among the best for high quality of cheese.

The hum of the threshing machine is heard in our neighborhood. Jackson Bros. are busy in the barns of Mr. Thos. Heffernan this week.

Mr. Thos. E. Johnston, of Cavan, who has been visiting friends in this vicinity has returned home.

Rev. W. R. Young is expected to occupy the pulpit next Sunday, 25th inst., at 3 o'clock.

Good wheeling.

No sickness.

George Morrison, issuer of marriage licenses, is kept busy both here and at Peterborough, his headquarters for the present. His old friends and acquaintances do not forget him.

John Kincaid, apple merchant and exporter, made a flying visit here after making a large purchase in the McConnell settlement south of here.

The Bethel tea on Monday night in the Switzer neighborhood, Emily, was largely attended in spite of the cold weather. An excellent fowl supper was served, followed by addresses from Revs. Hill, Johnston and Garbutt, and J. H. Carnegie, M.P. John Lane, editor of the Omemee Mirror, in his maiden speech, distinguished himself in such a manner that he is looked upon as the coming John A. for East Victoria riding. Excellent music was furnished by the church choir, assisted by Miss Williamson, Omemee, and Mr. McKim, cornetist.

Mr. J. D. Thornton is now doing quite a business in the Canada Life Insurance amongst the young men.

Many attended the Mount Pleasant tea, on last Friday evening, from here, and spent a very pleasant evening.

Wm. Cardwell, hotelkeeper, has been confined to the house, with an attack of erysipelas, but a speedy recovery is looked for. This House is now under the management of Mrs. Cardwell and is still doing a fair share of business.

Peter Hamilton's machinery, Peterborough, is fast getting a hold on this country surrounding Omemee, as farmers are beginning to realize the advantage of patronizing a home industry, when a good honest article is turned out. We hope to see a shop of his opened here!

Found in Welland Canal.

SAGINAW, Mich., Nov. 23.—A telegram was received here from Welland, Ont., from Detective White, stating that a body answering the description of the missing J. S. Kerngood, of Rochester, had been found in the Welland Canal at that place. White was employed on the case by Moses Kerngood, of this city, brother of the missing man. The latter in New York devoting himself to the work of solving the mystery.

Killed by a Falling Tree.

PENETANGUISHENE, Ont., Nov. 23.—A young man by the name of William Allen, from Coldwater, N. Y., was working in a wood cutting at Cedar Point, township of Tiny. When he and a companion were sawing down a tree the tree in falling struck him on the head and killed him instantly. His friends have been notified.

"I TELL ALL MY FRIENDS."

A Lady of Shelburne, Ont., Permanently Cured of Indigestion After Using Two Bottles of South American Nervine —Glad to Let Everyone Know It.

MRS. A. V. GALBRAITH.

With indigestion it is not only that one suffers all imaginable torments, physical and mental, but more, perhaps, than anything else, an impaired digestion is the forerunner of countless ailments that in their course lead to the most serious consequences. Let the stomach get out of order and it may be said the whole system is diseased. When the digestive organs fail in their important functional duties, head and heart, mind and body are sick. These were the feelings of Mrs. Galbraith, wife of Mr. A. V. Galbraith, the well-known jeweller of Shelburne, Ont., before she had learned of the beneficent results to be gained by the use of South American Nervine Tonic. In so many words she said: "Life was becoming unbearable. I was so cranky I was really ashamed of myself. Nothing that I ate would agree with me; now it does not matter what I eat. I take enjoyment out of all my meals." Here are Mrs. Galbraith's words of testimony to South American Nervine, given over her own signature :

"Shelburne, Ont., March 27, 1894.

"I was for considerable time a sufferer from indigestion, experiencing all the misery and annoyance so common to this complaint. South American Nervine was recommended to me as a safe and effective remedy for all such cases. I used only two bottles, and am pleased to testify that these fully cured me, and I have had no indication of a return of the trouble since. I never fail to recommend the Nervine to all my friends troubled with indigestion or nervousness.

"MRS. A. V. GALBRAITH."

The testimony of this lady, given freely and voluntarily out of a full heart because of the benefits she experienced in her own person, have an echo in thousands of hearts all over the country. South American Nervine must cure, because it operates at once on the nerve centres. These nerve centres are the source from which emanates the life fluid that keeps all organs of the body in proper repair. Keep these nerve centres sound and disease is unknown. There is no trick in the business. Everything is very simple and common sense like. South American Nervine strengthens the digestive organs, tones up the liver, enriches the blood, is peculiarly efficacious in building up shattered and nervous constitutions. It never fails to give relief in one day.

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, have no liability ?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability ; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance :

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them ; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similiar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says : "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose to pay ; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached ; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability ; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times

On the Shelves.

The following new books have been added to the Mechanics' Institute library: More Memories, Dean Hole; History of the Christian Church, Moeller; Land System of Australia, Epps; The Social Horizon, Engels; Socialism, Utopian and Scientific, Engels; Barracks, Bivouacs and Battles, Forbes; Opinions of a Philosopher, Grant Story of Nations (Venice); Sir Robert's Fortune, Mrs. Oliphant; Gold, Gold in; Cariboo, Oxley; Bert Lloyd's Boyhood, Oxley; Fergus McTavish, Oxley; Lost Ideal, Swan. Probably one of the nicest Christmas presents that can be presented is a ticket for the library. They are not expensive, and are always appreciated.

Good Things Can't Come too Often.

The people of Peterborough and surrounding country will be more than pleased to see by an announcement elsewhere that Prof. Dorenwend, the greatest hair goods artist in America, will once more visit Peterborough and will be at the Grand Central Hotel, on Monday, Nov. 26th. On his last visit to Peterborough, a great many had to go away from his showroom unserved, on account of the rush of customers, which a visit of only one day caused, so people in want of his styles should by no means miss this chance. It is something wonderful to see to what perfection he has brought the art of hair goods styles. His fine ladies and gentlemen's wigs, toupees, wavy and plain fronts, switches, etc., are worn by thousands of people, who rejoice in the wearing of such natural looking goods. Don't miss this chance of seeing Prof. Dorenwend.

Overcoats and Ulsters are as staple as postage stamps just now. Stick to Grafton & Co's. make, and whether overweight or underweight, the mailes are always glad to carry them.

NEWS NUGGETS.

Paragraphs Picked Up and Pencilled for Public Perusal.

—Mud rules once more.

—Considerable local news matter is held over.

—A great many hunting parties were out yesterday.

—Is this the prelude to a couple of weeks of Indian summer?

—Quite a few ladies were in attendance at the football match yesterday.

—Mr. Hobb's majority in London is increased to 803 by the official count.

—Toronto coal dealers have put the price down 25 cents per ton. Not a bad example for the Peterborough dealers to follow.

—Belleville is trying hard to beat Peterborough's marriage record. There were three weddings celebrated there, yesterday.

—The police are looking for the owners of a large bunch of keys and a purse which have been picked up on the street within the last few days.

—A couple of drunk and disorderly cases were up before the magistrate this morning. One offender was discharged and the otherr assessed two dollars and costs.

—The new plate glass windows, to replace those broken a few weeks since, have arrived and been placed in position in the stores of Frank Schneider and T. Dolan.

—A goodly number of youngsters and quite a few grown up people enjoyed a skate on White's pond yesterday. To-day's rain, howeuer, has rendered the ice unsafe for the present.

—A shed belonging to Mrs. McCormack, near the corner of London and George streets, was broken into, last night, and a large quantity of wood stolen. The police are on the track of the miscreants.

—On Saturday, R. J. Graham, Belleville, shipped a carload of evaporated apples to Hamburg, Germany, and yesterday he again consigned a carload of dried apples from Belleville, and one from Trenton to the same place.

—If winter sets in now there will be a water famine in some sections. Many wells are still dry and the best of them have only sufficient water for present use. The swamps are reported to be as dry as in June, and will require a large amount of rain to fill them up.

A MOST PLEASING PROGRAMME.

The Young Women's Christian Association held an entertainment last evening, which was the most largely attended of any of the series which have been held lately, and the Board of Directors were so delighted with the programme presented that they passed a vote of thanks to the energetic committee which had that portion of the entertainment in their hands. Jordan Bros. were also thanked for their kindness in providing flowers for the decoration and brightening of the rooms. One of the members presented a most beautiful chrysantheum in full bloom to the Association, and her kindness was duly appreciated, and a vote of thanks passed to her.

The following progamme was presented:

Not Guilty.

Last night yesterday morning about two o'clock in the afternoon, before breakfast time, a hungry boy appeared before the beak charged with having in his possession a pair of five dollar pants bought in the usual way. He cleared himself by producing a receipt from W. J. Green, Hunter street, who is selling $5.00 pants for $3.00. Come thou and do likewise—that is, buy the pants.

Good Advice.

A certain young man who resides in ward No. ——, had been keeping company with a very amiable young lady with intentions towards matrimony, called on the evening appointed for their marriage and produced a small parcel. On examination she exclaimed, "Well, I am so thankful you bought the marriage license, gloves, &c., from W. J. Green, Hunter street, as now we are sure of having good luck." Try one—only a single trial solicited.

Died in Chicago.

The very sad and sudden demise of Jennie Lasher at Chicago, on the 24th ult., will awaken sympathy among her large circle of friends in Peterborough, where she was for many years well-known and highly esteemed. She died at the residence of her husband, Eugine Brush, by whom the bereavement is very keenly felt and naturally so, as they had only been married about seven months. She was the third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lasher, a long resident of this town, where the family is most kindly regarded. Mrs. Brush made many friends in Chicago, by whom her funeral was largely attended, as well as by the resident relatives. Interment was at Oakwoods, a beautiful cemetery adjacent to the city of Chicago.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

...s of Interest to Local Sportsmen.

HOCKEY.

The Quinte Hockey Club, of Belleville, has organized. About twenty-five hockey enthusiasts were in attendance and the election of officers immediately proceeded with. The following were elected for the ensuing year:—President, Curtis Bogart; vice-president, J. E. Willis; Sec.-Treas., F. M. McKeown; captain, John Phippen; committee, Harry Twing, Jas. Phillips and William Nash. Judging from the enthusiasm shown in this meeting and the general interest taken in the game throughout the city, Belleville will have some good hockey games this year.

The Limstones of Kingston will put two teams in the field this year. One will enter the senior series and the other the junior.

The annual meeting of the O.H.A. will be held at the Queen's hotel on Saturday, December 1, at 3 p.m. After the successful season enjoyed by the association last winter, and the increasing interest taken in the game, it is expected that many new clubs will be enrolled this year. Mr. A. Creelman, of the Imperial Bank, has been appointed secretary pro tem., and clubs desiring to enter teams in the O.H.A. championship series should communicate with him at once.

THE TRIGGER.

A jolly party comprised of several notable sportsmen, left yesterday for parts unknown, hunting grounds. The party was comprised as follows: Capt. Alex. Patterson, ex-Councillor Harry Winch, Mr. Seeley Ireland, Mr. Tenlece Guerin, Mr. Jack McGee, Mr. Jack Mervin, Mr. "Jay" Gould and Mr. Eric Barreau. They had exceptionally good luck, having bagged no less than 47 rabbits, 19 black squirrels, 22 partridge, 3 skunks, 1 racoon, 2 ground hogs and two foxes. They had with them a pack of hounds numbering fourteen, which as yet have not arrived home, with the exception of one, which is hardly able to stand.

The others are duly expected every hour. The sportsmen arrived home at dusk highly delighted with their days outing. The contents of the different bags will be converted into a big stew, which the hunters and their friends will enjoy to-morrow.

Messrs. Will Strong, Chris. Skinner and a party were out after rabbits yesterday and succeeded in shooting eleven of the cottontails. They report having seen numerous other hunting parties from Peterborough out after the same game.

Another party was formed of Messrs. R. H. Jackson, Rufus Stevenson and a party. The amount of game secured by these hunters has not as yet been ascertained.

Mr. Wm. Strong, of the Bell Telephone Co., and Mr. Chris Skinner, while out on a shooting expedition yesterday, were successful in capturing 17 rabbits and 2 partridge.

ANNUAL MEETING OF ST. LUKE'S GUILD.

The annual meeting of St. Luke's Guild was held on Wednesday evening, for the election of officers and the reception of reports from the various chapters. The Guild officers were re-elected with the exception of the Bursar, Miss Tivey, who was compelled to send in her resignation, as she is going to spend the winter months in Ottawa. The Rector referred in warm terms to the energy and fidelity with which Miss Tivey carried through all her undertakings. Mrs. Card was unanimously elected to take her place. The officers are:—

Master—Rev. H. Symonds.
Warden—Mr. John Burnham.
Registrar—Miss Packenham.
Bursar—Mrs. Card.

The following are the chapters of the Guild with their officers:—

The Missionary Chapter—Head, Mrs. Peck.

The Visiting Chapter—Head, Mrs. Warde; Secretary, Miss Calcutt.

The Decoration Chapter—Head, Miss Peck; Secretary, Miss Burt.

The Entertainment Chapter—Head, Miss Tivey.

The Young Women's Chapter—Head, Miss Maggie Calcutt; Secretary, Miss Armstrong.

The Young Men's Chapter—Head, Mr. Sam. Adams; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Bell.

The Women's Auxiliary Chapter—President, Mrs. Bennett; Vice President, Mrs. Gaskins; Secretary, Mrs. McGregor.

After the conclusion of the formal business, the meeting took a social turn. The following was the programme:—

Hymn	No. 273
Address	Rector
Song	"Abide With Me." Miss Tivey
Address	Mr. John Burnham
Hymn	No. 208
Address	Rev. C. W. Hedley
Hymn	No. 23

Benediction.

Refreshments were served in the course of the evening by the Women's Auxiliary, assisted by the Young Women's Chapter.

THE SEWER ARBITRATION.

The Townships Presenting Their Evidence To-Day—Sanitary Experts.

Their sewer arbitration was again reopened this morning before Judge Ketchum. Messrs. Smithson, Riddell, Joseph Clark and Robert Deyell—all farmers from Otonabee and North and South Monaghan, were called by Mr. Edmison as witnesses. Their evidence went to show that the river overflowed their land along the banks annually and that upon this land which was overflowed, their cattle were pastured during the summer. All testified that a great deal of butter and cheese was manufactured in the district and they objected to the sewage entering the river, as they believed the water would be polluted and would, by overflowing the land, affect the pasture to such an extent as to render the dairy products unsanitary. Regarding the sawdust in the river, Mr. Deyell was positive that there was not a stretch of half a mile in the Otonabee, which could not boast of having sawdust bars.

Mr. Edwards objected strenuously to Otonabee or South Monaghan farmers giving evidence, as to the effect the emptying of the sewer into the river would have upon them. The arbitration, he stated, concerned only North Monaghan and the town The Judge made a note of his protest but allowed Mr. Edmison to continue his examination of his witnesses. Among the sanitary experts now in town are Dr. A. Pyne, Dominion Analysist; Dr. Norman Allen, ex-Medical Health Officer; Dr. Oldwright and Dr. Charles Sheard, Medical Health Officer, all of the City of Toronto.

GASHED WITH A SHARP TOOL.

A Carpenter at Auburn Meets With a Serious Mishap.

Mr. Wm. Steers, a carpenter, in the employ of the Auburn Woollen Mills Company, met with a most serious accident yesterday morning while working at the dam crossing the river at that point.

It seems that while using his tools in the performance of his duties on the repair of the dam, a slip was made and the sharp tool flew from his hands and inflicted a most severe and dangerous cut behind the right ear and another one just over the jaw bone. The injured man was carried into the mill, but lost a great quantity of blood before the arrival of a physician. The edges of the two wounds were drawn together with a few stitches, and Mr. Steer conveyed to his home, where he is at present lying very weak on account of the great loss of blood. Otherwise he is doing favourably.

Men's Fur Coats in natural Russian dog at $12, $15 and $18. The warmest and best cap in the world for the price, at FAIRWEATHER & Co., corner of George and Simcoe street, Peterborough.

PERSONAL.

Mr. J. E. Staples was in Cavanville yesterday.

Mr. M. Parker of Bailliebero, is in town to-day.

Mr. W. H. Manning has returned from Toronto.

Mr. "Jerry" Packenham is in town again for a few days.

Mr. D. J. Armstrong was in Toronto for Thanksgiving.

Miss N. Simons has returned from a brief visit in Oshawa.

Mr. Harold Morrow is home for his Thanksgiving holidays.

—Miss N. Moscrip and Miss Kirklard have been visiting friends in Millbrook.

Mr. A. Thompson returned Wednesday night from a prolonged stay in Toronto.

Messrs. Orville Shortly and Will Thompson, spent their holiday in the Queen City.

Mr. Benedict, of the local branch of the Bank of Montreal, spent Thanksgiving in Toronto.

Mrs. Fairbairn's condition to-day shows encouraging, if not decided, change for the better.

Mr. Hamilton, of the Bank of Ontario, has returned from Toronto, where he Thanksgiving.

Miss Launderville, matron of the Peterborough Protestant Home spent her Thanksgiving in Hastings.

Miss M. McIntosh, who has been visiting friends in town for the last few days, returned to Toronto this morning.

Miss M. Owens, daughter of Reeve Owens, of Campbellford, is spending a few days in town as the guest of Miss Edith McKee.

Miss Annie Keneally, town, who has been on an extended visit to friends and relatives in Ashland, Wisconsin, returned home yesterday.

Mrs. M. A. Jameson, of the Windsor, and her son Melville, returned home the other evening, after a sojourn at Hespler with friends and relatives.

Capt. Chas. Calcutt, of the steamer Daisy, left on a business trip to Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo last evening. He will be absent several days.

Miss Ethel Burnham, grand-daughter of Mr. Cluxton, went to Toronto last night, to continue the study of the violin—with Herr Klingenfield. Miss Burnham has already acquired no little proficiency, and, as she possesses great natural talent and taste in the direction of the violin, doubtless, under her excellent new teacher, these qualities will receive an artistic development that will bring distinction to both pupil and teacher.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

THE GREATEST MUSICAL TREAT OF THE SEASON.

The Local Lodges of the C. O. F. Score Another Big Success.

The annual concert of the united Courts of Peterborough and Langton, Canadian Order of Foresters, has come to be looked upon as a regular institution—as something which may be depended upon for real worth and sterling merit. The Lodges spare neither pains nor expense in making this annual musical treat one of the richest of these which the Peterborough public have the pleasure of hearing during the course of the season, and last night's concert was one which was, if possible, even better than the entertainment of former years.

A liberal patronage was accorded the Foresters and by eight o'clock it was a difficult matter, indeed, to get into the hall.

The programme consisted of fifteen numbers but so enthusiastic did the audience become over the excellent success obtained by the different artists that the encores were the order of the evening and the programme consequently ran out to almost double its announced length.

THOSE TAKING PART WERE

Miss Effie Elaine Hext, elocutionist; Miss Maude Trenglos Stevenson, soprano; Miss F. M. Kenrick, solo pianist and accompanist; and Mr. Fred J. Perrin, refined humorous vocalist. All rendered their numbers in a manner, which made them first favourites with the audience.

Miss Hext is probably Canada's cleverest elocutionist and her recitations and statuesque posings were greatly admired. Miss Maud Trenglos Stevenson, Guelph's sweet voiced singer, has already been heard several times in Peterborough, but of such a voice as hers the public can never grow tired, and last evening the audience, after repeatedly encoring her, were even then loth to allow her to retire.

Miss Kenrick, as an accompanist and solo pianist, stands in the front rank of the musicians which the Canadian public have the privilege of hearing. Her selections last evening were well chosen and gave evidence of her perfect command over her instrument. The most difficult passages were accomplished with an ease acquired by a thorough understanding of the subject. Mr. Perrin is undoubtedly good, though hitherto comparatively unknown in this locality. His humour is of a nature so refined as not to offend the most fastidious critic, and is at the same time of such a laughter-provoking character as to ensure him success on the platform as a humorist. The audience were greatly taken with his intensely funny songs and quaint sayings. His facial gestures are funnier than "a barrel of monkeys," and he may always be assured of drawing bumper houses in Peterborough. The LINES.

In Loving Remembrance of Mr. Florens McAuliffe who Died November 11th 1894.

A brother dear as left his home,
Who unexpected fled,
He's sleeping in the graveyard now,
Among the silent dead.

He was but a tender flower,
That blossomed here and died,
The fondest of his parents dear,
Their darling and their pride,

He did not suffer long below,
Till his Father called him home
To join the heavenly choir above,
That chant around His throne.

We know his parents will feel sad,
When they think of the dear one gone,
But we know that they can say
O Lord, Thy will be done.

We need not call him back again,
For he is better far,
From sin and sorrow he is safe,
Within the gates afar.

Then sister, brothers, parents, friends,
Let us for death prepare,
That when called to the world on high,
We'll meet dear Florens there.

THE LORNES ROYALLY ENTERTAINED.

They Spend the Evening at the Residence of Mr. R. B. Rogers.

As the Lorne Rugby team did not return to Toronto until the early morning train they, together with the members of the home team, were most hospitably entertained during the evening by Mr. R. B. Rogers at his residence in Ashburnham.

The earlier part of the evening was spent in playing cards and afterwards nearly every man present contributed something in the way of recitation, story or song to the evening's enjoyment. Mr. Watson's humourous songs were most funny and he was quite the star of the evening.

Quite a number of speeches were made and the visitors expressed themselves as delighted with their treatment in Peterborough, and assured the boys that the match was by all odds the best which they had played during the season, and nowhere had they been treated so hospitably.

CLEGG, 427 George street.

THE LONDON ELECTION.

Referring to the London election, the Montreal Herald says: It means that the new policy of Mr. Marter, the narrow-minded bigot and picayune politician, who is rattling around in Mr. Meredith's shoes, is regarded with contempt by a very substantial majority of Ontario voters, including many Conservatives. It means, moreover, that Sir Oliver Mowat's Government is to be sustained and strengthened, now that it has been made apparent that there is a bare possibility of it being made the victim of cabals. Ontario never had the slighest intention of changing rulers, and the London election is the first of a series of expressions of that intention; the others will follow as succeeding bye-elections are held. And in the enormous majority we can see also something of that tremendous undertow towards Dominion Liberalism now setting in all over Canada.

THE result of the London election goes to show that the P. P. A., as a factor in politics, has lost its power to charm. London and its vicinity was a very hot bed of the order at the general election and the decided rebuff the electors gave to Mr. Essery, the champion of the movement, indicates that its strength is broken. The people have declared that they wish to deal with live issues and not fads, whose object is the perpetuation of feelings of sectarian bigotry and narrow-mindedness, which modern civilization has outgrown.

THE paternal Dominion Government seems to class the death-dealing diphtheria among the "industries" to be "encouraged" by high taxation. The customs house authorities, in Toronto, exacted a duty of $6 on $10 worth of anti-toxine, a remedy that may save hundreds of homes from the desolation of death. Such is statesmanship.

—THE Empire blames the Patrons for the snow under at London. This calamity would have been averted if the Patrons had qualified themselves for admission to the London lunatic asylum by joining the Empire in a demand for a special session of the Legislature.

THREE cheers for the doughty Young Liberals of London! They have shown the country what thorough organization and keeping everlastingly at it can do.—Brantford Expositor.

IT is said, remarks the Brantford Expositor, that when the saintly Margaret L. Shepherd heard of Brother Essery's defeat in London, she tore her store hair with anger.

THIS London election settles it. Mowat now has beyond question a majority over all. The majority will grow, says the Toronto News.

THE Ottawa Journal, Conservative Independent, asks "what is to become of the local Conservative party in Ontario?"

AN ASHBURNHAM BELLE IS WEDDED.

The Abraham-Tighe Nuptials Celebrated in St Luke's Church.

Miss Lizzie Tighe, youngest daughter of Mr. James Tighe, and one of the most popular young ladies of Ashbuenham, was quietly married yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock to Mr. Clement Abraham of Detroit.

The ceremony took place in St. Luke's church, and was performed by the rector, Rev. H. Symonds, before a limited number of invited guests, composed of relatives and the most intimate friends of the bride and groom.

Miss Ellen Tighe, cousin of the bride, was the bridesmaid, while the bride's brother, Mr. James Tighe, officiated as groomsman. The bride was prettily attired in a handsome blue serge travelling suit, and carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums, as did the bridesmaid, who was also gowned in blue. The bride was given away by her father, and at the conclusion the party returned to Mr. Tighe's residence where a wedding dejeuner was served. Mr. and Mrs. Abraham left by the evening train for their future home in Detroit.

CARD OF THANKS.

To Wm. McMullen, Assistant Superintendent of the New York Life Insurance Co., of New York, 374 George Street, Peterborough:

I beg to express my thanks to the Company for the prompt payment of my claim ($24.00) on the death of my son, Florens, who was insured in your company at a weekly premium of 5c.

Your plan of Industrial Insurance and policies in immediate benefit are a great help in time of need.

JOHN MCAULIFFE,
1d Peterborough.

Town Failures.

Why should people be foolish enough to pay $4 to $5 for all-wool pants when W. J. Green, Hunter street, would give them for $3.00, made to order and guaranteed to fit.

In is nonsense to spend money, it matters not how small the amount, for poor clothing. Wisdom consists in buying Grafton & Co's make every time.

Protect your Horses.

Don't allow your valuable horses to go without a waterproof cover during the cold wet days of the fall. Be good to them, provide them with one of Kingscotte's strictly waterproof covers, costing only a dollar or two. If you are shipping and receiving goods that are liable to damage from wet, Kingscotte's black oiled canvas waterproof covers "fills the bill,"—nothing better or cheaper. They have no tar in their composition, being an oil preparation, which keeps them soft and pliable. Awnings taken down and stored in a careful and agreeable manner. Halls decorated for assemblies, balls and meetings of all kinds. ALF. KINGSCOTTE, tent, sail and awning maker, 344 Water street.

WILL BEGIN ON SATURDAY.

On Saturday, Nov. 24th, the sale of the China Hall stock will begin, and continue for two weeks—or until the whole stock has been disposed of. The goods have been reduced from 25 to 50 per cent., and in some cases 75 per cent., so there will be big bargains for everyone. Dinner, Tea and Chamber Sets, Silver Ware, Lamp Goods, Ornaments, etc., at prices that cannot be repeated again. Buy now for Christmas. China Hall and Silver Bazaar, Saturday, Nov. 24th.

A "Cold" Day!

You caught a cold last week—one of those long, lingering sorts of colds that's sneezy thing to get. Everybody you knew, and some people whom you had never been introduced to, told you what to take, and the more you took the more cold you took. Finally you went to see a doctor. He felt your pulse, told you to hold out your tongue, which felt like an all wool blanket, and advised you to drink plenty of COLD WATER, take two grains of quinine every two hours—and wear a good warm Overcoat. "Two dollars, please," said the doctor, and as you paid him like a little man, you made up your mind that if you had bought an Overcoat when you should, you would have saved your two dollars, the quinine, and wouldn't have to drink so much COLD WATER.

We Will Back Our Overcoats

Against any Others in Canada

for saving doctors' bills, and you couldn't have better advice than to get into one of GOUGH'S tip-top Overcoats FORTHWITH.

Buy a $4.00 one if you can't afford a better one, as that may save a five dollar doctor's bill. Buy an All-Wool $10 one for $6 50 if you want a better one—or if you want a heap o style for your money, we've got the extreme styles at from $12 to $15.

OUR 1/2 PRICE SALE

BOOMING! BOOMING! BOOMING!

People who complain of hard times need only to stick their heads in here and take a look at the crowds surrounding every department and they'll be convinced of the truth of our statement. And the best of it is—there's no limit to what's going—just as good to-day as on any day last week when the big crash commenced.

MR. JOHN WALTER DEAD.

Sketch of the Late Proprietor of the London Times.

Mr. John Walter, who has just died at the age of seventy-six, was the third of his name who has held proprietorship in the Times. The paper was established on January 1, 1788, by his grandfather, a printer, bookseller and publisher possessed of a large business at Charing Cross. At first the enterprise was so unprofitable that its discontinuance was seriously contemplated, but under the founder's son, a man of energy, education and foresight, who succeeded his father in 1810, the Times ascended in public favor and political influence, and eventually became a highly remunerative concern.

On the death of this gentleman his son was twenty-nine years of age and had just been returned to parliament as the liberal conservative member for Nottingham. He had been educated at Eton and Exeter college, Oxford—where he took a second class in 1840—was a barrister of Lincoln's Inn and had made the "grand tour." Delane styled the greatest newspaper genius that England has produced, was then editor of The Times, and held undisputed sway. For many years Mr. Walter, secretly chafing, perhaps, recognized to the full Delane's autocracy, although this involved his own personal effacement. But at last an opportunity of changing matters arose. Delane appeared to be in failing health, Mr. Walter wrote him a letter, retiring him on $10,000 a year and forthwith took upon himself the supreme control of the paper, Mr. Chenery, the new editor, holding a position of compartively inferiority, which the imperious Delane would never have consented to occupy.

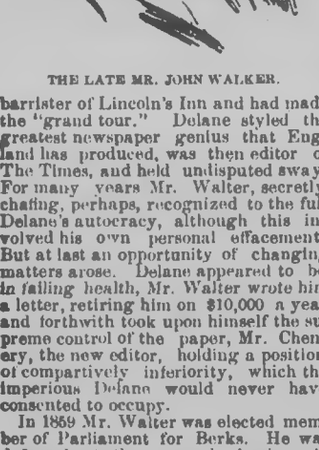
In 1859 Mr. Walter was elected member of Parliament for Berks. He was defeated at the general election six years later, but was again elected in 1868, 1874 and 1880. After the dissolution of 1885 he did not again seek Parliamentary honors. He was known as an excellent public speaker, was moderately liberal in politics and took a deep interest in the subject of education. When he visited America thirteen years ago he spent a considerable time in visiting the schools of our cities. The present offices of the Times Printing House square, comprising workshops where all the materials used by the Times are made, were built by Mr. Walter. He also built the magnificent house on the estate of Bearwood, in Berkshire, a lordly mansion, the ground floor alone of which has room for 3,000 guests. In the grounds is a lake, in which his eldest son was drowned while skating a good many years ago.



Turkey—Well, I declare! This thing will be the death of me!

NOT ON THE BILLS.

He Lost His Job, but Made Sure of His Girl.

An actress who summered in England this year told me a tale yesterday that I thought interesting. She said:

"In a play touring the provinces there is a scene in which the hero strikes the villain, who slinks away without seeking to defend himself.

"One night, in a large manufacturing town, the young fellow who played the deep-dyed scoundrel remarked to the leading man before the curtain rose:

"I say, old chap, I've got my fiancee out in front to-night with her father and mother. Now, of course they don't know anything about our business, and I'm afraid it would rather hurt me with them if I received a blow and got away in the usually cowardly fashion. So, dear old chap, can't you omit the blow to-night?

"But, my boy, the management will fine me two shillings.

"Well, I'll pay the fine.

"Oh, yes, that's all very well for you. But what do I get out of it? Nothing but a bad name with the powers that be."

"Oh, well, I'll give you two shillings extra; or better yet, you hit me as usual and I'll hit back. They'll fine me, not you, and I'll give you the two shillings besides. You see how I'm situated. I shouldn't like the girl to mix me up with the character I play, outsiders are to funny that way."

"So the compact was made, and that night when the hero cried:

"Sir Daniel Deepwater" or something of that sort—"base offspring of a noble race, take that"——

"Sir Daniel not only 'took that,' but gave it back with such force that 'the pit rose at him,' including his relatives-to-be by marriage, and he walked off the stage in triumph.

"I am sorry to add he lost his situation, but he gained his point."—New York Recorder.

An Amusing Mistake

"Barclay's mission," to Atlanta, is known everywhere as the original "Sunday School on Wheels." The interest manifested in this famous mission by Mr. J. F. Barclay has led some persons to believe that Mr. Barclay is a minister. Now, Mr. Barclay is in the undertaking business, and thereby hangs a tale.

The other day a very serious young man entered his establishment.

"I would like to speak with Mr. Barclay," he said.

That gentleman stepped forward.

The young man looked more serious than ever, but he said:

"I—I want you to come around to my house this afternoon at 3 o'clock."

"Very well," said Mr. Barclay.

The young man hesitated, coughed, and added:

"It's such a serious matter, that——"

"All funerals are," observed Mr. Barclay.

"But this isn't exactly a funeral," explained the young man, "it's a marriage, and I want you to tie the knot for us."

"But, my dear friend," said the astonished Mr. Barclay. "I am not a minister!"

"Not a minister?"

"Certainly not!"

"Then," cried the young man, in a hopeless voice, "I'm done for! Eternally done for! My girl told me that she would never marry me unless you performed the ceremony, and if you don't get a license to preach right away, I'll be a bachelor forever!"—Atlanta Constitution.

A Terrible Experience:

Mr. Geo. Tribe, of Straffordville, Ont. a pretty village near the shores of Lake Erie, went through an experience lately that he will never forget. He tells it in his own words:

"For three years I suffered from skin disease in its worst form. I tried Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura remedies, and doctored one year with the best physicians in the land, but got no benefit; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but failed to remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard, white scales; the itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. I can truly say I owe my good health to B. B. B., and I advise all sufferers to use this splendid medicine.

DR. HOLMES ON HEALTH.

THE AUTOCRAT'S SANITARY ADVICE LIBERAL AND FREE.

Was an Early Reformer — Advised Throwing Physic to the Dogs, or, Rather, the Fishes, and Taking Fresh Air and Plenty of Exercise for Medicine—Stressed Over-Eating.

The demand for Oliver Wendell Holmes' medical works has always been limited. His admirers did not think it probable that the great poet, humorist and table-talk philosopher could have much leisure for pathological studies.

But the fact is that Dr. Holmes was a practical physician of more than local reputation, and indulged his penchant for belles letters only as a pleasant by-trade. It is true that he could never forego a chance for a good joke, and the reputation of his semi-humorous works on physiology and medical reform may have been injured by the common belief that an entertaining book can possibly be profound—as a glaring instance vide Gladstone's remarks on Colonel Ingersoll's metaphysics, or The Edinburgh Review's criticism of Carlyle's historical works,

But those who have rid themselves of that stupid prejudice will find a collection of Dr. Holmes' professional works a perfect thesaurus of valuable health hints. After his return from Europe the accomplished doctor began to evince a predilection for hygienic remedies, and for a "fellow of the Massachusetts Medical Society" and Harvard professor of anatomy and physiology, his arguments against the methods of the old school drug doctors were amazingly outspoken.

"We cannot yet dispense with opium," he says, "nor with the vapors that work the miracle of anæsthesia, but if, with those exceptions, the whole materia medica, as now used, could be sunk to the bottom of the sea, it would be all the better for mankind—and all the worse for the fishes."

As the chief obstacle in the path of sanitary reform he recognized the prevalence of the idea that the sick must be fed on poisons, and treated his Harvard class to an anecdote about one of his colleagues, who was called to a man with a terribly sore mouth. On inquiry he found that the man had picked up a box of unknown pills in Howard street and had proceeded to take them on general principles, pills being good for people. They happened to contain mercury and this explained the trouble for which he had consulted our associate.

Next to the drug plague, he considers dietetic delusions a chief cause of disease and advises parents to study the sanitary instincts of their children who, if left to the guidance of nature, are pretty sure to prefer farinaceous dishes to animal food and water to alcohol. Hard-working people, too, are instinctively afraid of surfeits, knowing from experience, if not from Schrodt's Hygiene, that they cannot do their work well while all the vital energies of the system are monopolized by the digestive organs. Gormands, he thinks, should try the effect of exciting work or sport as a trick for deafening the ear to the sound of the dinner-horn and cheating the esurient stomach out of the coveted surfeit. "Have you ever noticed," he asks, "how frequent habitual gluttony is among idlers, and how rare among busy people? With wrong eating, as distinct, from overeating, it is frequently the reverse, and workingmen as a class, suffer less from insufficient than from ill-selected food, though in many such cases their poverty and not their will consents. Well-to-do sinners have no valid excuse, and the moral cowardice that makes us swallow ruinous liquors and made dishes to avoid a breach of etiquette is really much more unpardonable than the folly that tempts a young woman to sacrifice her health on the altar of fashion."

Holmes passed some of his summer vacations in the South and always talked of California as a country of limitless possibilities, but withal held that for indoor workers the climate of New England was far from being the worst. "You can manufacture your own atmospheric conditions," he says, "by simply opening a window and mixing your artificial heat with the still air-currents which nature keeps on tap for nine months of our year." The overheated, stifling atmosphere of ill-ventilated sick rooms made him treat many of his patients to a private lecture, and he would have found excuses for the conduct of Dr. Zacharin, of St. Petersburg, who a few weeks ago refused to answer the questions of the Czar's relatives before he had opened every window and chased a swarm of flunkeys out of the room. "Get out of this," he growled, without noticing the protesting look of the sick Emperor, "the air in this room is enough to give any one a fit of cholera."

The learned New Englander had, indeed, a supreme faith in the remedial virtues of the keen breezes that form a staple commodity of his native land, and held that half an hour's work with a snow-shovel would be a first-class substitute for the barefoot races in a dew-drenched meadow to which the patients of Pastor Kneipp ascribes their miraculous recoveries. The mountain cure for consumption excited his liveliest interest and a few years ago he came very near taking a trip to Santiago de Cuba, where a Spanish physician had succeeded in curing desperate cases of yellow fever in ice-cooled hospitals "The cure of germ diseases by changes of temperature," he thought, would make a good title for a much-needed treatise, and called attention to the suggestive fact that not only the yellow fever epidemics of our Gulf States, but cholera morbus, digestive disorders and the frightful mortality of children are yearly abated by the first November frost. The "germ theory" he hints, derives its chief practical significance from the fact that microbes can be killed by a degree of cold or heat which man, their living boarding house, can easily weather.

A fluid diet was another of his favorite prescriptions, and he more than once quotes the long list of disorders which Bishop Berkeley managed to cure with tar water—insinuating, however, that tar had nothing to do with the efficacy of the specific. "That good and great man, with all his store of learning, got saddled with two very strange ideas, viz.: That tar water was everything and the whole material universe nothing." Fresh spring water would have been equally cheap and more palatable and really forms the efficient constituent of the mineral spas which so many thousands visit at a great expense of money and time. The effect of a blood-diluting and system-cleansing diet is also the secret of the many successful grape juices, whey-cures, etc., and a few dimes' worth of home-made lemonade would obviate the necessity of many an expensive journey to distant health resorts. He was no hydropathist in the shower bath of ice water sense of the word, but admitted that he could not help envying the old Romans their system of public baths, and took every opportunity to urge the imitation of their example.

Among the main causes of nervous disorders he lamented the noisiness of modern city life:

> The very air is simmering like a sea
> Over a pent volcano—woe is me!
> All the day long!

But he doubts if patients of a sensitive organization should be advised to seek relief in villages and expose themselves to the impertinent curiosity of rustic idlers and their perpetual rounds of mischief-making and back biting for want of better pastimes. "Our happy hunting grounds," he says, "are fast becoming a tradition of the past; in gameless country districts the descendants of Daniel Boone welcome a newcomer as a godsend for the gratification of their gossip mania, and if a philosopher should retire to the wilderness of the upper Alleghenies to commune with the spirit of solitude, his next neighbors would crawl under his house to spy for a secret distillery."

Croakers he dreaded as the pestilence of society and urged his colleagues to exclude them from every sick room, even at the very risk of keeping a patient in ingorance of his peril, nay, of the imminence of death itself. His remarks on a physician's duty in predicaments of that kind are worth quoting as a unique contribution to the literature of modern casuistry. "Truth in the abstract," he says in a valedictory address to the Harvard graduates, "is perhaps, made too much of as compared to certain other laws established by as high authority. For it seems to me that no one virtue should be allowed to exclude all others with which, in this mortal state, it may sometimes stand in opposition. Absolute justice must not be tempered by mercy; absolute truth by the law of self-preservation and by the exigencies of human frailty, which cannot always bear its shock in health, and much less in disease. I think I am not the first to utter the following caution: 'Beware how you take away hope from any human being.' Nothing is clearer than that the merciful Creater intends to blind most people as they down the death valley. Without very good reasons, temporal or spiritual, we should not interfere with His kind arrangements. It is the height of cruelty and the extreme of impertinence to tell your patient that he must die, except you are sure that he wishes to know it, or that there is some particular cause for his knowing it. I should be especially unwilling to tell a child that it cannot recover. God leads it by the hand to the edge of the precipice in happy unconsciousness, and I would not open its eyes to what He wisely conceals."

Nature rewarded the kind old doctor by leading him, too, to the very portals of Nivana, before he suspected the seriousness of the symptoms that had alarmed one of his medical friends; and his death, like that of the poet-philosopher Goethe, was a true enthanasia. Hope, good humor, and what he calls, "the habit of success," had helped him to celebrate his 85th birthday in tolerably good health, and after a few days of indisposition—or rather non-disposition to active exercise, the extinction of consciousness came as quietly as its eclipse in welcome slumber.

A Home Sanitary.

There should always be one spot in the home kept sacred to the best interests of the family—a room full of comfort, where the sofa is made to lounge on, and the chairs to tilt back, and the carpet to dig the toes in; where bills and bickerings are alike forbidden, and straight-laced propriety of the dining-room and the parlor can be abandoned for romps and story-telling; where the firelight has a glow of old-fashioned comfort, and the very shadows are tame and approachable; where the dust does not show and nothing is too fine for use, and at the door of which all the burdens drop off—a room whose speech is silver, and whose silence is golden, where the tranquility of a summer Sabbath is broken only by sweet murmurs of love and confidence, where a happy cat curls herself to repose in blissful affinity with a peaceful house-dog; a place where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest—a sort of moral lean-to, which adjoins the house beautiful. Every home should have this one place of retreat. It is no impossible place. Love is the architect; content is its atmostphere. We find it in our friend's homes, often where least expected, and are surprised because it is never a show place. It is simply "a golden room" in a wooden house.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

Gives Instant Relief.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the warmth of bed becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—bleed and ulcerate form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly troubled from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and pruritis. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and absorb up the moisture.

PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause than Itching Piles, yet its effects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

PHYSICIANS FAILED

BUT B.B.B. CURED

DEAR SIRS—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. I was treated by a skilled physician but he failed to cure me. I had three Running Sores on my neck which could not be healed until I tried B. B. B., which healed them completely, leaving the skin and flesh sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

MRS. W. BENNETT, Acton P. O. Ont.

A SCALY ERUPTION

UNENDURABLE ITCHING

Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B. B. B.

GENTLEMEN—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured. I tried other remedies, such as Donald Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura Remedies, but all to no good. I doctored one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. B.

THE HOME RUGBY TEAM SNOWS THE LORNES UNDER.

A Great Game in the Driving Park, Yesterday—The Peterborough Footballers Prove Conclusively That the Town Possesses a Crack Organisation.

Peterborough is not a football town. The limited attendance at the last two splendid matches is ample proof of this fact, but even if the game is not patronized to a very large extent, the town possesses a Rugby team of which the citizens should well be proud, and those who witnessed the great Thanksgiving Day match yesterday at the Driving Park, went home in a high state of elation, engendered by the manner in which the local team bore itself upon the field.

The visiting fifteen was composed of the best team the Lorne's of Toronto could put in the field, and the Lornes are the champion team in their class in Toronto, and have a membership of one hundred and twenty to pick from. Their first team has had plenty of experience in the playing of matches and thus possessed an advantage over the Peterboroughs in that respect. Even in the visitors favour did not avail them much on the field, however, as the most creditable score of twenty-two was rolled up by the home team, while the Lornes were only successful in securing five points.

A victory so pronounced over such an unquestionably strong organization as the Lornes, speaks volumes regarding the mettle of which the home team is made and ranks the Peterboroughs among the crack teams of the Province. The visitors were outplayed on every point of the game with the exception of one—the punting of of their halves was a trifle better than that of Peterboroughs, but the half-backs of the home team made up for their deficiency in this respect by their magnificent system of accurate passing while running with the ball. Again and again, during the progress of the game, the spectators shouted themselves hoarse and applauded till their arms were wearied, as the ball would be accurately passed along to Moore and he would break through, followed in the majority of cases by Jones. Then ahead of the whole field would take place. The visiting halves and the full back would be cleverly out-manoeuvred by the passing of the ball, and finally Moore with a magnificent rush would be over the line, hanging to the ball like grim death and with almost a score of men piled on top of him. The score was made, however, and presently the mass of tangled arms and legs would gradually assume shape, and with a mighty cheer the spectators would signify to the valiant "Pop" their appreciation of his brilliant work. Moore is a Canadian General man and is an old 'Varsity boy, but though he is well known in the football circles of Ontario, as a crack player, yet never before did he play so brilliantly and well as yesterday. He was most ably supported by Jones, who played as did also McIntosh. Lefevre's accurate judgment in converting the tries into goals was greatly admired. Every time the privilege of a try was earned, the ball would rise straight and true to its mark, as the result of his trained eye and foot.

A RATTLIN GOOD GAME

Strickland was a tower of strength in the scrimmage, and out on the line of forwards, the boys all did exceptionally well, and held their men down in a manner above criticism. In fact Bell generally managed to look after two of the opposing forwards, and more than once cantered gaily off after the ball, leaving two of the Lornes sprawling on the ground as the result of his prowess.

For the visitors Watson at quarter, did good work, as did Meek in the scrimmage. Morton played a brilliant game on the half back line, as did Macdonald, but Fenton made a couple of costly errors at critical moments, of which the Peterboroughs were most prompt to take advantage.

The two teams lined up on the field as follows:

Peterborough.		Lornes.
L King	Back	McMaster
Moore	Halves	McDonald
Lefevre		Morton
S Adams		Fenton
Leefe	Quarter	Watson (capt.)
Strickland	Scrimmage	Meek
Coyler		Wilson
McIntosh		Jeffrey
Bell	Forwards	Merrick
Pousette		Featherstone
Jones		McMillan
Moore		Hedley
Goldsmith		Passmore
Kerr		Gurd
Corrie-Smith		Widdard

For over half an hour the crowd of players

SURGED UP AND DOWN

the field and to the spectators it was difficult to judge just which team was in the best form. Finally, however, the Peterboroughs warmed to their work and with a rush Moore and Jones broke through and by means of accurate passing brought the ball far down into the Lorne's territory and perilously near their touch-line. Across the field and back again the sphere travelled without perceptibly nearing touch, finally the sphere was shot out of the scrimmage to Fenton, one of the Lornes' halves, but he lost his head and although he had plenty of time to pick the ball up, he attempted to kick it while it was in the air and failing to meet it squarely it glanced off his foot across the sideline.

LIKE A FLASH

Jones was after it and quickly threw it into McIntosh before the Lornes had time to line up. "Mac" responded nobly to the call which was made upon him, and dashed down to touch with the sphere, scoring four points for Peterborough. A try followed, and Lefevre converted it into a goal, raising the score to 6. No more points were scored during the first half.

Shortly afterwards "Pop" Moore made the most brilliant run of the day, when he broke through and succeeded in getting across the line, and Peterborough's score was raised to 10. The visitors by a determined effort and brilliant rally made their first score by a touch in goal, counting one point.

The ball was kept hovering around the visitors' sticks for some time and finally crossed the line with the local men so close upon it that the Lornes were and a few minutes later had to again resort to a safety touch to save a touch down. The score now stood 12-1 in favour of Peterborough, but it was not suffered to remain stationary for any length of time, as Strickland got his fingers on it and passing it along to McIntosh it was soon in the hands of Jones and Moore, and in another moment a great roar of applause signified that Peterborough had scored another touch and try. Lefevre once more converted the try into a goal and the score stood 18—1.

The Lornes were awarded a penalty kick a few minutes later and kicking a goal off it, their score was thereby raised to 5, where it remained for the rest of the game. Peterborough, however, kept on scoring and soon raised their figures to 22. Time was called before any more points were secured. There was a misunderstanding existing as to the exact score which had been made, and the referee decided in the end to fix the score at 17—5, in favour of Peterborough. Mr. W. J. Montgomery, in the discharge of his duties as referee, gave general satisfaction, as did the umpire, Mr. Harold Morrow.

LOCATED IN TORONTO.

An Absconding Trio the American Authorities Are Wanting.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Acting Detective Holder, of the Sixth Precinct, Jersey City, is sure that John H. Decker, a salesman of F. M. Guaraglia, a wholesale liquor dealer, of 491 Palisade avenue, Jersey City, who decamped last Friday evening with about $300 of his employer's money, is in Toronto, Canada. It has been found that Decker, who has a wife living in West Hoboken, from whom he is separated, has been living at 73 Sherman avenue, with a woman named Annie Mosher. Two trunks were removed from the house on Friday to the West Shore depot in Hoboken. They were checked to Weehawken. There they were transferred to the Grand Central depot, New York. The trunks were marked "J. Lewis, 205 Yonge street, Toronto, Canada."

Thus Decker had attempted to throw his pursuers off the track. Decker was under bonds to pay his legal wife $28 a month. The bonds expired a few days ago and Decker told a friend that he did not intend to contribute any more to his wife's support and was going to skip. Decker left his wife because, as he alleged, he caught her in flagrante delicto with a man. When a child was born he refused to father it. Annie Mosher is a sister-in-law of Meygret, one of the three moonshiners arrested near Carlstadt, N.J., some months ago. Meygret was put under $2,500 bail and he skipped to Canada. It is thought Decker has gone to join him.

The National Fraternal Congress.

BUFFALO, Nov. 23.—The last day of the convention of the National Fraternal Congress was marked by a tribute of courtesy to Canada and a compliment to the Canadian Queen City, Toronto being selected as the place for holding the next congress. A paper by Dr. Oronhyatekha, on "Fraternal Beneficiary Societies v. Old Line Insurance Companies," was ordered printed. The next congress will convene on the third Tuesday in November, 1895. The Independent Order of Foresters in the evening tendered a reception to Dr. Oronhyatekha, of Toronto, chief ranger of the order, who has been in attendance at the fraternal congress in this city.

Shooting Accident Near Whitby.

WHITBY, Ont., Nov. 23.—Edgar Pascoe, aged 18, son of Edward Pascoe, a farmer on the 3rd concession of Whitby township, four miles from here, while shooting squirrels, accidentally shot himself in the right side while drawing the gun, a double-barrelled breech loader, through a fence. He was accompanied by a young Englishman at the time and they managed to reach Pascoe's home, where Drs. McGillivray and Warren dressed the wound. It is a dangerous one, having caused a hemorrhage of the lung as well as lascerating fearfully the side and shoulders.

Bob Fitzsimmons Exonerated.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 23.—The inquest touching the death of Con Riordon was held last night before Coroner Roberts and a jury. The jury brought in the following verdict after a long wrangle, which lasted from 11 p. m. till 12.30 a. m: "We find that Cornelius Riordon came to his death on the evening of Friday, Nov. 16, from an accidental blow delievred by Robert Fitzsimmons while engaged in a legal sparring exhibition on the stage of the H. B. Jacobs Opera House. We exonerate Robert Fitzsimmons from all blame."

Anxiety for a Freight Steamer.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The White Star freight steamer Bovic, which sailed from Liverpool on November 9, is three days overdue and has not been sighted since she left port. She is one of the staunchest boats which sails from this port and almost uniformly makes the passage across the Atlantic in ten days and her non-arrival causes some uneasiness. It was her sister ship, the Naronic, which some two years ago sailed from New York and was never heard of after.

Well-Known Art Fancier Dead.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 23.—William T. Walters, one of the wealthiest and best-known citizens of Baltimore and the owner of the finest art collection in the world, died yesterday at his home on Mount Vernon Place. The immediate cause of his death was paralysis of the stomach and bright's disease. Mr. Walters was financially interested in nearly every important enterprise in Baltimore. He was in his 76th year and a widower.

Shot and Killed Two Brothers.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 23.—Charles Boulter shot and killed Thomas and Michael O'Neill, brothers, in a restaurant. Boulter, accompanied by his wife and sister, entered the restaurant and soon afterwards the brothers quarrelled and clinched. Boulter expostulated because there were women present and tried to part the men, when both attacked him and he fired. The brothers died in a few hours. Boulter was badly injured.

The Corean's Rough Passage.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Nov. 23.—The overdue Allan line steamer Corean, from Liverpool for this port and Philadelphia, arrived here after 16 days voyage in weather which Captain Main reports as being the worst ever experienced within his knowledge. Immense seas broke over her, rendering it impossible for officers of the ship to manoeuvre her. Snow storms were frequent and the ship was a mass of ice, looking as she entered the harbor like on enormous iceburg. Oil had to be used to break the force of the seas. Otherwise the officers say that the Corean would have foundered. The sixty passengers aboard the Corean expected to go to the bottom every minute. No serious damage was sustained by the vessel.

CARNEGIE ON CURRENCY

A Capitalist's View of the Business Outlook in the States.

THE PRESIDENTIAL MESSAGE

Announcement of a Change in the Tariff and a New Financial Policy Would Again Temporarily Derange the Business of the Country.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 24.—In an interview on the business outlook Andrew Carnegie said: "This is not, in my opinion, the time when any valuable forecast can be made. It is reported that we are to have a sensational presidential message looking to a change in our currency system. No matter whether the scheme would be better than that which we have, still the waters would be troubled and business must suffer. This is one objection to tinkering at short intervals with any policy, tariff or currency. It is bad enough with the tariff but it is highly dangerous when the money and currency of a nation are tampered with.

"I did my best to impress upon the powers that be, after the July panic of 1893, that the nation as a patient was not in a position to undergo a surgical operation, and I had hopes that President Cleveland's usual good sense would lead him to postpone his tariff changes until the general health of the patient was good at least. This advice was not followed. The patient had a great shock, the greatest shock that the United States ever had, the civil war excepted, and it is in my opinion a mistake to look for speedy recovery. No matter what improvements can be made in our financial system this is no time for a change. President Cleveland has been as sound upon money as President Harrison was, and I can scarcely believe that he meditates a measure that must temporarily derange the business of the country, and this any new policy must do.

"The action of Congress is also an important factor. If the country is to be excited by threatened changes in the tariff no matter if those changes would be ultimately beneficial—of course I do not believe they would be—still they would disturb the confidence not only of the people at home but of he capitalists abroad. Therefore you see we must wait until the turn of the year before any reasonable opinion can be formed."

American Trade Report.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—The features of the general trade for the week, reported by Bradstreet's, include an increase in distribution of holiday goods, heavy clothing, hats, seasonable dry goods and at various points hardware and shoes. This was stimulated by seasonably colder weather and a continuance of the feeling of confidence in a nearby improvement in demand. From points in Southeastern Atlantic states some hesitancy is reported in supplying goods before making collections for the full season's business. At eastern cities the volume of trade in dry goods has fallen off, although the tone of the market is good, and colder weather inclined to help it. The total volume of bank clearings at 71 cities is $1,019,000,000, almost exactly the amount reported in the week before.

A Well-to-Do Farmer Suicides.

OLEAN, N. Y., Nov. 24.—After eating a hearty meal James Blauvelt, a well-to-do farmer, living near Sharon Centre, Pa., went out under a tree on his farm and shot himself through the heart. Last year under the same tree he accidentally killed his three-year-old son by running over him with a mowing machine. A few years before that he accidentally killed his brother near the same spot. These two accidents together with the loss of his wife who died last week leaving a family of nine children drove him to suicide.

Smallpox in Michigan.

SEBEWA, Mich, Nov. 24.—Several new cases of smallpox are reported at Sebewa Corners. Albert Bradley, of Sebewa, died Thursday of confluent smallpox. The authorities are taking all precautions against an epidemic. But the exposure has been so general that little headway is made. There are now no less than 15 cases in Danby and Sebewa. Portland people held a public meeting and will keep patrol on all points of ingress to keep out parties from infected districts.

Earthquake in West Virginia.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 24.—An earthquake shock was felt yesterday in this city. It lasted only a few seconds and was followed by deep rumblings. Windows rattled and a number of clocks stopped.

CLARA FORD'S MOTIVE

Why it is Supposed She Bore Malice Against Young Westwood.

TRACING HER MOVEMENTS

She Was Seen in the Vicinity of the Westwood Residence Late on the Night of the Murder—A Suspicious Circumstance Told by Her Daughter.

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—Nothing new has been made public officially in the Westwood shooting case, but there seems now no room to doubt that the rumor of a confession on the part of Clara Ford, the alleged murderess, are well founded, and that the declaration of guilty made by her on her first appearance in court was not a slip of the ordinary kind, but a deliberate admission of guilt. The police will not admit they have a confession, but do not positively deny it.

Meantime the motive of the crime has been no doubt discovered. It appears that young Westwood, the murdered lad, knew the prisoner was in the habit of masquerading as a man in the suburb of Parkdale and also knew her record, without, however, being aware of her passionate temper or her general hatred of men.

He met her on the Lake Shore road one night last summer and offered her violence. She threw him off with ease, being far stronger than he, but vowed revenge. She kept her word by shooting him fatally on the doorstep of his father's house. This, it is said, is the story of the tragedy.

It has been learned that on the night of the murder Clara Ford at 9 o'clock left her abode on York street and went to Camden street and there called at the residence of Mrs. Crozier, who lives with her family at No. 34.

She stayed but a short time and went away without saying where she was going. Mrs. Crozier had been in the habit of washing Clara's linen for her.

They had all heard her relate her stories of her adventures in male attire, of having travelled about the country by beating her way on freight trains and of other escapades.

When she left on the night of the shooting she was then clad in female garb. Assuming that it was she who fired the shot, then she must have changed her clothing after she left the Croziers', for, according to the story told by Frank Westwood, the person who shot him was at least clad in men's clothing.

A policeman of No. 6 Division, however, saw sitting on the steps at the foot of Jameson avenue, late on the night of the murder, a woman whom he thought to be Clara Ford. If he is correct she had not even then changed her clothing.

Flora McKay whose name has from the first been so closely associated with that of the prisoner is not a sister, but a child of Clara Ford.

She worked at 282 Jarvis street and Mrs. Phyle who keeps the house when interviewed said she knew Clara Ford well, knew that she had a violent temper, but did not think her capable of foul murder.

Flora McKay stated that the night previous to the murder she met her mother at the corner of Richmond and Bay streets and her mother told her to state if ever asked that the two of them went to the theatre on the Saturday night of the murder.

The little girl said she knew her mother sometimes wore men's clothes. Some years ago she had seen her so attired.

Mono Mills Shooting Affair.

ORANGEVILLE, Nov. 24.—John S. Harkies, of Mono Mills, who has charged his wife with the shooting, by which he nearly lost an arm, on Monday, now charges Mrs. Kidd, his wife's sister, with being an accessory. This is the culmination of events which began in August last, when John Kidd, who lives at Mono Mills, and is 98 years old, married Gertrude Robbins, who was just sixteen. The aged bridegroom objected to his wife's relatives and asked his son to send them away. He was afterwards arrested, charged with assault, and bound over to keep the peace. Mrs. Harkies and Mrs. Kidd remained in Orangeville after the trial, and on Monday night Harkies drove his wife to Mono Mills. The party arrived rather late and went to the mother-in-law's house. That is all Harkies did. He put away the horse, and when he returned the door of the house was locked to him. Gently he knocked, but without avail. Then he kicked in a panel of the door and put his arm through to unlock it. There was a report and Harkies' left arm dropped to his side. The bullet had gone completely through. Mrs. Harkies has been granted bail.

Hunting Accident Near Bradford.

BRADFORD, Ont., Nov. 24.—On Thanksgiving Day a number of Toronto sports were in this vicinity hunting. One of them, who would not divulge his name, except to the doctor, mistook the black fur cap on the head of Mr. Thos. Bennett, of this place, for a black squirrel and planted about a dozen shot in the back of Bennett's neck. Bennett and another man were sawing wood in Mr. James Wood's bush, and was in a stooping position when this intelligent sportsman saw the cap moving back and forth with the movements of the saw. Fortunately the shot entered the fleshy part of the neck so that no serious results will follow. The sport made arrangements with doctor to attend the injured man and also left a deposit to be applied towards the support of his family.

Cattle Lost in the Gale.

NORTH SYDNEY, C.B., Nov. 24.—The steamer State of Georgia, from Montreal for London with a cargo of grain and cattle, arrived here yesterday, badly damaged. She encountered Tuesday's gale at the mouth of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Over 1,000 cattle and sheep were killed and swept overboard with parts of iron rails, boats and everything moveable on deck, while considerable damage was done to the ship itself. Most of the crew were bruised and hurt and had their hands badly frozen.

PORT ARTHUR FALLEN

China's Strong Naval Station Captured After Desperate Fighting.

THE ROAD CLEAR TO PEKIN

China's Scattered Forces Take Refuge Among the Mountain Passes—Both Sides Lost Heavily—China Will [Not Likely Resist Japan Any Longer.

CHEE FOO, Nov. 24.—Port Arthur has fallen. The backbone of Chinese resistance has given way and the mountain passes that lie between the great naval station and Pekin now shelter the scattered remnants of the Emperor's forces. Word has just reached here that Port Arthur fell after a battle that lasted 18 hours. The reports of the fighting are very meagre, but it is believed that both sides suffered heavily. China's loss, it is said, exceeds that of Japan, for, undisciplined as the Emperor's soldiers were, they fought with the desperation of tigers.

The attack on Port Arthur by the Japanese second army under Gen. Oyama was so carefully planned that when fire was opened the Japanese troops assailed the city at every point. The fighting was terrible and was only ended when the Chinese, unable to struggle any longer, withdrew in retreat to the mountain passes near by, leaving the city at the mercy of the foes.

The fall of Port Arthur clears the way to Pekin for Japan. Whether or not that city will suffer a like fate must depend upon what action China will take within a very few days. Already China has asked for peace on the terms of paying two hundred and fifty million taels, or $175,000,000 for it. With Pekin in peril no one can estimate what figure Japan will place upon peace.

The plans of the Japanese for an advance upon Pekin have succeeded completely. At Moukden an advance through the interior was hazardous as to be almost impossible. The second army was sent to silence Port Arthur and it has done so. With the great naval station in Japanese hands and with Japan's victorious fleet guarding the place on the waterside, China's fleet is powerless.

Japan, on the other hand, has a clear road by land around the Leaotan Gulf, thence along the westerly shores of the Pe Chi Li Gulf to Chi Tien Tsen. With the Japanese army in pursuit the Chinese must make their last stand in the mountains that are in the path to Tien Tsin. These passes may be held for a long time if the Chinese army can be rallied sufficiently to make a stand.

It is not believed here that China will continue the war any longer. Port Arthur is regarded by all European military and naval critics as the keystone of China's defence and without which she will be at Japan's mercy.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—A despatch from the Central News correspondent in Shanghai says that the Japanese captured Port Arthur on Wednesday evening. The fighting began on Tuesday. The Chinese made an unusually strong defence and the fight was severe and incessant for fully three hours. Both sides are reported to have lost heavily.

Port Arthur is at the extremity of the peninsula between the Gulf of Corea and the Gulf of Lian Tong and is almost directly north of Chee Foo. It is the most important naval arsenal in Northern China and shortly after the opening of the war had more than 40 Krupp guns and a few mortars. On the waterside it was protected by submarine mines and more recently numerous torpedoes were laid from the torpedo station and the Chinese fleet. The last trustworthy report as to the garrison was that 20,000 Chinese troops well armed, well drilled and fully provisioned occupied the defences. The majority of the 6,000 people who live in the town in time of peace moved away several weeks ago. Three English officers have said within the last month that the fall of Port Arthur would probably end the war.

The Chinese telegraph authorities are openly altering or expunging messages relating to the war.

The Mongol and Chinese soldiers at Jaho have raised the standard of rebellion.

Trade in the Dominion.

MONTREAL, Nov. 24.—The Thanksgiving holiday in Canada has reduced the volume of trade although from Halifax comparatively favorable reports are received as to collections. It is reported that lumber operations in the maritime provinces this winter promise to exceed those of preceding seasons. Demand for fresh meats at Toronto has increased, with which exception the trade situation is unchanged. Higher prices for Manitoba flour here represent the increased amount going to the railroads for transportation. There are 24 business failures reported from the Dominion of Canada this week compared with 33 last week, 26 in the week a year ago and 27 two years ago.

A Horsethief from Buffalo.

HAMILTON, Nov. 24.—Constable Springsled captured a horse thief near Grimsby yesterday. The thief has the appearance of a cowboy. He refuses to give his name but from papers found on him he is John Kelly, of 43 Clinton St., Buffalo, and was bound for Fort Erie when caught. The horse is a valuable one belonging to Thos. Summerville, of Newmarket and was attached to a finely-finished carriage belonging to the same party. The Newmarket authorities have been notified.

Fired Into a C. P. R. Train.

TEESWATER, Nov. 24.—As the outgoing C. P. R. train was between Teeswater and Glenannan one of a couple of young men who were near the track pointed a gun at the engineer who thought nothing of it, but as the coach passed a charge from a shot gun was fired through the window passing between two ladies and lodged in the upper part of the car. It is reported that one of the parties was recognized and it is likely that the matter will be investigated.

CANADA AS A HOME.

Native Canadians and outsiders who have made Canada their home will agree in pronouncing it one of the most desirable of homes for certain conditions of men—all things considered—in the world. It has of course its disadvantages, but the most of them are shared by other countries on this continent, and when the advantages are reckoned up, Canada has much the best of the comparison. In fact Canada seems to be specially favoured of providence—in the matter of climate. The terrible cyclones that ravage the western and northwestern portions of the United States, seem to stop short at the boundary line, and, having spent their destructive energy further south, to get into Canadian territory in a condition of merely respectable and refreshing hilarity. The United States are in sections at certain seasons deluged with calamitous floods, such as fortunately do not occur in Canada. Such reflections are suggested by a little pamphlet, which lies before us, entitled "Canada," written, we understand, by a retired Anglo-Indian officer, who resides in the vicinity of Lakefield, and whose length of residence and close observation have enabled him to speak with a certain authority on the climate of Canada, and its adaptability as a place of residence for a class of Old Country persons, who have a little independent means. The little book touches briefly but comprehensively upon the numerous advantages which Canada possesses over other British possessions, as a home for those who wish to change their sky but not their flag. Ontario is preferred to all the other provinces and the writer's preference is narrowed down to a decided preference for Peterborough and vicinity. The climate of Ontario, the delights of the four seasons and the diversions and sports that mark the several seasons are all touched upon. This multum in parvo brochure even goes into details on the cost of living in, and closes with this appeal:

"There are many persons and families eking out an insufficient income in England, whose circumstances would be vastly improved and the measure of their enjoyment of life much increased by simply moving over to Ontario. If fear of the climate is a deterring cause, as there is reason to think it too often is, let it be repeated that the most delicate persons have nothing to fear from a Canadian winter. The writer has never met with anyone who desired to go back after settling here; on the contrary all agree that after the bright, dry Canadian atmosphere they would dread returning to the chill and damp of the old country."

To all of which we say, Amen. Canada, and especially, Ontario, has homes, and homes of comfort and prosperity, for millions, who with the means that would create these conditions here, are spending a hand-to-mouth life in the old country. The little pamphlet should be largely circulated in the old country. It would lead to bringing to Ontario the class of citizens this country requires, persons of good standing and some little means, who would be able to enter upon a life of comfort to themselves and of usefulness to their adopted country. The Dominion Government is spending thousands of dollars upon immigration literature infinitely less potent for good than the retired officer's little pamphlet on Canada, if properly placed.

"TALK IS CHEAP."

In connection with the letting of the Trent Valley Canal contracts, Mr. Fairbairn has urged Hon. Mr. Haggart to permit only Canadian labour to be employed on the work. The Minister recognized the force of the contention. The Government sends to the United States for dredges, etc., and it is only fair that Canadian labour should have the preference. But this is something Mr. Haggart and his Government can't control. The Government killed the bill of Mr. Taylor, the Conservative whip, which excluded foreign labour. Then was the Government's chance to protect Canadian labour. They declined to act then. Now it is too late, and any talk of preferring Canadian workmen is buncombe. This is a free country; there is nothing to prevent any foreigner, who wishes, coming into the country, and there is nothing to prevent a contractor giving him employment. Contractors as such, exist to make money, and, other things being equal, they employ the cheapest labour they can get, whether it is Canadian or foreign. Sentiment enters very slightly into a contractors' calculations. Any government talk of protecting Canadian labour in the matter of canal contracts, is mere clap-trap. They missed their chance to do anything like this when they killed Mr. Taylor's bill. Why did the government not insert a condition in the contracts that only Canadian labour should be employed? The chief Conservative organ loudly blamed the Ontario Government for selling timber limits without inserting a condition that the timber was to be cut in the province. Now let us hear the Empire and the Review denounce the Dominion Government for not inserting a condition to employ only Canadian labour in the carrying out of the canal contracts.

THE Toronto News says that the "most urgent need of the Provincial Opposition is a policy." It would seem from recent events that the most urgent need is a Conservative party in Ontario.

A TALE FROM WINNIPEG.

HOW TWO PROMINENT CITIZENS OF THE PRAIRIE CAPITAL REGAINED HEALTH.

One Suffered From the Effects of Malaria and Indigestion, the Other From Nervous Prostration—Their Story as Told a Tribune Reporter.

From the Winnipeg Tribune.

The modern world is decidedly skeptical and in the case of cures by advertised medicines, it is sometimes remarked that they occur at long distances. Recently, however, the Tribune was told that a Winnipeg gentleman had passed through an experience as remarkable as any of those published, and inquiry into the matter revealed the fact that several prominent citizens of Winnipeg had been greatly benefitted by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. One of these citizens is Mr. W. A. Charlesworth, the well-known contractor, who during his residence in Winnipeg, has added to the beauty and wealth of the Prairie Capital by erecting some of its finest and most substantial buildings. Naturally what Mr. Charlesworth would say as to the merits of a medical preparation would be read with interest by the many citizens who have met him in business and socially, and a Tribune reporter was detailed to get from him some particulars in the matter. Mr. Charlesworth was seen at his beautiful and cosy home on William street, a few days since, and while unwilling to attract publicity, yet, for the benefit of those suffering as he once was he consented to give a simple statement of his case. About thirteen years ago, while living in the southern part of Illinois, near Cairo, he had several attacks of malaria fever and ague, which left his blood poor and thin, and so deranged his system that for about ten years after he was a sufferer from chronic indigestion. He came north after residing there for some years in order to try to shake off the effects of the malaria, but without much success. He has not had, while in the north, another real attack of ague, but every season he has had incipient attacks, which were only warded off by the prompt use of quinine. Bilious fever also threatened in the same way. He also suffered severely from indigestion. Determining to make a decided effort to get rid of his complication of disorders he began in the fall of 1891 to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the advertisement of which he had read in the newspapers. Mr. Charlesworth began to use the Pills in October, and for the first month scarcely felt any improvement. However, from that time on improvement was rapid and the effect marvellous. The cold of the winter of 1891-2, as will be remembered, was intense, and yet so great was the toning up of the system and the enrichment of the blood, that he scarcely felt the cold at all that winter. His indigestion was removed, and since that time he has not had another attack of malaria fever. He continued taking the pills up to about the middle of January. In closing his interview Mr. Charlesworth said:—"However, do not rely upon my authority alone, but see Mr. Fairchild, who has used the pills."

The Mr. Fairchild, it is needless to say, is Mr. Frank Fairchild, the largest dealer in vehicles and farm machinery in western Canada. Mr. Fairchild's name is too well known to readers of the Tribune to need any further introduction. He was also seen and fully confirmed what Mr. Charlesworth said. Some time ago Mr. Fairchild suffered from nervous prostration brought on by overwork, and suffered also from a dull pain in the back of the head. After spending some time at a famous Chicago sanitarium he was advised to take something to build up his blood, the doctors mentioning Pink Pills in their list of things advised. At first he took a fluid peparation, but as he found this unhandy to take with him as he travelled, he decided to try Pink Pills, as Mr. Charlesworth had very strongly recommended them. He found great benefit from their use and continued taking them until restored to health. He has no hesitation in recommending them as a great builder up and purifier of the blood.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont., Schenectady, N. Y., 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50. The price at which these pills are sold makes a course of treatment comparatively inexpensive, as compared with other remedies or medical treatment.

DIPHTHERIA OUTBREAK.

The Townships of Manvers and Cavan Are Badly Infected—A Basket Social Said to Have Caused Many Cases.

A very serious outbreak of diphtheria has occurred in the townships of Manvers and Cavan, in the county of Durham, south of Peterborough. A short time ago, a few cases occurred there, and during their continuance a "basket social" was held in one of the school houses of the township of Manvers. Immediately after this social, twenty cases of the disease occurred, chiefly among those who had been at the social, and several deaths took place. The outbreak is now so serious that the Health Officer, of Manvers, has requested Dr. Bryce, the Provincial Health Officer, to visit the district. Doctor Bryce, yesterday, received a copy of a resolution passed by the Manvers Board of Health, which would appear to indicate that the authorities of the two townships are not working harmoniously. The resolution of the Manvers Board accuses the Cavan Board of being negligent in the matter of the prevention of diphtheria. The charges made against the Cavan Board are that houses in the township in which diptheria cases exist are not placarded, that sanitary policemen are not employed, that houses in which deaths have occurred are not placarded, that the Medical Health Officer is not in attendance at the burial of persons who have died from diphtheria, that houses in which the disease has existed are not fumigated, and that persons residing in them are allowed to mingle with the public. In view of all these circumstances the Manvers Board petitions the Provincial Board to compel the health authorities of Cavan to do their duty. Dr. Bryce will probably go down and investigate the matter.—Globe.

Canada After U. S. Bonds.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Money is coming from Canada for the new bonds. The agency of a Canadian bank received yesterday $350,000 in gold for subscriptions and the Bank of Montreal for itself and connections has forwarded a deposit and authorized subscriptions for $500,000. Gold in small lots has been reaching banking houses for several days from this and other states, some coming from as far west as the Mississippi.

After the Cook Gang.

MUSKOGEE, I.T., Nov. 23.—Officers that left Muskogee yesterday captured three members of the Cook gang reported to be in the Arkansas Bottom and are in close pursuit of the others. Since Monday the bandits have scattered. Skeeter and two others have been captured at Wichita Falls, Texas.

CAVANVILLE.

A Successful Tea and Entertainment.

The congregation of the Cavanville Methodist church gave a most successful tea and entertainment on Thanksgiving night. A splendid tea prepared by the ladies was held in the hall in the earlier part of the evening, and at its conclusion an entertainment was held in the church, which was crowded. Rev. J. Kilgour occupied the chair, and to his energy, not only in connection with this occasion, but in the general discharge of his pastoral duties, together with the hearty co-operation of the congregation, is to be credited the gratifying success that is implied in the net receipts of $57, the largest in the history of the church. The mainstay of the programme was the eloquent and practical address delivered by Rev. J. J. Rae on the subject "Mind Your Own Business." Whether the reverend gentleman succeeded in converting his hearers to the Gospel of minding their own affairs, he certainly gave evidence of his having minded his business successfully when he undertook to prepare the lecture. Excellent music was furnished by the church choir and Rev. D. N. McCamus sang two solos in a very admirable manner. The occasion was a great success.

FROM THE CAPITAL.

The Seizure of American Nets by the Canadian Cruiser.

OTTAWA, Nov. 24.—Commander Spain, who commanded the Canadian fishery protective fleet the past season, has returned to Ottawa, all the boats having gone into winter quarters. Two American vessels were seized during the season within the three-mile limit. Commander Spain has been in command during the absence of Commander Wakeham, who is on the international fish commission.

The Department of Maritime and Fisheries was asked for an opinion as to the seizure made by the cutter Petrel in Western Ontario. The department is satisfied that the nets and fish of the Americans were seized in Canadian waters. The fish were sold, but the nets were not.

A deputation from Hamilton, consisting of Alexander McKay, Ald. Thomas Morris and City Solicitor McKelcan, waited upon the Hon. Mr. Daly, asking for a lease, rent free, of 660 feet of the canal reserve at the Beach. They wish to beautify it and give visitors to the Burlington Beach a park-like view. They were favorably received.

Wire-Tappers Caught Near Windsor.

WINDSOR, Nov. 24.—When Lineman Murray of the G. N. W. Telegraph Co., was repairing the wires east of Windsor on the Grand Trunk Railway he discovered a wire loop attached to one of the wires. He immediately notified Manager Copeland at Windsor, who lost no time in giving the facts to Chief of Police Wells. The chief detailed five patrolmen to accompany Manager Copeland to the place where the loop was located. They gradually closed in toward the place where it was supposed the wire-tappers were located, who were engaged in trying to beat the pool rooms by falsifying the reports. They succeeded in getting so close to the gang before they discovered the presence of the police that they were taken by surprise and made no resistance when being handcuffed by the officers. They gave their names as Ed. Smith, of Dexter, Mich.; James O'Hara of New York state and Harry Warner of Windsor, but the police are satisfied that the names are fictitious and do not recognize any of the parties. They will be examined to-day by Police Magistrate Bartlet.

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

Caused in Great Measure by Defective Action of the Kidneys.

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—The unequalled power of Dodd's Kidney Pills has been attested by thousands of grateful women. There is no remedy ever known that has proved to be such a blessing to women, suffering from diseases peculiar to their sex, as these pills, which have gained for themselves more than a provincial reputation as a household remedy. Those who are suffering we invite to health. Will you accept the testimony of Mrs. George Reany, now of Ashland, Wis., or will you allow a stubborn prejudice to gradually wear your life away?

T. RHINES,

Go, Bury thy Sorrow

Thou canst Make thy Life Happy and Joyful.

THROW OFF THY BURDEN OF DISEASE AND SUFFERING.

Paine's Celery Compound Does the Good Work.

Cured People Send in Strong Testimony Every Day.

MRS. E. RANKIN, COURTRIGHT, ONT.

Go bury thy heavy burden of sorrow, disease and suffering at once. It may be that thou hast been in agony for years. No doubt disappointments have attended thy past efforts and endeavors, and now thou art sad, despondent and hopeless.

Suffering one, thou hast been mislead and deceived up to the present by medicines that had no curative virtues. While thou hast been groping in darkness for a cure thousands have been made well by the mighty curing powers of Paine's Celery Compound.

This marvellous medicine is made to meet the wants and necessities of rich and poor, of young and old, who suffer from any derangement of the system.

Hast thou read any of the wonderful cures wrought by this health-giver? If not, send at once for a book wherein are records of attested wonders—men and women saved even at the point of death. Amongst these records will be found the names of some of Canada's best people; you will know many of them.

Strong testimony is pouring in every day in favour of Paine's Celery Compound. A letter has just come from Mrs. E. Rankin, of Courtright, Lambton Co., Ont., from it we give the following extracts:—

"With great pleasure I beg to inform you of the good I have received from the use of Paine's Celery Compound. For a number of years I have been in very poor health owing to various causes, and lately I was advised to try your medicine. I used three bottles, and have received a world of good. My severe headaches are completely banished, and heart disease, from which I suffered for thirty years, has almost disappeared, and altogether I am vastly improved. I am fully convinced that Paine's Celery Compound is all it is recommended to be."

DIED FROM NEGLECT.

A Repulsive Case Developed at Ashburn Village.

WHITBY, Nov. 24.—An inquest at Ashburn village, ten miles from here, has developed one of the most repulsive cases ever chronicled in this county. At that village lives a man named Thomas Howard, aged 74, whose wife is 66. Mrs. Howard has a daughter by a former husband, who is now 36. Her name is Sarah Jane Davidson. Recently Sarah Jane had an illegitimate child. It lived a few weeks, died and was buried by Howard in the garden beside two other children Miss Davidson had formerly borne. The neighbors gossipped and the tales reached the ears of County Crown Attorney Farewell. He ordered an inquest. Coroner Carson held it. The evidence was of the most extraordinary character. First the body was exhumed and the doctors declared the child had died of starvation.

Howard testified to being the father of the child, and that the young woman had had three children by him. He swore that they got milk for the child, but it would not take it, and they fed it on bread and water. The child only lived six weeks. No doctor had been called to attend to the child.

The evidence of the mother and daughter, however, did not corroborate his statements. They said they wanted to have a doctor called in, but the old man would not allow it. The mother said that from the time the baby was born until it died it had been only offered milk once. The daughter admitted that her relations with her step-father had been carried on since she was sixteen or seventeen. The mother knew what was going on but consented to it for the sake of peace.

The jury found that the child died from neglect, want of nourishment and proper medical attendance. Warrants for the arrest of the parties will probably be issued.

Nicholas II. in Council.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The Standard's correspondent in St. Petersburg says: "The Czar attended a council of state of Wednesday and a member informed me that he created an excellent impression by his masterly grasp of matters and his unexpected oratory, which is the reverse of his father's laconism."

Violated the Code of Medical Ethics.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 24.—Wm. F. Barclay, M.D., one of the best known medical men in Washington, Pa., has been expelled from the Allegheny County Medical Society. The trouble resulted from the discovery by Dr. Barclay of a solution of gold in arsenic. The secret of manufacturing the solution was obtained after many years of experiment and study. In refusing to make public the discovery and in advertising it, it was alleged that Dr. Barclay had violated the code of medical ethics.

To Celebrate Bismarck's Birthday.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—Arrangements have begun to celebrate Bismarck's 80th birthday throughout Germany. The South German newspapers are discussing various plans for permanent memorials. One of the many suggestions is to erect an Obelisk and a splendid building to be called the Bismarck House on the summit of Sugspitz the biggest point in Germany. Another suggestion is to erect there a pyramid composed of stones from all parts of Germany and the colonies. Still another is to cut a Bismarck silhouette in the rocks.

Gas Famine Predicted in Indiana.

PERU, Ind., Nov. 24.—In his report to the legislature at the coming session Dr. Jordan, Gas Inspector, will say: "It is only a question of years when there will be a general suspension of the luxury. I will not be surprised if in less than four years there will be no natural gas for the factories. In many sections the wells show only a pressure of 240 pounds, the highest being 350. I will guarantee that since the first gas well was sunk in this district there has been $25,000,000 worth of gas wasted."

English Labor Delegates for Denver.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—John Burns, M.P., and David Holmes, President of the Weavers Association, will sail for America to-day on the Etruria. They are delegates to the trade congress to sit in Denver next month. They will be accompanied by John Bee, Radical M. P.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 24.—The Western and Southern Grain and Trade Congress, closed its session here, adopted resolutions favoring a uniform quarantine law, urging the completion of the Nicaragua canal and protection for and improvement of the Mississippi river.

A Monument to Montgomery.

QUEBEC, Nov. 24.—At last night's city council meeting a special committee was formed to study the opportunity of granting a site for the Montgomery monument such as wished by certain American patriots. A report will be given to the committee shortly. It is thought that it will be favorable to the scheme.

Inquest on the Montreal Disaster.

MONTREAL, Nov. 24.—The inquest on the street railway's building disaster was continued yesterday. Mr. Hopkins, the architect, resumed his evidence and showed how his plans had been changed by the Dominion Bridge Company in the course of construction. No verdict was reached.

Taken Back to Mimico.

HAMILTON, Nov. 23.—Ernest Rabbitoy, who some time ago escaped from Mimico school, has been hiding in the city for several days. Detective Doyle and Truant Officer Hunter went to his mother's house to search for him. The detective opened the door and as he did so he looked behind it. Crouched in the corner he discovered young Ernest. He was taken in hand and brought to the cells, where he will await transferral to Mimico again.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Nov. 24, 1894.

Canadian barley in Oswego is quoted at from 60 to 63c.

Exports of wheat (flour as wheat), both coasts Canada and the States, amount this week to 3,312,000 bushels, compared with 2,909,000 last week.

On the street here 300 bushels of wheat sold at 60c for white and 58 1-2c for red. Some 3,000 bushels of barley brought 42 1-2c to 45 1-2c and 200 of oats at 31c.

The decline in wheat continued in Chicago, May closing 1-8c lower and cash 1-2c. Cash corn was very weak on account of heavy receipts, closing 1-2 to 1c lower. Oats were dull.

Little doing in Buffalo in barley, but holders are firm in their views. No. 1 Canada is quoted at 64c.

The sheep and lamb offerings at East Buffalo were 42 cars, including 11 cars of Canada. Market dull and weak throughout, and of the total offerings 16 cars were unsold at the close of the markets. Most of the Canadas sold at $3.70 to $3.75, with nominal range of quotations at $3.60 to $3.85.

There is nothing new in the New York stock market. London capitalists are doing very little in the way of investing in American securities. It is more than possible that there will be a moderate reaction; prices will be somewhat lower.

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, have no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose to pay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times.

The Great Artist.

No doubt Herr Yunck, violin virtuoso, is the greatest artist who has ever appeared in Peterborough. Since his arrival in America he has delighted large audiences in Indianapolis, Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Toledo, Grand Rapids, Buffalo, Toronto, Hamilton; and Peterborough will be the third city in Canada where Herr Yunck will appear, on Tuesday, Dec. 4th. The four numbers he has selected for rendition that evening are of a character to give an exposition of the widely varied resources of his artistic capabilities.

Advertising.

Advertising has its direct influence in selling goods. It causes inquiries, it builds reputation, it creates popularity. The man who wants to sell his goods may have to get out and seek the trade. He has also got to advertise the goods, to make them familiar in every possible and legitimate way. The more a firm's name and goods are before the eyes of possible buyers the better for that firm's business. Old firms that linger on their past record find that the modern workers for trade are the hustlers who make things different from "what they used to be."

Have You Seen the Man or Horse?

Chief Rousel received a postal card from Chief Douglas, of Port Hope, Wednesday morning, asking him to be on the lookout for a young man named Richard Newton, 18 years old, 5 ft. 6 or 7 inches in height, thin in flesh, smooth face, fair complexion, stutters in speech, dark clothes, dull grey overcoat, new boots, black cap, who had stolen a black mare 15½ hands high, good condition, white star in forehead and white hind fet lock, scar on inside of right front foot, from the township of Hope, on Nov. 17th. The EXAMINER mentioned the theft the day it occurred.

Good Advice.

A certain young man who resides in ward No. ——, had been keeping company with a very amiable young lady with intentions towards matrimony, called on the evening appointed for their marriage and produced a small parcel. On examination she exclaimed, "Well, I am so thankful you bought the marriage license, gloves, &c., from W. J. Green, Hunter street, as now we are sure of having good luck." Try one—only a single trial solicited.

Cheese Estimates.

Messrs. Hodgson Bros. have just issued their yearly statistics of the shipments and estimated stocks of cheese for 1894, as compared with the year previous. They make the total shipments from Montreal from May 1st to Nov. 9th, 1894, 1,554,733 boxes with quantity en route to seaboard 25,000 boxes; the estimated stocks in cold storage and in factorymen's hands west of Toronto are put down as 152,500 boxes, those east of Toronto as 99,700 boxes, with estimated stocks in Montreal on Nov. 9th, 1894, 110,000 boxes, making a total of 1,941,938 boxes against 1,930,743 boxes a year ago, showing an increase of only 11,195 boxes.

Irondale and Bancroft Railway.

Mr. G. W. Ranney, C.E., returned to-day from a business trip to Irondale in the interest of the Irondale and Bancroft Railway. He reports that the road is completed for thirty miles—from the Victoria Railway junction east to Wilberforce, in the northern part of Peterborough county. The completed portion of the line has been accepted by both the Ontario and Dominion Governments. Two trains per day are now running regularly. The farmers seem to appreciate the advantages which the existence of the road presents, and there is every prospect of the road receiving a paying traffic, that will increase with the development of the natural resources of the district which the operation of the line will bring about.

A Wild Cat in the Country.

On Sunday evening while Mr. Wallace Calder was returning home from Warsaw he met with a thrilling experience with a monster wild cat. It appears that he was about four miles from Lakefield and was about entering a swamp, when his horse suddenly stood still, and on looking in front of it he saw a large wild cat lying in the middle of the road ready to spring onto the horse. The thought of a horrible death quickly passed through his mind, and his cap fairly rose from his head with fright as he thought of it. Mustering up courage Wallace gave a frightful yell which scared the animal, and struck the horse with the whip, which made a bound, and the cat leaped to one side and disappeared in the swamp. We can safely say no time was lost in getting to the village that night.—Lakefield News.

Good Things Can't Come too Often.

The people of Peterborough and surrounding country will be more than pleased to see by an announcement elsewhere that Prof. Dorenwend, the greatest hair goods artist in America, will once more visit Peterborough and will be at the Grand Central Hotel, on Monday, Nov. 26th. On his last visit to Peterborough, a great many had to go away from his showroom unserved, on account of the rush of customers, which a visit of only one day caused, so people in want of his styles should by no means miss this chance. It is something wonderful to see to what perfection he has brought the art of hair goods styles. His fine ladies and gentlemen's wigs, toupees, wavy and plain fronts, switches, etc., are worn by thousands of people, who rejoice in the wearing of such natural looking goods. Don't miss this chance of seeing Prof. Dorenwend.

Hotel Removal.

Mr. Jas. O'Shea, who has for several years conducted the Royal Oak Hotel, Hunter street, has removed to the more roomy quarters, the Commercial Hotel, corner of Brock and George street. His new premises have been thoroughly repaired and refitted and refurnished, and Mr. O'Shea is in a better position than ever to cater to the wants of the public, especially the farming community, from whom he has had a large patronage. In his new place he has a fine dry yard, good brick stable and ample enclosed sheds. The bowling alley formerly in connection with the hotel, has been converted into a kitchen, and the billiard room into a fine dining room. The bar will be found well supplied, and every department of the house well fitted to meet the public wants. Mr. O'Shea always keeps a quiet, orderly and comfortable hotel, and is entitled to a liberal share of public patronage.

The Canadian Almanac.

The EXAMINER has received a copy of the '95 edition of that venerable old reliable, the "Canadian Almanac." This is its 48th annual edition, and like good wine it improves with age. In addition to the usual features familiar to all Canadians it contains an article on "Canadian Parliamentary Procedure," by Dr. J. G. Bourinot—a series of articles on the defences of Canada, an article on the Sault Ste. Marie canal; comprehensive statistics of all the British Colonies and possessions throughout the world are given, with a map of the world, showing British Terriority shaded. A study of this list shows to what a great and powerful Empire we belong. No home or office should be without this work. It tells of the census of 1891; the tariff tables tell us how we are taxed. There is full information respecting our banks, there are clergy-lists of all denominations, railway statistics, educational statistics, municipal statistics, etc. In fact over three hundred pages are crowded with clearly arranged, concise information on a great variety of subjects. Price, paper, 30c., cloth, 50c. To be had at the Peterborough Bookstore.

—Norwood Lodge, No. 262, I.O.O.F., has passed a resolution of condolence with Mr. John Finlay on the loss of his wife. The resolution is worded in a most touching manner.

—Xmas cards, Xmas booklets, art calendars, 1895,—a beautiful display at the Peterborough Bookstore. Remember your friends in the Old Country. A. H. STRATTON & Co. 2d —Attention is called to the fine lithographic portraits of Herr Yunck, the great violin virtuoso, at Taylor & Macdonald's drugstore and Sailsbury's bookstore. Opera House, Dec. 4th.

—Within the past few days, a young young lady was removed from Ashburnham to the Hamilton Insane Asylum, her mind being slightly affected. It is thought that her confinement will only be a temporary one. The case is a sad one.

—Thanksgiving Day was hard on the ice—so a small boy found to his cost when he broke through on White's pond on Thursday afternoon. A cold bath was the only result of the ducking, as he was able to quickly clamber out, being near the shore.

—Mr. Arminger I. Hubbard, of Montreal, has been appointed general manager of the London Guarantee and Accident Company in Canada to fill the place of Mr. Carlton D. Richardson, who died recently. Mr. Hubbard entered upon his new position to-day.

—It is queried, why it is that the police do not take action regarding the infamous resort in the north eastern portion of the town. The house in question is situated near the Central school and harm cannot but result if an imperative move is not made at once.

—Messrs. J. J. Turner & Son are to-day filling a large order for Quebec for their unsurpassed felding camp beds, which only weighs eleven pounds and can be carried under the arm. They have also just received an order for twelve large Union Jacks from a Toronto firm.

—While boring for water recently on his farm, Mr. Geo. Sisson, of Manvers, discovered a bed of chalk-white clay similar to the Cornwall, Eng., article, which is used in the manufacture of China-ware. He has since been offered a large sum for part of his property, but refused to make the deal.

—The latest arrival among farmers is a fellow who offers to pay for posting a bill on their barn doors. Of course he gets permission, pays the money and takes what he represents to be a receipt for the money, but which proves to be a plain note of hand, which he turns it at the nearest bank. Look out for him.

—The Beaverton Express building was destroyed some time ago, since when a large new frame building has been erected at considerable expense to replace the one consumed. Last night the building was opened and in celebration of this event a ball was held. Butcher's quadrille band was present and a large number of guests were in attendance.

—Mr. R. B. Rogers, superintendent of the Trent Valley waters, has returned from Lakefield where he was conferring with the council regarding the placing of bridges over the Trent Valley Canal. A high level bridge will be placed over the canal on Reid street, a swing bridge on Queen street at the Tremont Hotel, and a swing bridge at Hamilton's crossing in Douro.

—On Tuesday morning last, while Joseph the young son of Mr. Alex. Rosborough, of the 7th concession of Smith, was leading a team of horses to water, one of them kicked him on the arm, breaking it. Dr. Dr. J. R. Fraser was called and on examination the arm was found to be broken between the wrist and elbow. The injured member was properly set and the young lad is getting along as well as can be expected.

—A young lad of fifteen years of age was up before the magistrate this morning on a charge of drunkenness. Judgment was reserved in his case. A pint flask smelling strongly of whiskey was found on his person, and it is understood that the liquor was procured across the river. To the credit of the Peterborough liquor men the lad states that he could not obtain the liquor in town. A summons will be issued for the party who supplied him with the intoxicant.

—Anti-toxine, the newly-discovered diphtheria remedy, has just been successfully experimented with in Hamilton. The Herald says: "The patient was inoculated with 5 c. c. of the specific, and almost immediately a reduction in temperature from 102 to 99 was effected, and this has been maintained. The pulse became stronger, and the general condition of the patient improved. There were no signs of any local trouble at the point of inoculation, and altogether Dr. Edgar considers the remedy is doing all that has been claimed for it." This is the remedy upon which the paternal Dominion Government in its solicitude for the health of the people, levies an ad valorem duy of sixty per cent.

—At a quarter to twelve, Monday night, the livery stable of Mr. John Smith, in Port Hope, caught fire. Five horses were burned to death and the large building very badly damaged. The stable was lighted by electricity so the origin of the fire was a mystery. The horses were insured, as well as the building. None of the carriages were burned, but a number of sleighs and cutters were badly damaged. The building belonged to Col. McLean. One of the animals was owned by Mr. T. J. Tilley, of the Telephone Exchange. The building is a total loss. Insurance, $400 in Phoenix. Contents, about $700 loss; insurance, $1,905 in Scottish Union.

Y. M. C. A. RECEPTION.

Quite a number of young men visited the rooms Thanksgiving Day afternoon and they seemed to enjoy themselves. The reception in the evening was a success, thanks to the tireless efforts of the ever-willing ladies and the kindness of all those who, in any way, helped to entertain the young men. Several of the ladies, pastors and business men showed their interest by their presence. At eight o'clock Mr. John Miller set the musical ball rolling by a cornet solo. It was well rendered and deserved the applause it received. Miss Belleghem favoured the audience with a vocal solo "Esmeralda," which was well received, and, after "Meet me at the Fountain" by the orchestra, Mr. Alf. Miller sang "The Blacksmith." By special request Miss Hagerman recited that touching piece "The Face upon the Floor." One of those pretty piano duets by Miss Fairweather and Mrs. Perks was next, and following it a song "Love's Sorrow" by Miss Hagerman. The hearers showed their appreciation by asking for "more" and Miss Hagerman responded with a whistling solo, "The Mocking Bird." A banjo and mouthorgan duet by Messrs Dundas and Bradley received an encore and Miss Code followed with a piano solo. Mr. Alf. Miller kindly consented to take Mr. Steers place in a duet by Messrs. Squires and Steers, Mr. Steers being unable to attend. Mr. Squires and Mr. Miller sang that pretty duet "Larboard Watch." President Bennet, who had charge of the programme, announced refreshments. It goes without saying that this last "piece" was appreciated. We trust this is only one of the many pleasant social evenings the young men will enjoy this winter.

The first one of those song services will be held at 8.15 to night. Hearty singing will be one of the leading features of the meeting.

To-morrow afternoon's meeting no young man can afford to miss. Rev. Mr. Rae will give a short address and a male quartette will sing. Meeting commences at 4.15 and closes at 5 o'clock. Don't miss this interesting service.

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN, TORONTO.

One of the most important of the public institutions in Ontario is the Hospital for Sick Children, in Toronto, contains accommodation for 175 patients, ranging from two to fourteen years. Children from all parts of Ontario, whose parents cannot afford to pay for medical attendance, are cared for free of all charge. When parents desire to pay for treatment, for $2.50 per week they secure the best medical attendance and have every want supplied. This Hospital is a Provincial institution in every sense of the term, and is recognized as the leading hospital for children in the world. Its accident ward is open day and night, all the year round, and children sent in from the country, suffering from accidents or deformities of any kind, are promptly attended to. Ambulances are sent to all railway stations on due notice being given to the authorities. The facilities for all kinds of surgical work are unsurpassed, and a telegraphic or telephonic warning that the ambulance is on its way opens the doors of the largest and best equipped hospital in the world. There are one hundred patients in the hospital to-day. Last year about 530 were treated inside the building and 2 000 in the out-door department. In the summer the children are all sent over to The Lake-side Home for Little Children on Toronto Island, which is the largest children's sanitarium in the world and the most perfectly equipped, containing beds for 150 children. A copy of the report of the work of the hospital is sent to any address on application to "The Secretary" College street, Toronto.

CONTRACTS FOR THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL AWARDED.

Mr. Onderdonk Secures one and Hogan & Macdonald the Other.

The Empire of yesterday published a despatch from Ottawa announcing the awarding of the contract for the Trent Valley Canal work, as follows:—"The greatest possible interest is being manifested by contractors and others in the awarding of the contracts for the two sections of the Trent Canal. It is stated that the works to be awarded this week will aggregate about three-quarters of a million dollars. For section 1 of the Balsam lake and lake Simcoe division, there were 12 tenders, the successful man being Mr. Andrew Onderdonk, of Chicago, his tender amounting to about $475,000. His last investment was the Ferris wheel, which was the wonder of thousands at the World's Fair at Chicago last year. Mr. Onderdonk was the largest shareholder in that enterprise, and made an enormous profit on his investment. Before leaving town to day he said he intended getting down to business at once, and expects to have his contract completed by July 1 next.

The lowest tenderer out of 14 sent in for section 1 of the Peterborough and Lakefield division was Messrs. Hogan & Macdonald, of Montreal, their figure being about $260,000. The tenders in both cases are below the departmental estimate, and the Minister, speaking to the Empire to-day, said it was astonishing to see the keenness of competition for these works.

A Child Enjoys

The pleasant flavour, gentle action and soothing effects of Syrup of Figs, when in need of a laxative, and if the father or mother be costive or bilious, the most gratifying results follow its use; so that it is the best family remedy known, and every family should have a bottle on hand.

Not Guilty.

Last night yesterday morning about two o'clock in the afternoon, before breakfast time, a hungry boy appeared before the beak charged with having in his possession a pair of five dollar pants bought in the usual way. He cleared himself by producing a receipt from W. J. Green, Hunter street, who is selling $5.00 pants for $3.00. Come thou and do likewise—that is, buy the pants.

You must wear what has wear in it, if you would be proof against attacks of seediness, and Grafton's clothing possesses the wear that gives satisfaction.

PETERBOROUGH PROPERTY OWNERS' ASSOCIATION.

Will Co-operate With the Board of Trade and Council in Forwarding the Interests of the Town.

For some time past a number of Peterborough's most prominent property owners have been discussing the advisability of forming an organization in Peterborough, similar to the Ratepayers Association in Toronto, and designed for the purpose of advancing the material well being of the town, and at the same time of the property owners.

With this end in view Mr. G. W. Hatton issued a circular a few days ago to a large number of the ratepayers, inviting them to be present at a meeting in Mr. Bradburn's office on Friday evening. In response to the circular a large number of those interested in the formation of such an association assembled last evening in the place designated in the circular. Among those present were Messrs. G. W. Hatton, Peter Hamilton, H. C. Winch, Dr. Yelland, R.S. Davidson, R. Fair, J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., E. H. D. Hall, Arthur Stevenson, W. H. Bradburn, C. W. Sawers, T. Cahill, John McKee, W. Aldridge, A. Dawson, D. W. Dumble, T. E. Bradburn, W. Lech, J. H. Burnham and W. H. Robertson.

Mr. Peter Hamilton was invited to take the chair and Mr. G. W. Hatton was elected secretary pro tem.

After the object of the meeting had been explained by the Secretary, an informal discussion took place as to the advisability and necessity of in Peterborough of the nature mentioned. It was pointed out that the new association would not conflict in any way with the operations of the Board of Trade but on the contrary would co-operate with that body and the town council in forwarding the interests of Peterborough. It is understood that one of the chief aims of the Association will be to organize those citizens, who have considerable at stake and who realize the necessity of economical management of public affairs. The object then will be to choose men of this calibre to contest for seats at the Council Board. It is expected, if the association is successfully formed, that those whose candidature receives the approval of the members will be strengthened by the association in canvassing for municipal honours.

HAVING AN ORGANIZATION

After a number of those present had expressed their views of forming such an association, it was moved by Mr. J. R. Stratton, seconded by Mr. McKee, "That it is desirable to form a Peterborough Property Holders' Association, and that the following gentlemen be a committee to draft the constitution and bylaws, namely, Messrs. E. H. D. Hall, Robt. Fair, G. H. Burnham, G. W. Hatton, T. E. Bradburn W. Lech, Peter Hamilton and the mover and seconder, and that the meeting adjourn for one week to give the committee time to report.—Carried.

STRONGLY IN FAVOUR

A resolution was then adopted on motion of Mr. Arthur Stevenson whereby the same committee was given power to suggest names for the officers of the Association, to be presented for approval at the next meeting, after which adjournment took place.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Items of Interest to Local Sportsmen

HOCKEY.

Belleville hockeyists have arranged with a contractor to build a special rink for them immediately, The city will have three teams on the ice this year.

CURLIANA.

The members of the Colt contingent of the curling club, met last night, for organization at the store of Mr. Peter Conral.

Mr. Geo. J. Horkins took the chair and the election of officers, which took place, resulted as follows:—

Hon. President—Dr. Boucher.
President—Geo. J. Horkins.
Vice-President—H. R. H. Kenner.
Sec. Treas.—Dickson Davidson.
Executive Committee—F. J. Connal, Geo. Matthews and W. Thompson.

An informal discussion regarding the fees followed, after which the published scheudule regarding the games with the Colts of Belleville and Campbellford was considered. It was the general opinion that too much was asked of the Peterboroughs, when they were required to play both Belleville and Campbellford in one day. So all endeavour will be made to adjust matters in such a manner as to allow Peterborough to meet these clubs on different days.

The Lakefield curlers organized for the season a few evenings ago, and elected the following officers:

President—Mr. G. B. Hilliard.
Vice-President—Mr. R. J. Munro.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. E. A. Tanner.
Patron—Mr. R. Graham.
Patroness—Mrs. R. Grahan..
Managing Committee — Messrs. R. C. Strickland, J. C. Grylls, Geo. Hilliard, R. J. Munro, J. Clarin, G. A. Strickland.

The resident clergy were elected honorary members of the club.

The matter of retiring from the O. C. A. was thoroughly discussed, a number of the members favouring breaking away from the association and forming one among the clubs around. It was put to a vote and the club decided in favour of remaining with the association this year.

THE TRIGGER.

Mr. Gus Sawers and a party were out hunting near Mount Pleasant yesterday. A curious black and grey squirrel was bagged as the result of the hunt.

Town Failures.

Why should people be foolish enough to pay $4 to $5 for all-wool pants when W. J. Green, Hunter street, would give them for $3.00, made to order and guaranteed to fit.

In is nonsense to spend money, it matters not how small the amount, for poor clothing. Wisdom consists in buying Grafton & Co's make every time.

Protect your Horses.

Don't allow your valuable horses to go without a waterproof cover during the cold wet days of the fall. Be good to them, provide them with one of Kingscotte's strictly waterproof covers, costing only a dollar or two. If you are shipping and receiving goods that are liable to damage from wet, Kingscotte's black oiled canvas waterproof covers "fills the bill,"—nothing better or cheaper. They have no tar in their composition, being an OIL preparation, which keeps them soft and pliable. Awnings taken down and stored in a careful and agreeable manner. Halls decorated for assemblies, balls and meetings of all kinds. ALF. KINGSCOTTE, tent, sail and awning maker, 344 Water street.

WILL BEGIN ON SATURDAY.

On Saturday, Nov. 24th, the sale of the China Hall stock will begin, and continue for two weeks—or until the whole stock has been disposed of. The goods have been reduced from 25 to 50 per cent., and in some cases 75 per cent., so there will be big bargains for everyone. Dinner, Tea and Chamber Sets, Silver Ware, Lamp Goods, Ornaments, etc., at prices that cannot be repeated again. Buy now for Christmas. China Hall and Silver Bazaar, Saturday, Nov. 24th.

Minard's Liniment cures burns, etc.

WEDDED IN TORONTO.

The McClelland—Clark Nuptials Performed by Rev. Dr. Griffin.

A very pretty wedding took place, on Thanksgiving Day, at 143 Robert street, Toronto, the residence of Mr. Orange Clark, when his second daughter, Minnie M., was united in marriage to Mr. Charles S. McClelland, jeweller, Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Griffin and the bride and groom were supported by Miss Winifred Clark and Mr. Will McClelland.

The bride was attired in her going away gown of fawn and brown tweed with brown velvet trimmings and velvet bodice. Only the near relatives of the contracting parties were present.

Mr. and Mrs. McLelland are well and favourably known in Peterborough, where they will reside in future.

The happy couple left amidst hearty congratulations on the afternoon train for Buffalo and other American cities.

THE GOOD TEMPLARS.

City Lodge, I.O.G.T., met on Wednesday last, and at the conclusion of general business, the doors were thrown open to the public and the following excellent programme rendered:

Chorus	Lodge Choir

A basket social will be held next Thursday evening.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mr. George K. Martin, Chief Inspector British Empire Mutual Life Association Co.:

DEAR SIR,—I beg to thank you for your Company's cheque for One Thousand and Sixty-Two Dollars in full settlement of claim on my deceased brother, Thomas Donovan's policy, No. 51,358, inclusive of profits.

In paying this claim 24 hours after receipt of proof of death documents, the Companany has only acted up to its record for prompt settlements, but I wish especially to thank you as their representative for the trouble you have taken and the kind consideration you have shown to myself and the family in our bereavement.

Wishing you and your Company every success in the future, I am

Yours respectfully,
J. M. DONOVAN.

A "Cold" Day!

You caught a cold last week—one of those long, lingering sorts of colds that's sneezy thing to get. Everybody you knew, and some people whom you had never been introduced to, told you what to take, and the more you took the more cold you took. Finally you went to see a doctor. He felt your pulse, told you to hold out your tongue, which felt like an all wool blanket, and advised you to drink plenty of COLD WATER, take two grains of quinine every two hours—and wear a good warm Overcoat. "Two dollars, please," said the doctor, and as you paid him like a little man, you made up your mind that if you had bought an Overcoat when you should, you would have saved your two dollars, the quinine, and wouldn't have to drink so much COLD WATER.

We Will Back Our Overcoats

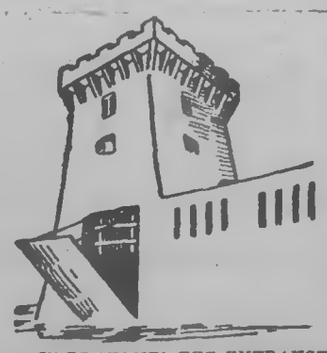
NEAT JOB PRINTING AND BOOKBINDING DONE CHEAP AT THE EXAMINER OFFICE



IT PREVENTS THE ENTRANCE of disease—pure blood or an active liver. How explained? The circulation of the blood is the great highway over which the germs of disease travel, the liver is the quarantine through whose gate any dread disease may or may not pass, as the liver chooses.

Are you watchful? Is your blood in order and your liver active, so as to repel disease? If not, you will find in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery just the help you need. It comes to your assistance when you have such warnings of impure blood and inactive liver, as pimples, boils or carbuncles; or a feeling of lassitude, weakness and despondency. When your flesh is, from any cause, "reduced below a healthy standard," you've only to take the "Discovery," which will set all the organs into vigorous action and builds up both flesh and strength. Avoid nauseous preparations of Cod liver oil. They add fat, but not wholesome flesh or healthy tissue.

HAS FOUND IT.

Dr. McCormick Tells of an Absolute Cure for Bright's Disease of the Kidneys.

A Letter to the Profession.

Himself a Victim to the Disease, and a Bed-ridden Invalid For Months—He is Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

The following letter has been sent to this paper for publication. The writer, Dr. A. McCormick, is a graduate of McGill University, Montreal. He has been for some years, and is now, a successful practitioner at Richmond, Que., and occupies a prominent position in the medical profession:—

Richmond, Que., Oct. 5th, 1894.

To the Medical Profession and to the Public:—

I believe it is my duty, not only as a member of the medical profession, but as a citizen, to use every means that lies within my reach to restore health, and with it happiness, to my fellow beings. Actuated by these sentiments, I do not hesitate to give my experience with Dodd's Kidney Pills.

About two years ago I was taken ill with what I supposed to be a bilious attack, and following this came La Grippe. I recovered however, partially, but being far from well I examined my case thoroughly and found that I was a victim of that dread destroyer, Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. I consulted other medical men, and used all means at my disposal to restore my health, but was doomed to disappointment. I kept gradually growing worse until I was compelled to keep my bed. In March my attention was called to the many remarkable cures made by Dodd's Kidney Pills. That of Dr. Rose particularly interested me, I at once decided to give them a trial. My improvement was marked from the first. I continued their use, following directions as closely as possible, until I had taken about a dozen boxes, which resulted in a complete, and I am satisfied, permanent cure. Before commencing the use of the Pills I had been confined to my room for four months. At the present time am well and able to attend to to my practice as in the past.

Another peculiar circumstance in connection with my case was that I had been a victim of dyspepsia for 21 years. Since taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I have had no return of this disease. I, therefore, do not hesitate as a medical man, to say that they will give prompt relief in cases of dyspepsia, as well as being a positive cure for kidney complaints.

For the benefit of the large number of people suffering from these complaints, I desire to give this circumstance wide publicity.

Yours sincerely,
(Sgd.) DR. A. G. McCORMICK.

KILLS WITHOUT BITING.

The Deadliest of All Snakes Kills Ten Thousand People a Year in India.

The cobra is believed to be the deadliest of all snakes. Ten thousand or more people lose their lives in India every year from its bite. This has gone on from time immemorial, and there appears to be no immediate prospect of putting a stop to it. Some of the peculiar characteristics of the cobra are that it rarely opens its mouth when striking, but actually gives a deadly blow without biting; it bites deliberately when in a state of apparent death from muscular contortion, and will then hang on like a bulldog, the venom flowing all the time into the wound in which its fangs are buried, until it drops at last from sheer exhaustion; and it can squirt the venom from its fangs into a person's eyes and thus blind him for a time at least. The cobra's poison fangs project beyond the lower lip when it strikes, so that it can injure fatally without biting.

Plague of Sandflies.

The missionaries and others in the interior of Africa send harrowing tales of the misery caused by the plague of sandflies, particularly in the province of Bunijako. Father Guillemme, a Catholic missionary, writes that people are brought to him constantly with the most painful wounds all over their bodies, but more particularly in the hands and feet. In some cases the flesh on the toes and feet is entirely eaten away and the bones are exposed. The insect "Pulex Penetrans" burrows in the flesh, particularly under the finger or toe nails, and there lays its eggs. The wound immediately sets up an inflammation, which spreads rapidly, eating away the flesh. In many villages natives are to be found who have entirely lost the use of their limbs through being attacked by the fly "funza," as it is called by the Africans. The insect, it is said, was only introduced to Bante a few years since by a ship from Brazil laden with sand, in which the "funzas" were buried. Since that time the insects have increased with alarming rapidity. Unfortunately, Father Guillemme writes, there appears to be no real cure for the evil.

Nursery Medicines

THE ACME OF PERFECTION.

Diamond Dyes Superior to all Others.

Colors bear a relation to each other something like that of the musical notes, and there is a harmony of colours, analogous to that of musical sounds. An exquisite taste in the combination of colours may be the result of a nice perception of these relations, in the same way that an exquisite taste in music is produced by a nice perception of the relations of musical sounds. It is unquestionable that there are some conbinations of colour which are universally pleasing, and others as universally disagreeable, independently of any associations or acquired habits. To the connoisseur and lover of colours, no more lovely or beautiful sight can be presented, than the tasteful arrangement of over forty standard colours of Diamond Dyes, and the one hundred rich shades and tints which are produced from them. Diamond Dye colours are scientifically prepared, and when used according to directions in the home, the results are pleasing and truly grand. It would require a good sized volume to describe their uses and possibilities, and to tell the comfort, joy and pleasure they are capable of giving.

Mother's and daughter's dresses are made new by them; their wraps, jackets, shawls, ribbons and hose are with little trouble renewed for home and street wear. Father's and son's suits are made to look brand new; and any cast off article of wearing apparel can be made to blossom as the rose. This work of transformation, remember, can only be successfully accomplished by the invincible Diamond Dyes.

Uprising in South Sea Islands.

SYDNEY, N.S.W., Nov. 23.—A Kanaka uprising is reported to be in progress on the islands in the vicinity of New Guinea. Scores of Europeans are said to have been murdered and most of the trading posts burned. The steamer Three Cheers brings the news that her captain found fresh traces of cannibal feasts on Admiralty Island and at New Ireland.

International Bicycle Tournament.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The list of entries for the international bicycle tournament beginning in Madison Square garden on Tuesday evening, contains nearly 400 names, the collective entries making a total of 900. Zimmerman will appear in the professional races with Wheeler and both are reported in splendid condition.

A Graduate of Toronto University says: "My children have been treated with Scott's Emulsion from their earliest years! Our physician first recommended it and now whenever a child takes cold my wife immediately resorts to this remedy, which always effects a cure."

A Terrible Experience:

Mr. Geo. Tribe, of Straffordville, Ont. a pretty village near the shores of Lake Erie, went through an experience lately that he will never forget. He tells it in his own words:

"For three years I suffered from skin disease in its worst form. I tried Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura remedies, and doctored one year with the best physicians in the land, but got no benefit; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but failed to remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard, white scales; the itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. I can truly say I owe my good health to B. B. B., and I advise all sufferers to use this splendid medicine.

JOHANNA'S TRICKS.

AN HOUR'S ENJOYMENT WATCHING THE CENTRAL PARK GORILLA.

Drinks a Quart of Wine Daily—Understands Portuguese and Knows a Deal More than She Will Ever Tell Anybody.

THERE is much of the woman about Johanna, except that she knows more than she will ever tell anybody.

It will repay anybody to go up to Central Park some morning and gain permission to go inside the enclosure put up for the general public and there watch the gorillia's deportment for an hour. She is spoiled, no doubt, and when she doesn't get all of the earth she wants at one time she has an alarming temper and a fiendish yell.

She stands five feet two on her webbed feet. She is twelve years old, and will not have attained her full growth before she is eighteen or twenty, and at present she weighs 110 pounds.

When first seen she sat in her big black barred cage, with her chin on her knuckles, languidly surveying some banana and orange skins. There was a whole apple there, too, which she turned over with a little contemptuous dig once or twice, as though she did want something more, but this wasn't good enough. When Johanna looks disgusted her long mouth droops and her eyes close, and she felt very much this way when "Mat" McKay, the keeper, called her up and held outside the bars her favorite raw egg.

LOOKING AT HER REFLECTION IN A SPOON

"Stand back," he said. "You'll see when she puts out her arm for this the length it is. She could lay hold of you a good distance off and leave an impression you wouldn't like, on your clothes at least."

ARM LIKE A PRIZE FIGHTER.

When the arm did shoot out with the fist closed it was the arm of a prize fighter. You trembled for your ribs and kept your distance after without warning.

"Mat" talked to her in Portuguese. Every word concerning herself she understands like any human being. She thought she was going to get the egg straight off, and like a well-mannered lady, she stood up with one hand grasping the bars, the other pushed through and held open, and a look of languishing satisfaction on her sagacious face.

"Hand up that apple, Johanna, and I'll give you the egg."

At this Johanna lay down flat on her back and kicked furiously. She yelled with such force that the women spectators were stuffing their ears and, in general, behaved exactly like the child of a millionaire, who has never had its wishes thwarted and makes bedlam until it gets what it wants. She kept this up until human ears could stand it no longer, and when "Mat" called "Aqui" in a promising tone she got up with swollen cheeks and looked at him suddenly through the bars.

To see Johanna break, however, from sullenless to satisfaction is worth the penance of all the yells. She backs up her neck, buries her chin in her chest and discloses her fine set of teeth in a gloating smile. Squatting down in the cleared space, she proceeded to knock the top off the egg and suck it with unction.

EATS CONTINUALLY.

Two dozen bananas, one dozen oranges, one dozen raw eggs, about one pound of grapes, pineapple or cocoanut form her daily food. She begins with a lemon to suck at seven in the morning,

BUT B.B.B. CURED

DEAR SIRS—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. I was treated by a skilled physician but he failed to cure me. I had three Running Sores on my neck which could not be healed until I tried B. B. B., which healed them completely, leaving the skin and flesh sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

MRS. W. BENNETT, Acton P. O. Ont.

A SCALY ERUPTION

UNENDURABLE ITCHING

Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B. B. B.

GENTLEMEN—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured. I tried other remedies, such as Donald Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura Remedies, but all to no good. I doctored one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard dry scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. B.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

afterwhile with a quart of wine through the day. She has no special hours for meals. She begins eating when she gets up, and stops only when she goes to bed. She has an unpleasant way of firing through the bars any portions of food she thinks inferior if she happens to be out of sorts, and she has the aim of a hammer thrower.

Satisfied with her egg, Johanna surveyed the crowd outside with a grimace of dubious scorn that was inimitable. Simultaneously she turned the empty egg shell round between her small thumb and four big fingers, glancing from egg to crowd as though ruminating upon an affinity between them. Finally, however, she threw away the shell with an air as if to say, "It's not worth it."

"Aqui" Mat called again, but Johanna knew it was for nothing to eat or drink, so, to show she was otherwise engaged and couldn't attend, she took the despised apple into a corner and pretended to nibble it.

SLIGHTLY INEBRIATED.

Seven dollars a gallon is paid for her wine. She had never had an extra dose, "Mat" declared. Chiko had several times, and in his uproarious drunkenness tore up every thing he could get at. As an experiment "Mat" gave her an extra dose, and his judgment of results is simply that she became "nothing but assy."

Johanna accepted the wine in a bowl. She stuck her finger in to stir up the sugar, upon which "Mat" gave her a spoon. She used the spoon and shook with a big chuckle when she got the wine down. Then she handed back the bowl, but retired into a corner with the spoon. She polished it dry with her hairy hands and then snickered and grimaced at her own reflection in it until the onlookers were in convulsions over the unusual treat. No commands, no promises nor entreaties would wean from her the spoon. When "Mat" stamped she stuck it in the back of her neck and looked innocently at him as much as to say she had no spoon. Then she drew it forth again and smiled ravishly at her own image. She hugged and fondled it and finally took it to a new corner where she turned her back with it to the community.

DROPPED THE SPOON.

Finding she was not to be left in peace she eventually yielded to the influence of the wine, and in an impudent way got as mad as "Mat" himself. She whacked the spoon against the bars in a "get it if you can" sort of way. She poked it out and snatched it back. She grinned and ogled and mocked with refined malignity.

"I'll have that spoon," "Mat" said, and he approached with an orange in one hand an egg in the other.

"There's an egg, Johanna," he said, "and give me the spoon."

Johanna was wary. She put forth her hand for the egg before yielding the spoon and was handed the orange instead.

Then she took the orange and fired it back, catching "Mat's" escaping heels, and if ever an ape's attitude declared, "You don't try any more of that business here, for I'm a lady," Johanna's did. She rose for the second to five feet six and then, overcome by the exertion, relaxed completely.

"Mat" brought her to by the egg. She limply dropped out the spoon, then settled herself to rest.

A Liberal Education.

A wealthy old farmer, as close as the bark on a tree, had sent his only son to a country academy to educate him.

"You shouldn't have sent him there," remonstrated a friend.

"What's the matter with the place?" asked the old man testily.

"It's too little and poor. You ought to send him to one of the big colleges and give him a liberal education."

"Liberal! Liberal!" squeaked the farmer excitedly. "Why, man, ain't it liberal enough when I allow him $25 a month for his schooling and living expenses?"

A Manifest Improbability.

Mrs. Fidgits—"Mr. Man, have you found a purse around here?"

Flowery Fields—"Anyt'ing in it?"

Mrs. Fidgits—"Yes; fifty dollars."

Flowers Fields—"Say, honest now, lady; do I look like a gent dat's found a purse wid fifty dollars in it?"

Smiles.

Fidgety Lady—But what am I to do? I can't ride with my back to the engine Insolent Youth—Better speak to the guard. He'll turn the train round.—Tit-Bits.

"Wife back from the country, Dawson?"

"Yes—just got back."

"Didn't she stay longer than usual?"

"Yes. Couldn't afford to leave, there were so many servants to tip. She had to stay until half of 'em had none."—Bazar.

THE SEWER ARBITRATION.

EXPERT EVIDENCE ADDUCED BY THE TOWNSHIPS.

A Large Number of Witnesses Examined on Behalf of the Townships—A Great Deal of Evidence yet to Come.

Yesterday afternoon, evidence regarding the question as to whether the Otonabee would be polluted or not by the discharge of the outfall sewer into the river, was offered through a number of expert sanitarians by the townships.

Dr. Oldwright, one of the best known sanitary experts in Canada, gave his evidence first and his remarks on the subject of sewage were all endorsed by Medical Health Officer Dr. Charles Sheard and ex-M. H. O., Dr. Norman Allen, of Toronto. Dr. Oldwright was that if the sewage was discharged into the river that the water would certainly be polluted to such an extent as to render its use unsanitary for drinking purposes or for cattle, the milk from which was either consumed in its natural shape or used in the manufacture of butter or cheese. Ice taken from the river and placed upon butter to render it firm would, he stated, be impure and altogether liable to impart unsanitary attributes to the butter. Altogether his evidence, as well as that of Dr. Allen and Dr. Sheard,

MOST STRONGLY SUPPORTED

the contention of the townships to the effect that the water would be polluted by the introduction of the sewage of Peterborough into the river. In England, he stated, corporations were prohibited from allowing their sewers to discharge into rivers or streams.

This morning Messrs. Matthew Johnston, John Matchett, D. B. Crowley, W. J. Hall, William Anderson and T. M. Hunter of the townships were examined regarding the use to which the river water was put by the farmers of the district. The evidence all went to show that while the water was seldom used for household purposes in the way of cooking or drinking, yet the cattle of the farmers living along the river nearly all drank of the water, and that the was sold extensively in its natural state in the town, where large quantities of butter from the same district was also disposed of.

The arbitration adjourned at noon and Mr. Edmison announced that the townships could not possibly produce all their evidence to-day, as several more experts had yet to be examined. Dr. Coventry, Medical Health Officer, of Windsor, will give his evidence this afternoon in support of the argument of the townships, and it is understood that it is expected to be very weighty.

THE ROYAL OAK: TRANSPLANTED, NOT UPROOTED.

Jas. O'Shea's Valedictory and Salutatory.

Removed, but not retired! Royal Oak to thee, farewell!
For I have opened out in the Commercial Hotel.
To all my friends I have one word to say—
From the Royal Oak House I have moved away;
Not quite retired, not lost nor underground,
In the Commercial House I may be found,
The change was made with the sole end in view
To give more room and comforts unto you.
House more commodious, everything complete,
Large standing space or room to take a seat,
Old friends in town, on you I still rely,
Hoping the change will not break friendship's tie.
I earnest hope in a few days to see
Your genial faces, and your converse free.
My bar as usual always will contain
The best of liquors cash can well obtain.
For hot or cold you need but raise your voice,
Or nice cigars, of every brand and choice.
To my old friends—the farming class—I say,
Come, old and new, it is not out the way;
You still will find an open gate and door,
With accommodations better than you had before.
A large clean yard with sheds both warm and dry,
With all things safe beneath the hostler's eye.
Boxes to feed from where your horses stand,
And flowing pump convenient at your hand
Your wife or daughter need not stand outside,
My sitting room both warmth and ease provides,
Here they can sit in comfort and delight,
Till you are ready if you stay till night.
To my new place, come, welcome, one and all Except the man who loves to raise a brawl—
Him I don't want, nor language used profane,
Strict hours and order I mean to maintain,
Friends of the old house call in at the new,
A cordial smile shall always welcome you,
All former kindness I hope to excel,
And swell my business in my new hotel.
Kind and obliging is my motto true,
My chief delight in waiting upon you,
To suit your wishes I will never cease,
To please my friends—and patronage increase.

London School Board Elections.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The Central News has sent out the statement that the new school board would contain 29 clericals and 26 progressives. This is approximately correct. In every division except one the progressives headed the poll. The total peogressive vote was 706,206; total clerical, 612,823. Rev. Joseph R. Diggle, president of the retiring board, and Athelstan Riley, clerical champions, were returned. Mr. Riley had the lowest vote of all the candidates returned from his division.

The Czar's Marriage Contract.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 24.—The marriage contract of the Czar and the Princess Alix was signed yesterday by M. de Giers, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Count Voronzoff-Dashkoff, Minister of the Imperial Household. It contains certain provisions for the bride both during the Czar's life and in the event of his death.

Earthquake in Connecticut.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Nov. 24.—Slight shocks of earthquake were reported from towns adjacent to this city yesterday, reports coming from Groton, Mystic, Lyme and Niantic, where the sound was like distant thunder and the vibration pronounced. No damage is reported.

Anti-Toxine Tested in Hamilton.

HAMILTON, Nov. 24.—Dr. Edgar, of the city hospital, has inoculated diphtheria patients with anti-toxine and the results have proved very satisfactory. The disease has spread greatly among school children here and the authorities are taking measures to stamp it out. A supply of anti-toxine has been ordered from London Eng., by the Board of Health and is expected daily. Three new cases were reported to the medical health officer.

How to Get a "Sunlight" Picture.

Send 25 "Sunlight" Soap wrappers (the wrapper bearing the words "Why Does a Woman Look Old Sooner Than a Man") to LEVER BROS., Limited, 43 Scott street, Toronto, and you will receive by post, a pretty picture free from advertising and well worth framing. This is an easy way to decorate your home. The soap is the best in the market, and it will only cost 1c. postage to send in the wrappers. If you leave the ends open. Write your address carefully.

Give Thanks, and wrap yourself up in one of Grafton & Co's Overcoats. Gratitude and Grafton pull well together.

EARTHQUAKES IN ITALY.

The Panic Has Not Abated—Fifty Thousand People Homeless.

ROME, Nov. 24.—The earthquakes and rumblings continue in the district round Milazzo. The panic has not abated and the houses deserted several days ago remain unoccupied. Signor Galli, Under Secretary of the Interior, visits daily the towns which have suffered most severely.

The scenes in the affected districts are distressing and ghastly. Many of the injured are horribly mutilated. Graves have been upheaved in the Milazzo cemetery and many bodies must be re-interred. The sufferers are tearfully grateful to the soldiers for their care and attentions. Signor Galli has thanked the troops on behalf of the government. Confidence is returning slowly in some districts, but it will be a tremendous task to restore order. Fifty thousand persons are homeless and destitute.

Reduced Mr. Sovereign's Salary.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 24.—The Knights of Labor convention has adopted a resolution protesting against the issue of $50,000,000 bonds by the government, characterizing the issue as an unmitigated fraud and outrage upon the toiling masses in flagrant violation of existing laws and intended solely for the interest of the money powers and a bond-holding aristocracy. The recommendation that all surface railroad employes of the state of New York be united in one body under the Knights of Labor was adopted. Previous to final adjournment General Master Workman Sovereign called Mr. Kenny, the Executive Board to the chair and took the floor. He then moved that the salary of the G. M. W. be reduced from $3,500 to $2,500 per annum. The motion was carried.

Fraudulent Use of Mails.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 24.—Deputy United States marshals went to South Bend and arrested Dr. Samuel Killmer, Harry McDonald and Elmer Strayer on warrants charging them with using the mails for fraudulent purposes. Killmer, McDonald and Strayer are engaged in making and selling complexion lotions. They represent about 150 firms or companies in South Bend that are making and selling patent medicines. Dr. Killmer is said to be worth $100,000 and McDonald and Strayer are wealthy. They have all made their money out of the lotion business. Dr. Killmer has been doing business under the head name of "Louise Fairchild." They were released on bail.

Provincial Ploughing Match.

PETROLEA, Ont., Nov. 24.—The provincial ploughing match was held here yesterday on Mr. Edward's farm and was a grand success. Following is the result: Sulky plough—1, Duncan Sewar, Watford; 2, J. K. Smith, Plympton. Men, non-professional, stubble—1, K. Sucan, Moore; 2, R. E. Allan, Brooke; 3, W. A. Broughton, Sarnia; 4, David Mann, Enniskillen. Boys under 17, stubble—1, Alex. McPherson, Plympton. Men, professional, sod, 1, Archie McMullen, Sarnia; 2, Jas. Welsh, Warwick; 3, Jas. Duncan, Moore. Men, non-professional, sod—J. P. Taylor, Sombra; 2, Wm. Martin, Warwick; 3, Peter Hunter, Enniskillen. Boys under 17, sod—Wm. Duncan, Moore.

The St. Louis Insurance Swindle.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 24.—Chief of Police Harrigan is working upon the theory that R. F. Pitezel, the alleged victim of the Philadelphia insurance swindle, is alive. Every move made by the Pitezel family since the inception of the conspiracy is being followed out, and all point to a common understanding that Pitezel was to disappear and that a cadaver purchased to represent him was buried as Pitezel. Holmes, it is believed, began to defraud insurance companies about three years ago. Prior to that time he devoted his time to drug houses and among those he defrauded was the Merrill Drug Company, of this city.

Killed in Corawall Cotton Mills.

CORNWALL, Ont., Nov. 24.—James Kerwin, the water wheel tender in the Canadian Colored Cotton Mills, Canada branch, was found dead in the basement of the weave shed with the back of his head smashed and his left leg crushed to a pulp. Kerwin was formerly a roller coverer and belt fixer and it is supposed he got too familiar with his work and while in the act of stepping over the belt was caught by the two-foot wide driving belt that runs the electric light dynamo and was carried over the shaft. A portion of the unfortunate man's clothing and hat were found about thirty feet from the body. The remains were removed to the company's office and an inquest will be held. Deceased was about thirty-six years of age and leaves a small family.

The gratifying activity of our Fall trade in this department is a proof that we have got what's wanted in seasonable and fashionable Cloths, and that in the matter of making we are correct in style, sure in fit, and none better in finish. Remember we guarantee every garment or no sale.

15 to 20 per cent. REDUCTION

will be made on all Clothing made to order from now to New Years. We have too large a stock of Suitings, Pantings and Overcoatings, and offer the above liberal inducements on genuine goods in order to reduce our large stock.

See our window dressed with an exhibition of our fabrics and prices.

Our $3.50 Pants have had a great run and it still continues.

Overcoats and Ulsters

That will wear and give satisfaction, ready-made. If you are a big or small built man, your size Coat is here ready to put on. Keep nothing but the best—this store does'nt do a catch business. Good clothes cost no more than poor clothes, if you go to a reliable clothier.

A large proportion of our stock of Overcoats and Ulsters for men and boys are our own make, cut and trimmed up on our own premises, under the eye of our regular cutter, and are as good as if made to order—but very much lower in price.

UNDERCLOTHING.

Decidedly colder—and it makes you feel the demand for something warmer to wear—whether in Underwear, Hosiery, Gloves or Flannels. Prices so low that no one need go cold.

JUST RECEIVED—a large stock of beautiful Underwear direct from the manufacturers at lower prices than ever.

Our 60 Day's Sale

A Pronounced Success

Nothing succeeds like success, and nothing succeeds that's lack the element of Real Worth. If a thing have worth in it and if it supplies a need, it will make its way.

It is because our 60 Days' Sale possesses this element that it to-day enjoys such extensive patronage and popularity.

During November

Up to the present date, sales have been the largest we have ever had; and if this is to be the index, this Clearance Sale of the lines we have advertised, will be ranked as the most remarkable of our record.

Thanksgiving Week

Prices will continue every day much below even Clearance Prices and your experience every day will prove that our VALUES are THE BEST in the trade—that you get more for your money here—that "the Ribbon is Ours."

"It's Fair's Way." We're all enthusiasm—

Now for the Proof

FOR INSTANCE—

TAKE MANTLES!—There is no dormant energy in this department. Fair's is the people's Mantle House—

—200 High-Class German Tailor-Made Mantles, ranging in price, from $8 $15 each, can be purchased now for $3.50, $5 and $8 each.

—200 yards Tweed Ulsterings, reduced from $1.50 to 75c.

TAKE SEALETTES!—30 per cent. reduction on Lister's celebrated Sealettes ought to convince skeptical readers that we have reduced in earnest. Here are the figures to prove it:—

$12 00 per yard Sealette for	$8 00
11 00 per yard Sealette for	8 00
8 50 per yard Sealette for	6 00
6 50 per yard Sealette for	4 50
5 00 per yard Sealette for	3 00

TAKE FLANNELS!—Surely these are things you need. What are the facts:—

—40 pieces All Wool Grey Flannels, worth 20 and 25c., sale price 15c per yard.

—30 piece Flannelettes, worth 8c., for 6c. per yard.

TAKE UNDERWEAR!—There will be urgent need of heavier Underwear from this on. We have all the wanted kinds for men and women, but the whole secret lies in selling first-class quality at a second rate price. Look here for value:—

—Men's Knights of Labour, All Wool Shirts and Drawers, worth 85c., sale price 65c.

—10 dozen Men's Natural Wool Shirts and Pants, worth $2.00, the garments clearing at $1.25 each.

—20 dozen Ladies' Undervests, worth $1.10 each, sale price 85c.

—15 doz. All Wool Vests, former price 75c., sale price 65c.

TAKE DRESS GOODS!—We want to "shame" the other fellows out who are crying Bargains under the ordinary conditions:—

—50 pieces Black and Coloured High-class Dress Goods, imported to sell at 75c. to $1.25 per yard, your choice for 50c.

—500 yards 54-inch Dress Tweed Suitings, worth $1.00, sale price 50 to 60c. per yard.

—300 yards All Wool Black and Coloured Dress Goods, worth 50 to 60c., sale price 35c.

—500 yards Double-Fold Costume Cloths, your choice for 25c. per yard.

—$1.00 B & C Corsets really selling at 65c., and Fair's Half dollar Corsets at 35c.

And so on all over the store. If you are paying "regular" prices elsewhere, you are not doing yourself justice, that's all.

EYE SPECIALIST,

Calls attention to following of blindness upon using wrongly adapted spectacles. He says, when we consider that seventy-five per cent. of people with defective eyesight have some amount of astigmatism, at least forty per cent. have two odd eyes, it will at once be apparent to any one of common sense that they should have their sight tested by some competent optician. If persons are presbyopic only, and have both eyes alike in focus, even then they are not capable of judging what is necessary for them, and no optometer or other sight-seeing apparatus has ever yet been invented which will enable a novice to determine the error of refraction in a case of astigmatism. LONDON CABLE LETTER

The Newspaper War Going on Between England and Germany.

GERMANY UTTERS A WARNING

England Must Stop Interfering in Her Colonial Affairs—Archbishop Walsh's Manifesto—The Forfarshire Defeat—London School Elections.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The hostility between England and Germany is rapidly becoming more marked on both sides. True, it is thus far a newspaper war, but a newspaper war means more in Germany than in some other countries, because serious and responsible papers do not there enter upon international conflicts without some hint or inspiration either from the government or from some Minister whose guarantee they think sufficient. The Kreuz Zeitung began it. The London Standard replied to that and other provocations in a singularly weighty and well considered article last week. To that the Cologne Gazette rejoined angrily and even menacingly and much in the manner of the wolf to the lamb in the fable. England had troubled the colonial waters of Germany; she must stop it or it would be worst for her. Such is the drift of an article which has set every capital and chancellerie in turn talking.

So serious was it thought that the Times itself took a hand in this singular game pointing out with the more effect because in a bantering tone that it was England who had everywhere given way to Germany on colonial questions, while as to Delagoa Bay, which the Gazette alleged as an instance, Germany was not known to have any interests or claims there and had never advanced a single complaint of English action. Then the Standard returned to the subject, gravely remonstrating against these wanton accusations in the German press and again pointing out that it was at least as much for the interest of Germany to be friends with England as of England to be friends with Germany. At the bottom of the German exasperation lies, undoubtedly, beside alarm at the new ties between England and Russia, the fact that England has always held aloof from the triple-alliance and continues to hold aloof. Germans will not understand that to enter into such an alliance is for England a political impossibility.

The London school election leaves the moderates in a narrow majority, but shows a large net gain for the progressives both in votes and in members chosen. The whole board numbers 55. The last board was composed of 36 moderates and 19 progressives. The present board will stand 29 moderates and 26 progressives. The latter have a very large majority of the popular vote, but the cumulative system and other peculiarities in the election nullify this advantage. The issues are distinct, but the progressives on the London county council have alarmed London and many thousands of citizens must have refrained from voting for men of whose fundamental views they approved but whom they would not support while they bore this obnoxious label.

Archbishop Walsh, Catholic Primate of Ireland, has issued a manifesto to the Irish Catholics of England in which he denounces Michael Davitt and other Catholic journalists, for, as he alleges, having made common cause with the secularists against Christian teachings. Unless Mr. T. P. O'Connor shall find some way to pacify the Liverpool priests it is conceded by all that he will be obliged to bid farewell to the constituency which he now represents.

The defeat of the Liberal candidate for the seat in the House of Commons for Forfarshire, made vacant by the appointment of Sir John Rigby to the office of Lord of Appeal, has reduced the Government majority in Parliament to seventeen. Should the approaching contest in the Brigg or North Lindsay division of Lincolnshire result in the defeat of the Liberal candidate the conviction of the National Liberal club is that a dissolution will be imperative early in the spring.

A Noted Frenchman Dead.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Prof. Drury died here yesterday. Jean Victor Drury was born in Paris in 1811, began his classical studies at the College Rollin, then called College Sainte-Barbe, was admitted to the Normal School in 1830, was appointed to the class in history at the College of Rheims in 1833, and in the same year took a similar position in the College of Henry IV. in Paris, afterwards called the College Napoleon. In 1853 he took the decree of doctor of letters. He was the author of a number of works on ancient, mediæval and modern history. He was a grand officer of the Legion of Honor and member of the institute, and had received decorations from Greece, Italy, Portugal and Turkey.

Killed by an Elevated Train.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Two men were killed by a sixth avenue elevated train at the Courtland street station. From effects found upon the bodies their identity was established as Dr. Francis J. Whitemore, of No. 19 west 43rd street, and Geo. H. Bastley, of 348 west 100th street. The fatal accident is supposed to be due to skylarking.

THAT CATTLE QUESTION

Mr. Herbert Gardner Replies to Sir Charles Tupper.

THE MATTER RESTS WITH US

Canada Should Arrange for Giving Notice of the Lung Disease—Experts Proved the Existence of Pleuro-Pneumonia Among Cattle From Canada.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Herbert Gardner, president of the Board of Agriculture, has sent Sir John Long, M.P., a letter concerning Sir Charles Tupper's address to the Forfar and Fife deputation of farmers.

Sir Charles said Canada had challenged the Board of Agriculture to select the ablest veterinary experts and detectives and investigate the condition of all cattle in the Dominion. Canada had offered to pay the cost of the inquiry, he said, if the prevalence of the pleuro-pneumonia should be established. Sir Charles taunted the board with declining this challenge.

Mr. Gardner maintains in his letter that experts proved the existence of the disease among cattle aboard the steamship Mongolian from Toronto last summer. He adds:

"The matter rests mainly with Canada. She ought to arrange efficiently for giving notice of the lung disease and systematic records should be kept. I hope this will speedily take place, and that the prospect of removing the restrictions may be increased."

FROM THE CAPITAL.

Regulations for Indian Schools—A New Railway Move.

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—The new school regulations for Indians in the Northwest have been issued by the Indian Department. The principle of these is that all Indian children between the ages of 7 and 16 shall attend a day school on the reserve on which they may reside for the full term during which the school is open each year, unless excused as being already under efficient instruction, or being necessary to the support of one person dependent on the child. The Indian agents are empowered to appoint truant officers in the reserves, and parents or guardians are liable to fine of $2. Provision is also made for the forcible removal of children whose education or comfort is being neglected to the industrial schools. If properly carried out the regulations mean compulsory education.

Magistrate O'Gara has refused to sign a warrant issued by Judge Desnoyers of Montreal. High Constable Bisonnette of Montreal came to Ottawa for two men who were said to have disobeyed a summons to give evidence in a liquor case. Mr. Bisonnette had a warrant and he wanted Magistrate O'Gara to "back" it for execution here. This Mr. O'Gara did not do, because the warrant was not according to the form of the statute, being a warrant in the first instance for the arrest of witnesses who were not summoned. The statute also requires such a warrant to state that an oath had been taken before the magistrate that the witness was likely to be able to give material evidence and would probably not attend unless compelled to do so.

Right from Ottawa to Aylmer by electric cars, by way of Hintonburg, Skead's Mills and Britannia, crossing the Ottawa river at Deschene Rapids on a bridge that is to cost $150,000. Such is the move the C. P. R. and the Ottawa electric railway have combined in. Mr. H. B. Spencer, assistant superintendent of the C. P. R., manager of the Ottawa electric railway, being interviewed, admitted that the scheme was under contemplation and would be proceeded with soon.

Attempted Her Life in Her Cell.

HAMILTON, Nov. 26.—Edith Cuzner, aged 15, a girl with a previous bad record, was locked in a cell at No. 3 police station on three charges of theft. During the night she twice tried to commit suicide, but her attempts were frustrated on each occasion. The first time she blew out the gas, but Caretaker Headland became suspicious, and Edith was found unconscious, but not beyond recovery, and Dr. Cockburn succeeded in restoring her to consciousness. On the second attempt the girl tore up some of her underclothing into strips and with these tied together she was about to hang herself when the constables prevented her. She will come before the magistrate for trial to-morrow and will probably get a long term in the reformatory.

The Gale Off Newfoundland.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Nov. 26.—Reports from coast towns confirm the belief that Tuesday's gale caused widespread damage, probably more than any other storm in the last ten years. The coast is strewn with wreckage. Seven vessels altogether were lost in Trinity Bay, the Daisy and Olive Branch at Heart Content; the Eleanor and Geranium at Green's Harbor. All had cargoes of provisions and fishery supplies, the loss of which will have very serious results to the fishermen and owners. The crews were saved. Nothing has yet been heard of the unknown steamer which was driven off the coast during the gale.

A New Brunswick Judge Dead.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Nov. 26.—The death occurred yesterday of Judge B. Lester Peters from effects of a paralytic stroke about six weeks ago. He was born in this city sixty years ago and was one of the oldest and highly esteemed citizens. On the death of Judge Walters in 1892 deceased was appointed county court judge. Mr. Peters was past grand master of the Masons of New Brunswick and one of the highest members of the order in Canada. He was unmarried. Already there are a number of applicants for the position.

Fatal Ending to a Row.

GUELPH, Nov. 26.—A serious row with a sad ending occurred on Saturday evening at Borsch's hotel, when John Johnston, a farmer from Marden, and John Cass, employed at Raymond sewing machine factory, got into an altercation. It is said Johnston struck Cass twice, when the latter kicked back at him, striking him in the abdomen, rupturing him. Johnston died in a few minutes. The young man Cass, who belongs to a respectable family, immediately gave himself up.

JAPAN SHOULD LET UP

China is Willing to Pay a Big Indemnity to Her Conquerors.

PORT ARTHUR STILL BURNING

Chinese Officials Say the Story of the Fall of That Stronghold is a Wicked Invention—Particulars of the Attack and Capture of the Town.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The Port Arthur correspondent of the Central News sends this despatch: "Marshal Oyama had approached Port Arthur steadily for two weeks with his army in two divisions. Progress was slow and difficult, as the roads, where there were any, were poor, and the artillery could be brought forward only after the pioneers had prepared the way. The villages were almost empty of supplies. Many of them had been plundered bare by the Chinese. Skirmishing began on November 17. Every fort had heavy artillery, which was used with effect. The large Krupp gun at Kokinsau apparently were served by skilled artillerymen and were especially destructive.

On the evening of the 21st the Chinese still held eight or nine redoubts on the coast and had twenty guns in working order. The Japs bivouacked on the hills. Early in the morning 23,000 men began storming the redoubts. They captured Fort Laomu after a sharp short fight. The other positions were captured in quick succession without heavy losses to the Japs. Eighty guns and an enormous quantity of rice were taken. It was wholly a land fight. The course of events was signalled to the Japs off the coast.

From Tokio the Central News hears that Admiral Ito sent this report: "Port Arthur was taken on the 23nd by the army alone. The united squadrons merely attracted the attention of the enemies' seaward batteries. I have been removing the torpedoes from the mouth of port dockyard and arsenal. The ships in the port are handed over to the naval department. The dockyard and arsenal are in perfect working order."

The Tokio correspondent remarks that Admiral Ito neglected to specify very closely the ships captured and he denies the report that there was a naval battle. It is believed, he says, that the ships in question are Chinese warships which took refuge at Port Arthur after the battle at the mouth of the Yalu, and although fully repaired did not venture out again. Official news is to the effect that Admiral Ito did not take part in the attack because the entrance to the port was studded with torpedoes and all the usual marks for the guidance of pilots had been removed. A despatch boat has been sent from Ping Yang for Port Arthur to convey the Mikado's congratulations to Marshal Oyama.

The Daily News says: "To further prolong the struggle would be an offence against humanity. We hope that Japan will hear favorably her abject enemy's overtures."

The Standard says: "Probably Wei-Hai-Wei and New Chwang will be captured in a few days. Japan ought now to accept Mr. Detrick's offer of peace. China will waive all rights to Corea and pay £25,000,000 if Japan insists upon such a sum, although China could not raise it without being crippled for half a century. The countries who hitherto have stood aside must decide soon whether they will allow Japan to crush China utterly, not only politically but also commercially. The Anglo-Russian entente can be directed to urging Japan to be temperate in the use of her victory."

The Times says: "Perhaps Japan's policy will continue until the arrogance of the Chinese be beaten down. Although the capture of Port Arthur is of the highest strategic importance it is no reason why the powers should depart from their neutrality.

The Che-Foo correspondent of the Times telegraphs that Port Arthur is still burning. Twelve Japanese vessels have been seen there and the cruisers are still near the peninsula. The Chinese fleet is at Wei-Hai-Wei.

From Shanghai the Times hears: New Chwang reports say that Gen. Sung's army is divided. One part holds Mothien-Ling firmly, constantly repulsing the Japanese. The other part under Gen. Sung is marching rapidly toward Port Arthur to attack the Japanese. A portion of the first Japanese army will attack Mothien-Ling and the remainder will follow Gen. Sung.

The Times correspondent in Hiroshima says: During the attacks on Port Arthur the Japanese fleet assisted to land troops. The Tonghak have revolted again in Southern Corea and Japanese and Corean troops are busy suppressing the disturbances.

A despatch from Paris says that the Chinese officials are telegraphing everywhere that the story of Port Arthur's downfall is a wicked invention, and that 30,000 brave Chinese soldiers still defend that stronghold.

YOKOHAMA, Nov. 26.—A despatch from Port Arthur says that the first army formed the right wing and Kwmanotis brigade the left wing, while the advanced heavy guns in the centre opened fire on the citadel. The first army captured the principal western fort at 8 o'clock in the morning, entered Port Arthur at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and had captured the Wogonson fort by four o'clock. Kumanotis' brigade meanwhile engaged the eastern forts, all of which were taken before 11 o'clock in the evening. The coast forts had not yet been subdued, but they fell next morning. It is reported that the Chinese army was virtually destroyed, and killed and wounded numbering many thousands. The Japanese loss was heavy, but far less than that of the Chinese.

Czar Nicholas' Clemency.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 26.—On his wedding day the Czar will issue manifestos remitting arrears of taxes and some sentences and recording other acts of clemency. When he received the Ministers on Saturday he welcomed M. de Giers, of the Foreign Office, with special cordiality, saying that he hoped they would work together for a long time. The streets along the route of the wedding procession will be lined with troops in full dress, sailors and pages.

STICK TO THE FARM.

"Being tired of farming, W. H. Osborne started a grocery at Bowmanville eighteen months ago, and he was not long in displaying his lack of judgment in making purchases. This being continued, resulted in his assignment." "Stick to your farm" is the burden of an old song which should be taught to every farmer's boy in the country. Once perhaps in a hundred times a farmer who forsakes his farm for business may succeed. Farmers have an independent life. In the very hardest of times, when other callings suffer, the farmer and his family have enough to eat. Charles Dickens once urged persons travelling for pleasure, not to roam from place to place aimlessly, but to "stay where they were happy." And it is not bad advice to a farmer to ask him to stay on the farm if he is making a decent living. The pitfalls of trade are many and deep, and failure is written on the life record of hundreds who tempt the fortunes of trade. Prudence, economical living and honest endeavour do not always avail; the absence of the business instinct, makes success difficult and failure easy, and there are rare instances when a farmer, who has attended to his acres with common prudence, has failed. He may make a bare living and that is, in hard times, a great deal, and in his old age the land will yield a sustenance at least, and the roof a shelter. This is an agricultural country and the chief occupation of the people should be tilling the soil. The farmer's boy, who deserts the farm for the city or the farmer who deserts his tilled acres for the counting house, may not regret such a step, but the chances are against his being as happy and as comfortable, all things considered, as he would if he remained on the farm.

THE Bobcaygeon Independent says in reference to Mr. Essery's defeat in London: "The London election must be slightly disouraging to the Opposition leader, Mr. Marter. The part he took in the campaign did not in any way reflect to the credit of the new leader. He does not appear to realize his changed conditions. The lines of argument that are well enough for an ordinary member of a party, are entirely too paltry, if not contemptible, when taken by the leader. Mr. Marter cannot too soon realize that he is now leader of the Opposition and no longer Mr. Marter, of Muskoka."

THE Government of Quebec proposes to institute a provincial park, which is to be called the Laurentides. The district selected is a tract of some 2,500 square miles of unsettled territory to the north and east of the settled district around Quebec city. The purpose is to make the park a place for the preservation of large game and the study of forest growth. A smaller tract in the township of Grandison, in the eastern part of the province, has also been set apart as a sanitarium.

EMIGRATION from Britain and Ireland this year declined a good deal, and emigration from European countries to America declined still more. The figures for the ten months ending with October were 139,163, as against 193,616 last year. Emigration to the United States dropped from 141,023 in 1893 to 94,311 this year; to Canada from 23,937 to 14,621, and to Australasia from 9,178 to 8,734. South Africa is the only colony, that shows an increase.

The Troubles in Italy.

ROME, Nov. 26.—Some 600 peasants and their wives with flags and clubs attacked the town hall at Alatri, near Forentino, shouting that they would pay no more taxes. The police to frighten them, fired in the air. They were beaten and stoned by the mob and were driven into the hall, where they remained inactive while the peasants threw stones through the windows. Eventually troops dispersed the mob.

U. S. Immigration Report.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The annual report of Herman Stump, U. S. Superintendent of Immigration, shows that during the fiscal year ended June 30th, 1894, 288,820 immigrants arrived in this country, of whom 285,631 were landed, 2,389 being debarred because of being under contract. Of the immigrants over 16 years of age, 41,000 could not read or write.

Mrs. Maybrick Petitions the Queen.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Mrs. Maybrick, the American woman who is serving a life sentence in Woking prison for the murder of her husband, has petitioned the Queen for a release, pleading that she is innocent. She asks the Queen to order a public examination of the evidence adduced at the trial and collected since.

Bill for Credits Passed.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—The Chamber of Deputies decided on Saturday, by a vote of 390 to 112, to pass to the executive the clauses of the bill providing the needed credits for the Madagascar expedition. Towards the close of the debate Premier Dupuy said he would stand or fall by the vote.

THE GLOOM CITY OF CANTON.

Some of Its Horrible and Peculiar Institutions Described.

From the five-story pagoda on the hill behind Canton one looks down over the plain of the city, covered with the low-gabled houses unrelieved by towers or any massive piles. Here and there the roof of a temple will raise itself slightly above its fellows, but architecturally there is little of interest in Canton. The most interesting temple in the city is the pagoda of Five Hundred Genii. An old Chinese legend says that one day the Great Buddha Yii Lui Foo, in passing through a wood, saw 500 bats "crouching on a large trunk of trees" (as a Chinese translator put it), and by fasting and prayer he succeeded in converting them into genii, and allotted to each of them a place of worship in his temple. And here they sit in silent conclave, carved from wood, no two alike, and before each is an incense pot to receive the burning joss sticks of worshippers.

The Temple of Horrors faces a crowded open market square. Along one side of it, open to the square, are displayed life-size wax figures representing scenes from the Chinese hell. The hell is nothing if not interesting, and the pleasure of novelty there must almost make up for the torture. In one scene are men immersed in boiling oil; in another women standing serenely while they are being sawn in two lengthwise.

The executiong round is called "the bloodiest spot in the world." Chinese criminals fare worse than those of any other country. The prisons are dark, unhealthful, unclean, and crowded. Many of the prisoners wear the "cangue," a heavy square, made of boards, with a hole in the center through which the head is thrust. Wearing this, the prisoner can neither lie down, nor, in sitting, lean back against anything, nor can he convey food or drink to his mouth, but must depend upon the aid of his fellow-prisoners. Tortures are not as common now as formerly, though in the interior they are used to some extent. The two most common death-penalties are the Little Cut and the Ling Chee, or Big Cut. The first is for murderers of the ordinary kind. They are gashed in 31 places before the fatal stroke. In the Big Cut, used for parent-murderers, the skilful executioner keeps his victim conscious of his suffering till the sixty-fourth stroke of the sword. Gradually he is dismembered, till his head finally is severed. The tortures of other kinds are too horrible to describe, and victims are kept in agony for days before merciful death drops the bars and the agonized soul passes from the dreadful highway into the quiet pasture of death.

Outside the city is a large enclosure in which are long rows of what look like bath houses, except that they are built of stone. This enclosure is called "Examination Hall," and hither come students aspiring to pass the second degree. It is a sort of national university, smacking a little of civil service requirements. The first degree is passed elsewhere, by young men of intellectual training, who then zealously try to fit themselves for this more difficult one. There are 11,616 cells, each containing one student, who is imprisoned here during the three days of his examination; and out of all these only 124 are passed. The examinations are biennial, and so great is the honor for the successful and so deep the chagrin of those who fail, that suicide is not uncommon among the latter. In each cell is a stone slab for a seat and another for a table, and in each row is a guard to prevent all egress from the cells. For three days the candidates work on their theses, then depart to await judgment. Later in life, when those who have passed have risen to positions of importance, they go to Pekin, to attempt the third degree, which is the highest in the land and of great honor and prestige.

The queue is a national institution, a political necessity, as well as anything of social custom. Young boys, whose queues are growing, have them pieced out with interbraided black or red silk. With the adult the braid, when undone, as often seen in the barber shops, is surprisingly luxuriant and glossy. The barbers shave the face, head, eyebrows, nostrils, and ears of their customers. Girls wear their hair in braids, and when they are grown, arrange it with oil in a stiff design behind, fastened with green jade pins. By using porcelain or carved wood neck-rests at night in place of pillows one hair-dressing will suffice for an entire week.

Throughout the city one sees only darkness and gloom. There are no smiles on the faces of the people, no merriment or light-heartedness, few games among the children. The streets are dark: so are the houses, and so, seemingly, are the temperaments and hearts of the people. To judge from the system of their empty religion, from their dreadful ideas of future and present punishment, their methods of legal procedure, and the customs of the higher classes, down to the unamusing amusements, the noisy, hideous theatres and plays of violence and horror that lure all classes of society—the Chinese nature seems to be morbid, fatalistic, and unlightened with any element of joy.

Their uncouth exteriors are a fitting expression of their souls. Beauty is unknown here. In architecture, painting, and sculpture it is grotesque form, lurid color, and demoniacal figure of god or devil that obtains. There is nothing graceful, light, or uplifting in their art, no expression of ideal, no representation of love, mercy, grace, or peace, and no inspiration to other things. Their bodies are not sunkissed and rosy of hue, but of the dull, opaque tone of lifeless bronze. Their forms are not round and supple and sprightly, but emaciated, tense, and slow-moving. Life is a long, dark lane, with no orchards or meadows opening from it, no boughs, laden with fruit, bending above it. The high walls of their own building debar the sunlight, and through the entire length of their pilgrimage there is but one resting place; that is at the end, and the end is to be reached only by a weary journey, and cannot be seen. Their tired eyes drop stolidly to the bare pavement; they bear in silence the load upon their shoulders, and pass forever—these countless hordes of unknown ones—down the barren way of life.—New York Churchman.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen:—I feel that I cannot say enough in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla. For five years I have been troubled with scrofula in my neck and throat. Several kinds of medicines which I tried did not do me any good, and when I commenced to take Hood's Sarsaparilla there were large bunches on my neck so sore that I could not bear the slightest touch. When I had taken one bottle of this medicine, the soreness had gone, and before I had finished the second the bunches had entirely disappeared." BLANCHE ATWOOD, Sangerville, Maine.

IT PAYS TO AVDERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

BREAKS OUT IN MONTREAL.

The Investigation in That City Reveals More Aldermanic Boodling.

MONTREAL, Nov. 26.—The investigation now in progress in this city has revealed an amount of corruption among the aldermen that makes Toronto's experience in that line appear small.

At the examination of Mr. Hopkins, the architect who planned the Street Railway Company's building which recently collapsed, killing men, his evidence showed that tenders for the building were not advertised for, but a few contractors, among them seven aldermen, were invited to tender. The firm of Ald. Dubuc were allowed to alter their tender twice after the other tenders were opened. The Dominion Bridge Company got the contract for iron work and subcontracted to Ald. Clendenning. After the work had commenced, Mr. Hopkins reluctantly admitted that he had allowed the contractors to practically do the work just as they pleased without his supervision.

"You were being paid," said Mr. McGibbon, "to superintend the work, and you allowed a contractor to go on without knowing in what particulars they were going to differ from your specifications?"

"On the condition that they resumed responsibility for the change."

"Was there no undertaking or guarantee from the bridge company, other than that contained in the contract?"

"The contract was amply sufficient and binding."

At the time the contracts were let the Street Railway Company, which is practically the same company that controls the Toronto Street Railway, were seeking a franchise from the city, and in the face of this gave contracts to five aldermen. The question as to the validity of the contract is now being raised.

LONDON KIDNAPPING CASE.

Three Men Arrested Charged With Committing the Crime.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 26.—Last Tuesday, a young man named John Morkin, was supplied with liquor, and while in a drunken condition removed to a residence in the suburbs of the city in order to prevent his voting. His hands and feet were securely tied, and as a result of the treatment received he is now in the hospital. On Saturday Mr. Ed Morkin, hotelkeeper, swore out warrants for the arrest of the alleged perpetrators of the deed. Walter Logan, a letter carrier, was arrested at the post office by Detective Nickle, and subsequently Fred Boyd, son of ex-Ald. John Boyd, was apprehended at his father's place of business and also placed in the cells. J. F. Kingsmill, jr., was also placed under arrest. Warrants are out for two others, Dan Donaldson, of the custom house, and Robert Logan, a brother of Walter. The specific charge is kidnapping, a criminal offence under the law. Young Morkin is reported as slightly improved at the hospital, but has not yet recovered the use of his arms.

Fire at Niagara Falls, Ont.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 26.—On Saturday flames were noticed pouring from the rear of the large frame building occupied by W. Hawley as an Indian bazar and photograph establishment near the Clifton house. The rear of the building was occupied by Ted Smith (colored), who kept a saloon in that portion of the building, occupying the ground floor as living quarters for himself and family. Smith and his family barely escaped with their lives in their night clothing. Mr. Smith's daughter, who is a cripple, had to be carried from the burning building, her rescuers doing so at a great risk of their own lives. Their faces and hands were badly blistered. Not a dollar's worth was saved from the flames. Mr. Smith's loss on stock and furnishings, $2,500; insured for $1,000. Mr. Hawley's loss on stock, $5,000; on building, $5,000; partly insured. The fire is supposed to have started from a defective electric light wire. The Smith family had to get clothing from neighbors to cover themselves.

Burglar Fatally Injured.

MONTREAL, Nov. 24. — Late Saturday night thieves effected an entrance to the premises of Z. Pilon, Notre Dame street, and stole a quantity of articles. Mr. Pilon happened to see the thieves and chased them through the store and along Notre Dame street. When near Dalhousie Square station one of the accused, whose name is given as G. Wilson, alias M. Thomas, and who was about to be captured, jumped over the railings at Dalhousie Square station, a distance of about forty feet, falling heavily on some iron, where the police found him bleeding and in a battered condition. The ambulance from Notre Dame Hospital was at once telephoned for, and the man was taken to that institution, where upon examination physicians declared that he could not live as nearly all his bones were broken.

Gales on the Atlantic.

HALIFAX, Nov. 26.—The Danish steamer Hekla, from Christiana and for New York, put in here short of coal. She met with fearful weather on the voyage, having been battling with terrific northwest gales and heavy head seas for sixteen days, much to the discomfort of 90 passengers on board. Her deck was frequently swept by seas but no serious damage was sustained or injuries inflicted to those on board. Heavy northeast gales have prevailed here all afternoon and evening and a number of vessels ready to sail are detained in port.

A Missing Woman's Body Found.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 26.—The body of an old woman, Mrs. Berry, badly decomposed, was found in the swamp at Church's corners on Saturday. It will be remembered that the old lady left Brantford for Simcoe on August 8, and when the train stopped at Church's she got off and all trace of her was lost. A number of searching parties went out but without success, and her disappearance remained a mystery until her body was found in the swamp by two gentlemen out hunting.

THE YOTT CASE.

Proves there is Only one Reliable Remedy for Kidney Diseases.

Wolfe Island, Nov. 26th.—There are many remedies in the world, as well as many doctors, which give sufferers temporary relief, yet the one remedy which produces a permanent cure, is, according to the testimony of L. Yott, of this place, and scores of others who have tried it, Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Yott is positive in his assertions, and challenges comparison of results of Dodd's Kidney Pills in his case, with the records of all other remedies and physicians. He furnishes indisputable evidence that Dodd's Kidney Pills produce more lasting benefit that any remedy known. Scores of testimonials could be obtained here from young and old, who were cured of kidney troubles by these pills, and to-day are well and strong.

TROUBLE IN HAWAII

The Situation on the Islands is Considered Critical.

POST TOWNSEND, Wash., Nov. 26.—The despatches from Honolulu, via San Francisco, regarding the possibility of an outbreak and attempt to overthrow the government of Hawaii, have brought forth a sensational story, which goes far toward confirming that news. The story is to the effect that one dark night two months ago two sailing vessels, bound respectively for Honolulu and Australia, lumber laden, were intercepted a short distance outside of Cape Flattery, and while the vessels lay to large shipments of munitions of war were placed aboard by a tug chartered for the purpose. The vessels were instructed to run into small ports some distance from Honolulu, where, under cover of the darkness, the packages were to be taken on shore by royalist agents. The packages were marked general merchandise, and included a number of the finest rifles and ammunition sufficient to supply three full companies of men. Recent announcements that the royalist emissary in Washington has been assured by the authorities that in case of further trouble United States marines would not be sent ashore to intimidate the natives have made the latter bold, and the old revolutionary fire has been fanned into flame by the agitators. Sea captains say there are many malcontents among the Japanese population, who would gladly take up arms against Dole's men in retaliation for the recent refusal of the white people to extend the right of suffrage to them. The situation is considered critical.

Another Toronto Alderman Resigns.

TORONTO, Nov. 26.—Alderman Hewitt has sent his resignation to the city council. In his letter to the Mayor he gives the following reasons for severing his connection with the council: "Owing to my name having been dragged into the dust by a disappointed American contract-seeker, whose charges against me are wholly false, I deem it my duty to my colleagues in the council and to my constituents to take this course. I wish further to say that the imputations against aldermen are so numerous and the criticisms of the press so unfair and unfriendly, that I must henceforward be considered as out of the field for aldermanic honors."

Wrote Up His Own Suicide.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 24.—Dr. James Lucas, a graduate of Edinburgh University, has been practising in Winnipeg for several years, but with poor success, chiefly because he was addicted to the opium habit. He visited the office of the Free Press, offering for sale a two column article called "The Story of a Suicide." Lucas told the editor if the story was accepted he would at once commit suicide as described in his sketch. The editor thought the man was intoxicated, but promised to look over the manuscript. Dr. Lucas then went to the room at the Lisgar hotel and after taking a large dose of opium hanged himself from the ceiling by his braces. When found on Wednesday he had been dead several hours.

Toronto Down on Obscene Posters.

TORONTO, Nov. 24th.—In the crusade begun by the morality department against obscene theatrical posters, the Customs authorities are making commendable effort to back up the law. A show, that is billed to appear here next week, attempted to pass some of their "paper" through the customs in the usual way, but after minute inspection the officers decided that the bills came under the law respecting the important of obscene literature into this country. The bills, which are said to be far worse than any yet shown in this city, were accordingly detained at the Customs house and will be returned to the United States.

FULL OF ENCOURAGEMENT

FOR ALL WOMEN.

In Bed 5 Months—Had Given Up All Hope of Getting Well—A Remedy Found at Last to which "I Owe My Life."

Science has fully established the fact that all the nervous energy of our bodies is generated by nerve centres located near the base of the brain. When the supply of nerve force has been diminished either by excessive physical or mental labours, or owing to a derangement of the nerve centres, we are first conscious of a languor or tired and worn-out feeling, then of a mild form of nervousness, headache, or stomach trouble, which is perhaps succeeded by nervous prostration, chronic indigestion, and dyspepsia, and a general sinking of the whole system. In this day of hurry, fret and worry, there are very few who enjoy perfect health; nearly everyone has some trouble, an ache, or pain, a weakness, a nerve trouble, something wrong with the stomach and bowels, poor blood, heart disease, or sick headache; all of which are brought on by a lack of nervous energy to enable the different organs of the body to perform their respective work.

South American Nervine Tonic, the marvellous nerve food and health giver, is a satisfying success, a wondrous boon to tired, sick, and overworked men and women, who have suffered years of discouragement and tried all manner of remedies without benefit. It is a modern, a scientific remedy, and in its wake follows abounding health.

It is unlike all other remedies in that it is not designed to act on the different organs affected, but by its direct action on the nerve centres, which are nature's little batteries, it causes an increased supply of nervous energy to be generated, which in its turn thoroughly oils, as it were, the machinery of the body, thereby enabling it to perform perfectly its different functions, and without the slightest friction.

If you have been reading of the remarkable cures wrought by South American Nervine, accounts of which we publish from week to week, and are still sceptical, we ask you to investigate them by correspondence, and become convinced that they are true to the letter. Such a course may save you months, perhaps years, of suffering and anxiety.

The words that follow are strong, but they emanate from the heart, and speak the sentiments of thousands of women in the United States and Canada who know, through experience, of the healing virtues of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, a prominent and much respected lady, writes as follows:—

"I owe my life to the great South American Nervine Tonic. I have been in bed for five months with a scrofulous tumour in my right side, and suffered with indigestion and nervous prostration. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I cannot recommend it too highly."

Tired women, can you do better than become acquainted with this truly great remedy?

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, and have no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similiar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose to pay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times

Telfordian Temperature Topics.

Monday, Nov. 26th.—At this morning's observation the thermometer indicated 15 degrees above zero, with little change of temperature. Snow in place of rain on Saturday. The upper current of clouds came from the north-west, the lower current from the south-west. The lower one always brings the storm—seldom, indeed, being the reverse; therefore, I expected rain but was not a great deal out of the way.—THOS. TELFORD.

A Chance to do Good.

You can do good to humanity—to suffering little children—if you like. Thousands of people have canned fruit this year in your county or township. Now, if you and your friends could collect a hundred quarts of fruit and send them to the Hospital for Sick Children, College street, Toronto, you would confer a blessing on the hundreds of sick little ones cared for within its walls. Write the Secretary, Hospital for Sick Children, College street, Toronto, and arrangements will be made to have the fruit brought into Toronto carriage free.

An Interesting Rally.

The Christian Endeavour Union Meeting this evening in the George street Methodist Sunday school room, will be more than usually interesting, and no doubt will draw a large number of citizens as well as Endeavourers. The programme is as follows:—Miss Kennedy will speak on "The Relation of the Senior to the Junior Society;" Rev. A. MacWilliams, "The Relation of the Sunday School to the Junior Society;" Rev. Dr. Torrance, "Missions and Systematic Giving;" Rev. J.J. Rae, Good Citizenship." These addresses will be interspersed with music led by a choir furnished by the Baptist Young People's Society. Rev. W. R. Young will act as chairman. A collection will be taken up.

NEWS NUGGETS.

Paragraphs Picked Up and Pencilled for Public Perusal.

—Additional local matter on eighth page.

—These are brisking times, but don't expect every year to be a red one.

—There were a great many people in town, Saturday, and although the weather was bad, business was brisk.

—The slippery condition of the sidewalks caused many a sober citizen to measure his length on the sidewalk last night.

—A young tough was fined five dollars and costs this morning by Magistrate Deroche for committing a nuisance on the market square.

—A large number of new books which were lately purchased will be catalogued and placed in position in St. John's Sunday school library by next Sunday.

—Xmas cards, Xmas booklets, art calendars, 1895,—a beautiful display at the Peterborough Bookstore. Remember your friends in the Old Country. A. H. STRATTON & Co. 2d —Ex-councillor John McNaughton states that three ladies will contest in No. 1 Ward for municipal honours. He hopes that the other wards will follow the good example of No. 1.

—Master Eddie Trollope, while playing with the front part of an old waggon on Saturday morning, slipped and fell, one of the wheels passing over his face, cutting and otherwise bruising it.

—Mr. H. M. Blight has a magnificent baritone voice, which so charmed his listeners that he was repeatedly encored.—Erie, Penn. Herald. Mr. Blight will sing at the Yunck concert, Dec. 4th—Opera House.

—The council met in committee of the whole Saturday evening and spent a couple of hours in discussing the sewer contract and arbitration. A special meeting of the council will be held on Wednesday evening.

—William Collins, grocer, of Ashburnham, was fined $20 and costs this morning for selling liquor in quantities less than three half pints. He was also charged with selling liquor to a minor, and in this case judgment is reserved until to-morrow.

—Mr. Fred Holland, wine clerk of the Grand Central, is bemoaning the loss of a favourite hound, which being chained in a stable jumped over a stall and was strangled to death. The dog was one of the best deer hunters in the district, and was valued at $50.

—Grocer Sullivan, of Ashburnham, was charged in the police court this morning with selling tobacco to a minor. The case stands for judgment until to-morrow. The tobacco, it seems, was obtained by the intoxicated youth, Patrick O'Donnell, who was up before the magistrate a day or two ago.

—The violin solo by Herr Yunck was a performance most remarkable for its technical finish and artistic feeling. Herr Yunck is an artist of exceptional ability and his playing is sympathetic, refined and conscientious.—Milwaukee Sentinel. The lovers of music should avail themselves of hearing this grand concert on Dec. 4th, opera house.

—The assault case in which Mr. Thos. Timmins charges one of his boarders with assaulting him comes up for judgment to-morrow. It seems that the boarder was leaving and did not wish to pay some board money which was owing, as he alleged that he had lost a vest while living in the house. Hot words ensured and the boarder finally lost his temper and is stated to have dropped a right hander straight from the shoulder in on Mr. Timmins' eye. This led to a summons being issued.

—Mr. W. Sanderson has in the window of his jewellry store a clock, which has attracted a great deal of attention, as it is one of the prettiest of novelties, being made of red enamel and ornamented with handsome gold filagree work. On the top is a figure of a Spanish musician with a guitar in his hand and altogether the clock is one of the prettiest in design that has been exhibited in Peterborough in some time. Another in pale blue enamel is also most attractive. The pair are wrought in the design known as the "Louis XIV." style and come from New York.

PERSONAL.

Mr. J. M. Hamilton, of Caldecotte, Burton & Spence, Toronto, is in town on a business trip.

Mr. Claude Macdonald, barrister, of Toronto, spent Sunday in town as the guest of his cousin, Mr. Louis M. Hayes.

Mr. James Clark, of Port Hope, and Mr. Homer McLeod, of Kingston, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Kincaid, of Harvey street.

Mr. Ed. Knowles, of Brantford, formerly of Peterborough, is visiting his relatives in town, and took a place in the Charlotte street choir yesterday.

Mr. Jas. Stevenson, M. P., is suffering from the effects of a fall from his stable loft. The injuries, though slight, are painful and consist of a strained back and wrenched ankle.

Miss Annie Fawcett was in Kingston on Thanksgiving Day, and sang a solo in the Methodist church there, under the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Edwards. Her voice is said to have been greatly admired.

Mr. David Elliott has returned from Montreal, after superintending the placing in position, in Montreal, of the giant dynamos, manufactured for the street railway of that place by the Canadian General Electric Works here.

Not Guilty.

Last night yesterday morning about two o'clock in the afternoon, before breakfast time, a hungry boy appeared before the beak charged with having in his possession a pair of five dollar pants bought in the usual way. He cleared himself by producing a receipt from W. J. Green, Hunter street, who is selling $5.00 pants for $3.00. Come thou and do likewise—that is, buy the pants.

APPLES! POTATOES! BUTTER! Apples by the barrel from $1.00 up; potatoes by the bag; butter by the firkin. Close prices and first class goods. John Kincaid, Water street, two doors north of of Stevenson's coal office.

Musicians, Attention!

The piano to be used at the Herr Yunck concert on Dec. 4th, is a cabinet, grand specially selected and loaned by Whaley, Royce & Co., Toronto, and is manufactured by the Reimer Piano Co., and contains one of Wessel, Nichol & Gross' best American actions. The touch is light and elastic—the very acme of perfection. It has great power and volume of tone, combined with a rich quality that delights and captivates. A Tone Liberator, a Patent Muffler, which, when put into operation, produces the softest tone possible, and enables the performer to practice at any hour of the day or night, without disturbing any one in the house or neighbourhood and a Metallic Key-board Support, are special features of these instruments. If this instrument is not sold within a few days after the concert, it will be returned to the show rooms on Yonge street, Toronto.

MAGNIFICENT MACHINERY.

A SPLENDID, NEW HAMILTON COMPANY ENGINE.

The Firm Supplies the Steam Plant for the Victoria B.C., Electric Light Station—Superb Mechanism—Excellent Finish—The Complete Outfit Supplied by the Company.

Among the numerous industrial establishments that give Peterborough its reputation as a manufacturing town, The William Hamilton Manufacturing Company occupies a prominent place in the first rank. The products of this establishment are in demand in every part of the Dominion, from the east to the west, and the last order which this company has completed is a proof of both the solid, substantial and satisfactory nature of their work, and of the wide reputation it has attained.

This firm has just completed an order for the complete steam plant—engine and boilers—required to run an electric light plant for the corporation of the city of Victoria, British Columbia. And by the way, the Canadian General Electric Company has the order for supplying the electric plant to be driven by the Hamilton Company's engine, so that the east, which is regarded as the source of natural light is dependent upon the west for its artificial light.

The engine supplied by the William Hamilton Company is what is called a Tandem Compound Payne-Corliss engine, with cylinders of 14 inches and 26 inches diameter respectively, with twenty-inch stroke. The enormous fly-wheel has a diameter of eight feet and weighs six tons. The crank shaft is 9½ inches in diameter. The engine is regulated by means of a shaft governor, and the speed called for by the coporation of Victoria is 200 revolutions per minute. The engine has been tested up to 150 revolutions per minute and though resting on only a temporary timber foundation, it ran also taking into account that the work being new, the journals have not yet fairly got set in their bearings. This morning, when a representative of the EXAMINER visited the constructing room, the engine was whirling around making 150 revolutions, and the motion of every part seemed perfect—the immense and complicated mass of mechanism was running as smoothly and noiselessly as a first class sewing machine. Some idea of the perfection of the work and the mechanically exact adjustment of the parts, especially the regulating apparatus, may be formed from the fact that the engine is guaranteed by the makers, to regulate with only 1½ per cent. of variation from "full load to light," that is, from driving the entire machinery of the dynamo system to running merely by itself. This is considered a very close requirement, but their is no doubt that the engine will meet it. There are no "dash pots," as on an ordinary Corliss, their place being taken by the shaft governor. The engine will be most economical of steam, from the fact that the whole steam plant is built with that end in view. The steam in coming from the steam pipes passes through the smaller cylinder and is expanded to four volumes. It is then led by the receiver pipe to the low pressure cylinder, and undergoes a process of expansion to an extent that makes the total expansion fourteen fold when the engine is doing its normal work.

This engine will develop, with a boiler pressure of 125 lbs., and cutting off at one fourth of the stroke in the high pressure cylinder, and at 200 revolutions per minute, 350 horse power, and its possible maximum development is over 550 horse power.

It is fitted with a full set of sight feed lubricators, with all of them highly nickel plated. The machine in every part that goes to the formation of the jackets of the cylinders, and the wrist plates and valve rods. The whole appearance is massive and elegant, and a more fluely finished piece of mechanicism has never been turned out of the shop. The engine is "run condensing" by a duplex condenser, which relieves the back pressure upon the engine and permits more power to be developed according to the amount of steam used.

IS VERY HIGHLY FINISHED

The foundation of the engine in the power house, Victoria, will be ten feet deep, with a floor space of 6x20 ft., and the engine will be firmly bolted to the solid mass of masonry.

The boiler plant consists of four tubular steel boilers, each 60 inches in diameter and 16 feet long. Each contains 80 three-inch tubes. The boilers have two steam drums each eight feet long and 30 inches in diameter, placed on top of the boilers, from which steam is conveyed to the engine by a 5-inch steam pipe. Each boiler is furnished with a full flush front of neat external appearance and each has a 3-inch "pop" safety valve. The grate surface under each boiler is 25 square feet. The smoke box on top of frout end of boiler gives passage to the smokestack, 100 feet high and 4 feet 6 inches square internally. Every boiler has been tested to a pressure of 190 lbs.. the working pressure being 125 lbs. The boilers have all been inspected and approved by the Boiler Insurance Company, of Toronto. They are fed by a duplex steam pump with a capacity of 6,000 gallons per hour. The boilers are under guarantee to consume not more than 2 lbs. of best steaming coal an hour per indicated horse power.

The Hamilton company, within themselves, have made the whole of the steam plant required, and the plant will be placed in position in Victoria by the company's staff of workmen, under the superintendance of Mr. Robt. Hamilton, the company's resident representative.

The work is a credit to the establishment and the workmen concerned. It was built from plans supplied by Mr. A. C. McCallum, the mechanical engineer for the company.

You must wear what has wear in it, if you would be proof against attacks of seediness, and Grafton's clothing possesses the wear that gives satisfaction.

Good Advice.

A certain young man who resides in ward No. ——, had been keeping company with a very amiable young lady with intentions towards matrimony, called on the evening appointed for their marriage and produced a small parcel. On examination she exclaimed, "Well, I am so thankful you bought the marriage license, gloves, &c., from W. J. Green, Hunter street, as now we are sure of having good luck." Try one—only a single trial solicited.

Trent Valley Canal.

A CHANCE FOR THE PUBLIC AS WELL AS THE CONTRACTORS TO MAKE MONEY.

A SUIT OF CLOTHES AND A NEW DRESS THE PRIZES.

In order to stimulate public interest in the Trent Valley Canal, and also to get at some idea of the public feeling in reference to the date of completion of this important local public work, which has been hung up before the eyes of the public for the past half century; and which to the eyes of the Government seems to assume a vastly increased importance just previous to an election, the EXAMINER offers the following prizes as an inducement to some of our expert mathematical and logarathmic specialists to exercise their estimating powers.

In order to furnish calculators with some data to assist them, it may be mentioned that Sir Charles Tupper in 1882 stated in Peterborough that the work would be proceeded with as rapidly as the finances of the country would permit, and that in 1890, on the eve of the election, the late Sir John A. Macdonald telegraphed to Mr. Jas. Stevenson the day before the election, to the effect that the commission having reported in favour of the feasibility of the canal, the work would at once be proceeded with.

On the night of the election in the opera house, Mr. Stevenson, in expressing his unbounded faith in the bona fides of this telegram and of the government's intentions generally, said, that if the following summer (1891) there were not a thousand men at work on the Peterborough-Lakefield section he would resign his seat. Mr. Stevenson, not having resigned his seat, it is to be inferred that there is some underground canal work going on, and the operators will work upwards and meet the new contractors as they work downward.

The EXAMINER makes this proposition out of consideration for those who are standing around idle, in order that they may form some idea of the time when, on the completion of the canal, they may expect to look for another job.

Any person sending in to the EXAMINER five of the following coupons, containing their estimate of the time when they think the sections will be completed, will have a chance to compete for the following valuable prizes:

To the lady making the nearest average estimate, A NEW DRESS.

To the gentleman making the nearest average estimate, A NEW SUIT OF CLOTHES.

No estimate considered unless accompanied with five of the following coupons, which will be printed in the DAILY EXAMINER, every day this week, and in the weekly for two weeks. Readers of the latter who may not procure complete copies of the daily may use their weekly coupons to make up the required number:

TRENT VALLEY CANAL COUPON.

I estimate that the Simcoe and Balsam Lake division of the Trent Valley Canal, (54 miles) will be completed and accepted as finished, by the Government, on

————, —— day of ——, 1—

That the Peterborough and Lakefield section (34 miles) will be completed on

————, —— day of ——, 1—

REV. J. C. DAVIDSON'S BUSINESS SERMON.

DIRECTLY ON THE POINT AT ISSUE.

A Discourse Which was Vastly Appreciated by the Business Men of the Town who Filled St. John's to the Doors.

During the past week Rev. J. C. Davidson has devoted a good deal of time to gathering data for a sermon on "Religious life as connected with the business depression." Until Saturday it was not known just when the sermon would be delivered, but in the evening papers on that day announcement was made that the sermon would be given at the Sunday evening service.

It is well within the bounds to say that every business house in town was represented at the service and the church was filled to the doors.

The discourse was directly to the point and dwelt principally on those lines, which were of the greatest interest to the business element of the large congregation in attendance.

The text was taken from Micah vi, 8 and 9,—"He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God? The Lord's voice crieth unto the city, and the man of wisdom shall see thy name: hear ye the rod, and who hath appointed it."

Mr. Davidson opened by saying that all realizeed which exists between religion and life—between our worship and our work in the world. Indeed, so direct and so strong do we feel this connection to be that when life is low and work is hard, men are inclined to drag the worship of God down to the level of their lives to avoid the evident inconsistency.

Much more glowing, however, must this inconsistency be in the sight of God, but He will rectify it by the opposite method. He bids men to maintain firmly their worship and religion, never to pull down that flag and in spite of failure and discouragement to persist in their effort to draw up to that high level their secular life and work.

In the time of Micah, commercial life was evidently in a

and the chapter and verse referred to showed God's dealings with a people who had sunk to the level injustice and fraud.

The rector went on to point out the different stages of the Divine dealings as recorded in the chapter. There was, first, the effective appeal, then the plain denunciation of sin, then the warning that acts of worship would not atone for lives of sin, then the voice of the Lord crying through the disaster that followed, and the appeal to listen to this voice and repent. And the prophet pointed out that religion after all was not so intricate a thing as might appear at first sight. "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God."

Applying this passage to our commercial age and town, the rector proposed to help to answer the question "what must I not do?"

REPENTANT BUSINESS MEN

It was clear, he stated, that one must do something more than go to church. There, it was true, the Divine breezes blew to fill the sails of the soul, but it was impossible to sail heavenward on Sunday when anchored firmly in the mire of ungodliness, of wrongs committed during the past week.

What are the practices which thus hinder the progress of man, queried he. These were then summed up in the terms "unbusiness like and dishonourable dealings," viewed not according to a human, but a Divine standard. In every transaction it was for men to inquire "Is this honourable?" He then went on to point out how difficult it was to answer this question in the complications of modern commercial life. Men had to carefully consider the real position and relation and what these involved.

The rector now took up certain definite cases. First, he said, men were coming to agree that our present system of competition, i.e.

OF COMMERCIAL WAR

is unreasonable and has immoral tendencies. It must give way eventually to co-operation, but the difficulties which barred the way to this consummation are not as yet removed and work has to be continued under the present system. Surely however, said he, men need not accentuate the warlike features of this system. It was for each one to excel in his own department without encroachment on his neighbours preserves. Mr. Davidson here quoted from a wholesaler's words, that the greatest curse of commercial life was the passion for servile imitation.

Secondly, it was easy, he said, for business men to see the necessity for regular stock-taking but how hard it was to desire and act aright when the balance sheet showed that the business

WAS BEYOND CONTROL.

At that certain time the question should not be, how long can I hold on? but what would be the best course for my creditors. The tide seldom, if ever, turned after this point, and prolongation up to enforced assignment meant only additional loss and and anxiety.

Thirdly. Very often the business man is simply an agent or trustee for his creditors, and continued to be so until he could pay cash for his goods. Therefore his character must be in accordance with his real position. Wastefulness or extravagance in home or business expenses amounted to dishonesty.

Fourthly. The rector now led on to the practice of ALLOWING PREFERENTIAL CREDITORS.

The law was clear that in insolvency all creditors most share alike. There were many evasions of this law which were absolutely unjustifiable. Of those, who acted in a similiar fashion to large corporations on the plea "I don't mind letting them in, as they can stand it better than me," should pause and think that these corporations were composed of individuals and all should be rendered that due.

It was evident that all who failed were not to be ranked together. There were honest and dishonest failures and the former only should be encouraged.

Mr. Davidson then expanded on the tendency in the community of the pernicious habit of commercial gossip (as refered to in the EXAMINER.) The community, he stated, should treat the business men not only with honourable dealings, dueing the business depression. More especially should even small obligations be met promptly and spread trading over the whole week, and in other ways we should stand by our fellow citizens.

BUT WITH SYMPATHY

In all problems of commercial life two paths present themselves, one comparatively easy, and one difficult. Upon men's decision in these cases hang the loss or saving of large sums, the happiness of themselves and others, the degrading or ennobling of their characters, and the triumph of good or evil. For each law devised, ingenuity suggested countless evasions, and so the course determined upon depends really upon moral character, and upon the extent to which men were influenced by an enlightened conscience and by an ideal before them.

Two great national ideas

WERE STRUGGLING IN CANADA

for ascendancy. There was the American idea of sharpness, which justified every success, and against it the old British idea of justice, and of honourable dealings with all.

The story of the failure of a West of England Bank was here told to exemplify commercial heroism which ranked with heroism on the battlefields. Fellow-citizens, said the rector in conclusion, this heritage of British character—solid, square dealing and honourable, is ours to-day if we will only cultivate and develop it. Let the British flag float emblazoned to our race with British courage, firmness and honour, not only on the battlefield, but in the still more difficult struggles, struggles in the streets and warehouses of the great cities.

SAD DEATH OF DR. VERNON ST. CLAIR HALLIDAY.

A Young Life Cut Short Just at the Opening of a Professional Career of Universal Promise.

A telegram was received by the relatives of Dr. Vernon Halliday in town this morning, bearing the sad tidings of his decease in New York City at 3.45 o'clock this morning.

Dr. Vernon Halliday was twenty-five years of age, and the eldest son of Dr. J. T. S. Halliday, town. He was a fine, straightforward and manly young fellow and his friendship was bright and esteemed by all who were so privileged as to be ranked among his friends. The news of his sudden death was a great shock to everyone and has cast a general gloom over the town.

Vernon Halliday received his degree from McGill University several years ago and in 1892 opened an office in New York city, where he was doing exceptionally well in his profession, when he was stricken down with that fell disease—diphtheria, while attending patient. He was taken to Willard Parker Hospital, where he suffered from the most virulent type of the disease known. During the early part of last week the new diphtheretic remedy, anti-toxine, was tried, and the patient rallied considerably, but on Saturday his father received a telegram to come to the hospital at once, as heart failure was becoming alarmingly perceptible. Dr. Halliday left at once for New York, but ere his arrival his son had passed over that bourne from which the traveller returneth not.

AVOID MORE FAILURES.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—In a timely sermon on business morality, at St. John's, last night, the preacher referred to a few of the evils springing from the present industrial system of competition. While it seems hard to find, or rather to apply, a remedy for some of these evils, there are others which can, and ought to be, faced and dealt with.

For instance, consider the case of a man proposing to embark in a certain line of business. He thinks that the only points to be considered are (1) can I by any means get the necessary money or credit and (2) can I get a desirable business stand? If these two things are obtainable, the question is settled. The new-comer argues "I must get my share of the trade." Now, for his own benefit and that of the community, ought not such a man to consider whether there is, or is likely to be, any demand for his work or his goods—whether the town is, or is not, being sufficiently served in this department?

As a case in point, a commercial traveller reports that he recently delivered samples to exactly sixty two grocery stores in this town. He was not sure that he reached all, but left the others for another trip. It is for grocery men to consider whether a constituency of, say 12,000 people, needs or can support, so many depots. But this is only one instance of the working of a wide principle which seems to me destructive of true commercial interests.

Now that we have had our difficulties and things have probably reached their lowest point, is the time for us to profit by the lessons of the past and to build up solid foundations for a future prosperity.

Yours, etc.,
CITIZEN.

Peterborough, Nov. 23th, 1894.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The song service on Saturday night was not largely attended, but was a bright and interesting meeting. We trust that the fellows who enjoy a sing, and have Saturday night "off," will spend 45 minutes with us. Expect something special in music next Saturday night.

The Sunday afternoon meeting for men got a good start yesterday. Rev. J. Rae gave an excellent address on "Through faith out of weakness were made strong." About 75 men attended, and the 45 minutes were full of interest and enjoyment. The quartette did not materialize, but will be there sure next Sunday.

Cream Ale.

Ask for Calcutt's Cream Ale, special Christmas brewings, on draft at all leading hotels. Keep the money in town and drink home brewed.

Men's Fur Coats in natural Russian dog at $12, $15 and $18. The warmest and best cap in the world for the price, at FAIRWEATHER & Co., corner of George and Simcoe street, Peterborough.

Special $1.00 Pipe.

We have a large stock of pipes in cases from 50c. up; our "special" $1.00 pipe is extra value, easily worth 25 per cent more; other lines $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 and up. Call and see them. F. B. CLEGG, 417 George street.

Organs and Pianos.

Messrs. Jackson & Co. have a number of second hand organs and pianos from $50.00 up, which they are anxious to clear out, in order to make room for their Christmas goods. Easy payment. Terms to suit buyers. Organs and pianos to rent. Show rooms and factory 378 Aylmer street.

In is nonsense to spend money, it matters not how small the amount, for poor clothing. Wisdom consists in buying Grafton & Co's make every time.

Protect your Horses.

Don't allow your valuable horses to go without a waterproof cover during the cold wet days of the fall. Be good to them, provide them with one of Kingscotte's strictly waterproof covers, costing only a dollar or two. If you are shipping and receiving goods that are liable to damage from wet, Kingscotte's black oiled canvas waterproof covers "fills the bill,"—nothing better or cheaper. They have no tar in their composition, being an OIL preparation, which keeps them soft and pliable. Awnings taken down and stored in a careful and agreeable manner. Halls decorated for assemblies, balls and meetings of all kinds. ALF. KINGSCOTTE, tent, sail and awning maker, 344 Water street.

WILL BEGIN ON SATURDAY.

On Saturday, Nov. 24th, the sale of the China Hall stock will begin, and continue for two weeks—or until the whole stock has been disposed of. The goods have been reduced from 25 to 50 per cent., and in some cases 75 per cent., so there will be big bargains for everyone. Dinner, Tea and Chamber Sets, Silver Ware, Lamp Goods, Ornaments, etc., at prices that cannot be repeated again. Buy now for Christmas. China Hall and Silver Bazaar, Saturday, Nov. 24th.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

A "Cold" Day!

You caught a cold last week—one of those long, lingering sorts of colds that's sneezy thing to get. Everybody you knew, and some people whom you had never been introduced to, told you what to take, and the more you took the more cold you took. Finally you went to see a doctor. He felt your pulse, told you to hold out your tongue, which felt like an all wool blanket, and advised you to drink plenty of COLD WATER, take two grains of quinine every two hours—and wear a good warm Overcoat. "Two dollars, please," said the doctor, and as you paid him like a little man, you made up your mind that if you had bought an Overcoat when you should, you would have saved your two dollars, the quinine, and wouldn't have to drink so much COLD WATER.

We Will Back Our Overcoats

Against any Others in Canada

for saving doctors' bills, and you couldn't have better advice than to get into one of GOUGH'S tip-top Overcoats FORTHWITH.

Buy a $4.00 one if you can't afford a better one, as that may save a five dollar doctor's bill. Buy an All-Wool $10 one for $6 50 if you want a better one—or if you want a heap o style for your money, we've got the extreme styles at from $12 to $15.

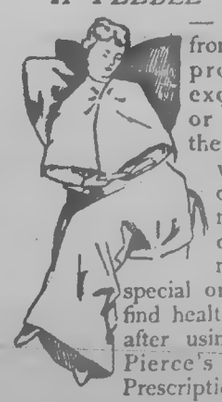
A FEEBLE WOMAN



—suffering from nervous prostration, excitability or dizziness, the result of weakness, derangement, or displacement of the special organs—will find health regained after using Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

The one remedy—standing solitary and alone—for woman's weakness, which is guaranteed to benefit or cure, or the money refunded, is the "Favorite Prescription."

What offer could be fairer?

It's a powerful invigorating tonic, a soothing and strengthening nervine.

For women who are run-down and overworked; at the critical periods in woman's life—the change from girlhood to womanhood, and, later, the "change of life"—this is especially adapted to her needs; for it strengthens, regulates, and CURES.

I WAS walking along Regent street in the autumn of '92, with an eye indifferent to the charm of that gay precinct, when suddenly in spite of my preoccupation I noticed, in a brilliant shop window, a sign bearing this announcement, "Latest Novelty—Silver Sirens."

It was in direct consequence of the delusive glamor of a Silver Siren that my spirits were, at present, so depressed, that my luck seemed to me a traitor and my whole destiny thwarted. Hence, as I read this sign I paused. Being an engineer by profession, I had gone to Nevada some months previously, to superintend a pumping process in some silver mines, and while there my interest in the science of hydraulics had been superseded, owing to the babblings of those sirens of the West who whispered their alluring delirium into my ear. At their behest I laid aside my professional work and launched into the vortex of speculation, with disastrous results to myself, my family and my friends. The briefest mention of the fluctuating hope and annihilating despair of that undertaking must suffice. My telegrams to my "governor" were daily paradoxes, the buoyant optimism of one day defying the predestined pessimism of the next.

Defeated, disgusted, heavily in debt, my father seriously handicapped by mortgages and forced sales on his property, I had come home to England to see what could be done, and it was on the morning of my first meeting with my creditors in the city, as I was returning from my club, that I noticed the sign of "silver sirens" in the shop windows. I glanced with grim curiosity upon that confused mass of burning gems and burnished gold in the jeweler's window, and, as I did so a shopman advanced to the light of the door attending a young girl. He held in his hand a silver whistle which I soon found was the very object of my interest. I overheard the man say, with subservient blandness:

"These are whistles, my lady, made on the principle of our fog horn sirens or semaphores. They are the latest novelty and are much used by the yachting clubs this season at Cowes."

He placed the thing to his lips and breathed upon it. Although the act was quite gently done, a low, crooning noise, which rose and fell with a plaintive gradation filled the air with such a penetrative quality that several people on the sidewalk paused and glanced into the shop. I determined under one of those sudden impulses which seem, sometimes, to make of us irresponsible factors in our own destinies, to buy the bauble, and a few minutes later it was dangling from my watch chain. In a short time, however, under the pressure of grave cares, I had forgotten all about it.

I soon began to seek some means of modifying the distressing condition to which my absence of caution and reliance on chance had brought me. Fortunately for me a company in London whose confidence in my capacity as an engineer had not been shaken by my lack of judgment in the West engaged me to conduct a large engineering scheme in some salt mines in Russia in which much capital had been invested.

I need not say I was glad of the chance this offered me. I was glad also to get away from London, where I found a subtle condemnation of my acts in even the glances of my friends. I was very sore and sensitive, and when a man who had always been one of my favorite friends and relatives called out to me from the pier at Calais, in one of those attempts at pleasantry which so often contain a sting: "I say! Francis, don't go and buy a salt mine in Russia!" I felt that the time had come for me to cancel such speeches by some new line of action.

I was confident about my mission. Several engineers had failed, it is true, but the many fail, the one succeeds. These mines could not be worked owing to the percolation of water into them. To check this flow of water and redirect its channels was my task.

I hurried across the continent and had made good time. Haste was imperative for winter was closing upon the heels of autumn and the deep snows would delay my progress. All went well with me as I crossed those lonely versts, over which there seems ever to dwell a brooding melancholy. My kibitka or hooded sledge was very comfortable. It was drawn by sturdy Finn ponies, which were exchanged at the different stations along the route.

When about two days from the end of my journey my yamschik, or driver, fell seriously ill. When these strong and intrepid sons of toil yield to the influence of disease the onslaught is usually sudden and violent, like a wind which fells, with crashing fury, the oak which has long swayed to the storm's rough lashing. I wrapped the poor fellow in my rugs and placed him in the easiest part of the kibitka. As the lights of Woleki twinkled in the distance, while I guided the Finn ponies as dextrously as I could over the roads, I knew from Varika's terrible delirium and fever that the poor yamschik was making his last life struggle.

My Russian vocabulary was put to the test, as I pulled the ponies up at the door of the station house. I managed, however, to explain to the host that the sick man was the yamschik and that I was the passenger. As the stableboys held the lights high, to enable them to draw poor Varika from the sledge, I saw that all was nearly over.

"O' hi!" moaned the host, as he showed me into the contracted and smoky sitting room, "O' hi, the little father's prayers are more necessary now for Varika than are the doctor's drugs. The poor lad is called to drive the white horse into the presence of St. Peter to-night and give him his reckoning." To my great annoyance, I found that I could not procure another yamschik at that station to drive me on that night. I made bold promises of a vedro of vodak, if one could be found, but no one seemed willing to take Varika's place. The mystery of death had for the moment checked the interests of life in those superstitious hearts.

While I was employing useless arguments with a knot of men in the room, there was a noise of horses' feet and the shrill cries within announced the arrival of a sleigh. A fat Russian maid was in the act of placing a steaming samovar before me when, with much stamping of feet outside, the door of the room opened and a man of very noble bearing came in. He saluted me with dignity and then withdrew, immediately returning with a young girl upon his arm. Her face seemed to make a sudden summer spring into the wintry place.

My experience had evidently been told them, for, as the girl glanced at me, I heard her say: "The poor yamschik! Dear father, how awful is sudden death!"

With a little hesitation the man advanced to me and said in good English: "I beg pardon. Can this be, by chance, Mr. Francis Adams, the engineer of the salt mines in ——?" Then promptly followed a pleasant solution of my problem. Count Bariatinski, the owner of these salt mines, was himself on the way thither, hoping to reach the place by the time of my arrival, and this crossing of our paths had hastened our meeting.

The count, of course, introduced me to his daughter, the Countess Stephanie, explaining that she had long wished for an experience of crossing Russia in a sleigh, and added that, as the cold had increased very much, he feared he had lent a too fond ear to her entreaties, in consenting to bring her. An hour later found me very much at my ease in the luxurious sleigh of the Count Bariatinski, the young Countess Stephanie's face glowing with loveliness just opposite me.

A Terrible Experience:

Mr. Geo. Tribe, of Straffordville, Ont., a pretty village near the shores of Lake Erie, went through an experience lately that he will never forget. He tells it in his own words:

"For three years I suffered from skin disease in its worst form. I tried Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura remedies, and doctored one year with the best physicians in the land, but got no benefit; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but failed to remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard, white scales; the itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. I can truly say I owe my good health to B. B. B., and I advise all sufferers to use this splendid medicine.

LATEST FADS FOR BRIDES.

The Photograph Album as a Memento of the Wedding Trip.

"I suppose," said a society woman to a writer for The Washington Star, "that you have heard of the newest fad for brides. No, I don't mean bouquets of purple flowers, which I should hate to have anyone I cared for carry; they must be so unlucky, purple being emblematic of mourning, you know. I mean the bridal albums, which so many of this summer's fashionable brides are are getting up to celebrate their honeymoons. I think the notion is charming, and a friend of mine has one that is lovely. She made every bit of it herself including the cover, she paints very well in water colors, and that made it much easier to have the book pretty. For the cover she took two pieces of rough cardboard about nine inches square and then she had quite a lot of heavy linen paper cut to the same size, with two holes through one side of it to put the pink ribbons through to tie it together. The bridegroom had a bunch of white carnations in his buttonhole during the ceremony, and these she pai ted in the center of the upper cover, while over the rest she scattered the Catherine Mermet roses which composed her bouquet. The effect was simply lovely—very dainty.

"What did she have inside all this gorgeousness? Why all sorts of souvenirs of the trip, of course. First there was a picture of the first hotel they stopped at, which she cut from the bill of fare, and a sketch of the picturesque old darkey who waited on them at the first meal they ate together as husband and wife. They took a country drive, and while out chanced upon a wandering photographer, who took a picture of them and their conveyance, and this was pasted in and framed with the blossoms of the wild hydrangea which they bought from a barefooted urchin on the road. The boy, as he stood with the great bunch of flowers in his hand, makes a cunning little sketch in the corner. Another page shows a sketch of a couple strolling, arm in arm, through a field of daisies, and a chain of these modest flowers frames the little picture. One page is given to violets, some being pressed and tied up with little bows of the light blue ribbon she wore on her dress when her husband brought them to her, and others were painted in. Photographs of all the pretty or interesting places they visited are used, with an occasional bill of fare or a theatrical programme, each being accompanied by some memento at the occasion, either a flower, a ribbon, or a sketch depicting some little incident. Stems of raspberries, with their leaves, served as a reminder of an afternoon they had spent in an old-fashioned garden, and as the golden rod was just out last week, when they went home, they are to appear on the back of the cover. Just think what a delightful souvenir it makes to keep all your life."

"I never talk about the club to my wife." "I do. I speak of it in glowing terms, and then stay at home occasionally. So my wife thinks there isn't a more sacrificing husband in the world!" —Kate Field's Washington.

China's Finances.

The London News says that the finances of China are in excellent condition. That country "has not contracted the fatal 'facility of piling up foreign obligations.'" About 20 years ago China borrowed in England about $12,000,000 at 8 per cent., and paid it when due. In 1894 $7,500,000 was borrowed at 7 per cent. and $12,250,000 at 6 per cent., and this loan has been gradually paid off until only $3,500,000 is due, and will probably be paid next year. These loans were contracted on a silver basis, and the fall in the value of that metal has practically doubled the rate of interest, but there has been no hint of repudiation nor delay in payments. A portion of the custom duties are by contract set apart to pay these loans, and none of this portion seems to have been devoted to other purposes. The Chinese revenue is from import and export duties, tonnage and transit duties, the opium tax, a land tax, and taxes on rice, salt, and other products, besides a system of licenses. Very little is known of the amount of the revenue or expenditures of China. Its credit is so good, thinks The News, that in spite of the war a loan for almost any desired amount could be negotiated in Europe.—Springfield Republican.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

Gives Instant Relief.

PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause than Itching Piles, yet its effects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

HOW TREES GROW.

How the Time to Study the Wonder of the Beginning of the Trees.

Now, when the superabundant vegetation of summer no longer cumbereth the ground, is the time to walk along the edge of a woodland and learn how forests grow. Rising through the grass sometimes only a few inches, sometimes a foot or more, one now sees the younglings of the forests, seedlings from nuts, and every form of forest fruit sown last autumn, or perhaps the year before. Nature, in her reckless profusion, sows her forests seeds right and left at the root of the parent tree and, by the aid of the wind, out beyond the edge of the woodland. Millions rot upon the surface of the ground, or are eaten by birds, beasts or insects. Comparatively few are covered with earth and germinate. Many of those few perish by a thousand accidents when they first peep above ground. Some fractional percentage of the whole number of seeds sown live to the end of their first year, and it is these that now greet the eye upon the woodland's edge, pretty mimics of their giant parents.

One gets a notion of the forest tree's tenacity of life when one attempts to uproot the baby tree. A yearling hickory is found with deep struck root thicker than the stem above ground and often longer. Only a strong arm can uproot the infant from the spot where he has set a firm foot in his native soil, as if he knew his destined towering height and six feet of girth. So the oak; his infant tap root exceeds in length his height above the ground, and he braces himself with lateral rootlets as if he felt the tempest in his locks a century hence.

The nobler forest trees, too, in their youth, have to make provision for the needs of age, to dive down into the bowels of the earth and draw therefrom the stuff from which giants are moulded, the water that shall serve for life and growth when droughts destroy the puny annuals towering in their mushroom growth of a season above the tiny oak with its heritage of centuries. The birches are less firmly rooted. They content themselves with a modest depth and a wide lateral spread of branching roots. The beech spreads wide and sinks deep in preparation for the time when the secret alchemy of its cell shall transmute the food drawn from earth and air into the marvel of its giant limbs.

There is a peculiar charm in the infancy of these future giants. The tiny young oaks of the larger varieties sometimes exceed their parents in the size and richness of their leaves, and for some years the growing oak has a peculiar autumn splendor that comes late and lingers long. The leaves of the young pin oak are more delicate than those of the parent. They take on early the tints that glorify this variety of oak. The almost pentagonal leaves of the seedling tulip tree are also tiny, with a transparency unknown to the broad fish greenery of the well-grown tree. The foot-high elm wears his dark green flannel leaves far into the autumn and seems to escape the beetle. The baby birch, when uprooted, has a pretty secret to reveal of the way her kind grows in sisterhoods of three, four, five, or more. All about the base of the baby trunks, just beneath the surface of the ground, are little buds that will in time develop into independent trunks—at least, such seems their promise. The elms propagate abundantly. So do the maples, growing in single, tall straight wands. The tulip tree is also the parent of a great brood, and the young wild cherries spring abundantly. The oak seems less prolific probably because the acorn is an excellent food. So too, the chestnut, whose seed escapes the worm only to fall into the clutches of the schoolboy. The birches spring up in all directions, but the beech is less commonly found in its infancy. The sassafras surrounds itself with a whole colony of young shoots from the far-spreading roots. Hence the charm of the natural plantations of the sassafras. The beauty of its family groups should be a perpetual reminder to human families that few of use in the mass are so well worth the photographer's art as the spontaneous vegetable products of nature.—New York Sun.

SARAH BERNHARDT'S KIND ACT.

Taking Up a Destitute Countryman and Making Him Independent.

Sarah Bernhardt is as kind-hearted as she is capricious, it appears, and as willing, often, to use her influence and talents for the benefit of others as herself when rightly appealed to, says The New York Evening Sun. One of the persons who has gained everything that makes life worth living through her generosity was a Frenchman in most direful straits. He found himself with a wife and family in the United States and not the wherewith either to feed or clothe them, nor any prospect of improving his condition. A hint of his distress reached the great actress, who literally took his case in hand, for the divine Sarah is a very practical and energetic person when she has a mind to bestir herself. The Frenchman proved to be both a scholar and a gentleman. In an instant she mapped out his career, airily appointing him master of languages to the four hundred. He was at first hopeless and aghast, but she bade him help her prepare a series of readings she had promised to deliver, and after them at her receptions he was introduced and enthusiastically recommended by his generous patroness. She even took him to California on the same mission, and before sailing for France had the pleasure of seeing him prosperous, independent and happy in the very calling to which she had appointed him.

THE SEWER ARBITRATION ADJOURNED.

DR. COVENTHY'S WEIGHTY TESTIMONY.

His Evidence the Heaviest for the Townships—He Says the Water and Ice From the River Would be Totally Unfit for Human Use.

On Saturday afternoon, Mr. Edmison, for the townships, called a large number of farmers to give evidence. Their testimony all went to show that they greatly feared the pollution of the river would destroy the dairy interests of the vicinity, as the cheese factories would have to shut down for want of patronage if the farmers using the river water for their cattle were shut off and not allowed to bring their milk to the factory. Many of them used the ice in their drinking water and nearly all placed it on their butter to harden it for market. By others, again, the ice was used in packing pork. Some of the farmers went as far as to say that the pollution of the river would depreciate the value of their acres by at least ten per cent.

It was expected that the evidence given by Dr. Coventry, Medical Health officer of Windsor, would bear directly on the point at issue and the townships placed considerable reliance on his testimony as an expert sanitarian to materially aid them in carrying their case. A very few minutes sufficed to show palpably that their confidence was not ill-placed, as the doctor's evidence was strongly in favour of the townships.

He stated that the town of Walkerville with only 1200 inhabitants had built a system of sewerage, which discharged itself into the Detroit river, about half a mile above Windsor, whereupon the the Windsor authorities had immediately entered an action against that municipality for polluting the river. The river at the point of contamination was from one half to three-quarters of a mile in width, flowed at the rate of about two or three miles an hour and in depth averaged from ten to forty feet. He had analyzed the water opposite Windsor and considered it much polluted. It took sewage from 16 to 30 minutes to flow down from Walkerville to the intake pipe, at Windsor, but a good deal of it went ashore, where it lingered and creating a most offensive odor. The sewer in question was carried out into the river a distance of about 200 feet from the bank. The sewage was not prone to mix with water easily when the current was so slow as in the Otonabee. Another cause of the sewage matter clinging together was that it was not of the same temperature as the water into which it was discharged. It would thus be prevented from disseminating for some time but would finally spread and drift into shallow water or weedy beds where it would become most corrupt and create a great nuisance.

The great objection the doctor had to the pollution of rivers by sewage was that water was a ready carrier of diseased germs, and therefore such water would not be potable. He had examined the point of discharge of the new outfall sewer and was of the opinion that if the work was carried on to completion it would be a great detriment to the river, as a very appreciable pollution would take place, rendering the water totally unfit for human beings to drink, and dangerous for cattle.

Sawdust, he stated, obstructed the stream, making the current slower and delaying the rapid transit of the sewage, and would also form for diseased germs. In proportion to the time sewage was delayed bacteria developed, making a stream very unhealthy. In the case of the pollution of the Otonabee even the water of Rice Lake would become dangerous to the health. Germs multiplied so rapidly to render a computation beyond human comprehension. One single cyclops had been known to become the parent of an offspring of 15,000,000 in a summer season. Typhoid germs live in water and maintain life for an almost incredible length of time, through a very large range of temperatures and multiply rapidly. The condition of the Otonabee, he judged, was largely favourable for the reproduction of typhoid germs for months during the summer. A typhoid germ could easily reach Rice Lake from Peterborough. The use of the water in any way would become dangerous, if there was an epidemic of any kind in the town. It would be dangerous in ice as the freezing process does not destroy the diseased germ. The ice could not be used on

LIKELY BREEDING BEDS

ANY FOOD WHATEVER.

The germs of cholera infantum, dysentery and diarrhœa would be equally as dangerous as typhoid germs, so also would be those of diphtheria and scarlet fever. The anthrax from a tannery, if emptying into a sewer, which discharged into the river, would breed disease in cattle, and the flesh of the hog, if not properly cooked, would also become unsafe to eat. One way in which diphtheria could be contracted from a stream in which the germs existed, was through the circumstance that water rats were most susceptible to the disease, and after taking it would spread it through a neighborhood by entering the houses.

AFTER BEING POLLUTED

the water would be dangerous to drink for at least ten days afterwards, as the germs would easily live that length of time. If there was an outbreak of cholera in Peterborough the doctor stated that he would not take a drink of water from the river a mile below the town for $1000, if the sewer discharged itself into the stream, and if there was a single case of typhoid in the town there would be a very great risk in taking even a mouthful. In his opinion there would be deposits of sewage along the shores, which would become extremely offensive. Assuming that the discharge from the mouth of such a sewer would be but five or six tons of solid matter per day, the deposits along the shores of the Otonabee would to the health of the residents. In breathing the effluvia rising from it there would be great danger incurred, and the air being vitiated it would render the residents in the vicinity highly susceptible to disease.

BE MOST DETRIMENTAL

The ice from the river, Dr. Coventry stated, would become totally unfit for any domestic purposes whatever. It would be like playing with an edged tool to use it. He would not allow a patient of his to use milk from a cow which drank the river water if the Peterborough sewer was discharged into it.

Sewage, he urged, should in every case before it was emptied into a river from which other municipalities derived their water supply.

Speaking of some of the western cities he stated that the river below London used to be something terrible, and the stench arising from it was sufficient to drive boating parties off the water. While out on the river, he had frequently discerned large masses of the most corrupt sewage floating down it.

On being cross-examined the doctor admitted to Mr. Edwards that if hides were treated with a germicide much of the danger arising from the presence of a tannery would be diminished, as if they were disinfected thoroughly the germ causing anthrax in cattle would be destroyed.

At the conclusion of the Doctor's evidence, the arbitration was postponed until Wednesday next, when Judge Ketchum proposes to finish up if possible before the end of the week.

CHURCH CHIMES.

Rev. J. J. Rae delivered an address to young men in the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon.

The Brotherhood of St. Andrew will meet this evening at the residence of Rev. C. B. Kenrick.

Yesterday afternoon Rev. W. R. Young preached in Salem, taking the place of Rev. W. C. Beer.

Prayers were offered at all services yesterday, in St. John's church, for Dr. Vernon Halliday, who died this morning in New York.

The pulpit of George street Methodist church was occupied yesterday morning by Rev. J. S. Potter, agent of the Upper Canada Tract Society.

Eleven applicants for membership in the Boys' Branch of the Brotherhood of St. Andrews were admitted yesterday at a special service in St. John's church. This Chapter was one of the first three inaugurated in Canada.

On Friday next, St. Andrews' Day, the members of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew will assemble in St. John's church to partake of corporate communion at 6 a.m. In the evening a special service will be held at 7.30 o'clock.

The anthem, "O, Lord, How Manifest," was sung in good voice at the Charlotte street Methodist church yesterday morning. In the evening, "Ye Nations, O, Rejoice," was sung with pleasing effect. Miss Fawcett took the solo part.

Rev. W. R. Young, pastor of the George street Methodist church, took as his text last night the words: "Lay not up for yourself treasures upon earth," from which he preached a most eloquent discourse. The text, he explained, did not prevent men from gaining riches in this world, but was intended more as a caution against allowing themselves to set the object of treasure getting before that of pleasing the Heavenly Father. His appeal to the congregation to seek first the kingdom of God was a most powerful one.

"Make straight paths for your feet," Hebrews xii., 13, formed the subject for Rev. J. J. Rae's sermon last night, in the Charlotte street Methodist church. He stated in the course of his interesting remarks that there was only one straight path between any two points—only one right way of living. There were innummerable crooked paths and innumerable crooked ways of gaining a livlihood. The latter were always unsafe to venture upon and he dwelt to considerable length on the danger of once setting foot on the crooked path. The path which led from Christ the Saviour to eternal punishment.

Yesterday morning the Rev. Mr. MacWilliams preached an impressive sermon from Daniel v. 25, "Mene, mene, tekel, repharsin," his topic being "weighed and found wanting." Mr. Mulligan sang at the close of the sermon, the choir joining in the chorus, "At the feast of Belshazzar." In the evening Mr. Potter, Missionary to the Sailors, gave an interesting account of the work done. At the close of the evening service the Y.P.S.C.E. met. A very interesting meeting it was indeed. The topic was taken by Mr. Johnston. Mr. Potter also spoke on his work, while a very beautiful duet was rendered by Mrs. Jones and Miss Heubeck.

PERSONALS OF ROYALTY.

The queen of England always sleeps with her bedroom window open.

Among his many accomplishments the duke of Edinburgh can speak seven different languages.

Sir Edwin Arnold said the other day that he endorsed a remark once made by Chauncey M. Depew: "Fame depends on being civil to interviewers."

The duke of York has never conquered his tendency to seasickness, and although he does a great deal of yachting with his father it is not all plain sailing with him.

Lord Aberdeen first met his wife on Guisachan, her father's estate, when he was a lad, and, having lost himself on the hills, begged shelter at the lodge for himself and his pony.

Here is a good story which is told of Sir Arthur Sullivan: It was at dinner, and a young lady inquired of Sir Arthur whether Bach was composing anything at present. "No," he replied; "at present he is decomposing."

The duke of York, who is an enthusiastic stamp collector, recently applied to the agent general of the colonies for specimens of the issues of their countries. In reply stamps have been sent to him by the sheet, and in some cases issues withdrawn have been reprinted for him.

WHY AND WHEREFORE.

Clouds that move in the direction opposite to that of the surface current indicate a change of weather, because they prove the existence of two air currents, one warm and the other cold, and the mingling of these often causes rain.

The strongest muscle is in the calf of the leg, because locomotion is one of the most necessary functions. The great muscle of the calf has been found by actual experiment, to be capable of sustaining seven times the weight of the body.

Many persons lay a poker across the top of a grate to make the fire burn, because of a popular superstition, once credited, that a stubborn fire was due to the devil. Two pokers were used, and were laid across the fire in the form of a cross.

The human system can endure a heat of two hundred and twelve degrees, the boiling point of water, because the skin is a bad conductor and because the perspiration cools the body. Men have withstood without injury a heat of three hundred degrees for several minutes.

WORK AND WAGES.

An engraver in Rio de Janeiro can make $12 per week.

A blacksmith in Jerusalem can make $1.92 per week.

The King of Bavaria has a salary of $1,412,000 a year.

A printer in Peru can make from $1.25 to $1.80 a day.

Shop girls in France receive an average of $100 a year.

In Mexico seamstresses are paid 37 cents a day; weavers, 50 cents.

Bookkeepers in Germany receive from $300 to $800 a year.

Teachers in Hamburg receive from $11 to $28 per month.

Fig packers in Asia Minor, if skillful, can make 20 cents a day.

A camel owner and his beast in Palestine are worth $1 a day.

Railroad clerks in Germany are paid an average of 52 cents a day.

Houses for working people in Germany rent for $25 to $45 a year.

Norway Pine Syrup cures coughs, colds, hoarseness, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis etc.

AN ENORMOUS STEAL.

A Bank's Bookkeeper a Party to a Huge Swindle.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—It was made public on Saturday that there had been a defalcation of $354,000 in the Shoe and Leather Bank in this city. The operators of this enormous steal were two in number. One was the bank's bookkeeper, who had been a trusted employe for 14 years. He is S. S. Seely, aged 45, of Brooklyn.

The method adopted to accomplish the theft was explained by District Attorney Davis, to whom the case had been reported as follows: With the bookkeeper, Samuel C. Seely, was implicated a lawyer by the name of F. Baker. Baker was the depositor in the bank. Seely would place false credits in the ledger to Baker's account and then Baker would draw cash cheques upon the false credits. For thirty years the depositor had been a respected customer of the bank. Both men have been fugitives from justice since last Monday and the police are hot after them. The bank officers entertain sanguine hopes of bringing either one or both to justice and recovering at least a part of the lost money.

Inasmuch as Seely was well recommended, always apparently honest and trustworthy and frugal in his way of living he was one of the last employes of the bank whom the officers would have suspected of dishonesty. He lived in a quiet but comfortable way in his Brooklyn home with his wife and two children to whom he was devoted. Last Sunday the bookkeeper had a holiday. On Monday he failed to appear and another clerk was put in his place.

This was the first intimation given of anything wrong. His accounts were found to be mixed. The officers were notified and made an examination and the further they dived into the books the worse they found them. Seely did not appear on Tuesday and a search was made for him. It was found that he had fled. National Bank Examiner Wm. H. Kimball was immediately called in when the books began to show a deficiency of cash, and his investigation revealed the cause. The clearing house discovered that the defalcation would cause an impairment of the capital of about $155,000.

Labor Demonstration in Vienna.

VIENNA, Nov. 26.—A snow storm dampened the ardor of the suffrage demonstration yesterday. Groups of workingmen paraded the Ring strasse shouting for universal suffrage. Most persons not directly interested in the agitation remained indoors.

A Wayside Inn Tragedy.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—A wayside inn near Bergdorf was burned on Saturday night. Three bodies were found in the ruins. As one had been beheaded, murder and robbery are supposed to have preceded the fire.

A Scotch M.P.'s Bad Boy.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Allan Ferguson, the sixteen-year-old son of Sir James Ferguson, M.P., was sentenced in Edinburgh to a year's imprisonment for setting fire to Glen Almond cottage on October 15th.

Struck a Bonanza Mine.

SPOKANE, Wash., Nov. 26.—Michael Shuman, a well-known mining man, reports the finding of a bonanza gold mine at the summit of the Cascade range of mountains near Slate Creek. Two young men named Barron and Gerrish are the lucky finders. Shuman says that the boys after a week's work with the crudest of implements cleaned up $12,000 with plenty of rich dirt in right. Nearly all the miners in that section of the country have flocked to the new Eldorado and staked out claims.

Earthquakes Continue in Sicily.

PALERMO, Nov. 26.—Severe earthquakes shook large districts of Sicily yesterday. The small villages of Sciatey, Sampieri, Milen, Acquacalida and San Roberto were destroyed. The homeless inhabitants have camped in the fields.

A Fight With Fatal Results.

WESTON, Ark., Nov. 26.—Marshall Snowden and Frank Brown were fatally shot, and James Brown, J. R. Knight and Charles Kitchen badly wounded in a fight here. The men had a grudge against the Marshall.

Murdered His Mistress.

LANCASTER, Pa., Nov. 26.—Jacob Mohow, aged 57, shot his mistress, Mrs. Kate Doman, inflicting a fatal wound, and then committed suicide. The couple had been drinking.

Killed at Football.

SHREVE, Ohio, Nov. 26.—Walter Blackburn, 19 years old, received injuries in a football game on Saturday which resulted in his death.

English Interests Presented to Lord Ripon, Colonial Secretary.

WALTER BESANT'S ARGUMENTS

Sir Albert Kays Rollit Strongly Opposes Canada's Attitude on the Question —Sir Charles Tupper Will Reply to Mr. Herbert Gardner.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Lord Ripon, colonial secretary, received yesterday a deputation from the chamber of commerce and the allied section known as the Society of Authors, the Copyright Association and the Print Sellers' Association.

Sir Albert Kays Rollit, president of the associated chambers of commerce, introduced the deputation and stated its business. After denying that he was hostile to Canadian interests in general he opened in the deputation's behalf a rather hot attack on Canada's attitude to the copyright question. He might talk strongly, he said, because he felt strongly. He knew that in the copyright question Canada violated the established principles on which the copyright law of the empire had rested hitherto. If the constitution in question should be passed it would create a precedent whose effect would be almost unlimited.

Mr. Underdown, Q.C., described Sir John Thompson's demands in the matter of copyright as solely an effort to advance the trade in Canadian reprints. France, as a signer of the Berne convention, to which the colonies had agreed prior to its adoption, also complain in view of the 2,000,000 French-speaking Canadians.

Walter Besant said: "The question is a most serious one for authors. The American Act has already borne great fruits for American authors, who have shown increased vitality and strength since they have been able to compete on fair terms with English writers. Moreover, when the new conditions become thoroughly established the English authors will find their best audience in the United States. However, if Canada passes a separate Act, the old, miserable game of cheap reprints, vieing with others, will begin again. The American Act will be torn to pieces and piracy will be resumed. Then American authors will be compelled to fall back on the unfair conditions preceding 1891. Worse still, all the old bitterness will come back and the reprisals will be revived."

"Briefly the question is this: Ought a country with five million inhabitants be allowed to wreck this mischief on the English-speaking world of 120,000,000 merely that a few of its publishers may enrich themselves by underselling the Americans?"

Mr. Clayton, of a music publishing firm, Commoner Arnold Foster, and others, endorsed Mr. Besant's arguments. One speaker suggested that Great Britain assist Canada by offering a short bill excluding Canada reprints, even though not copyrighted in the Dominion, from all other parts of the Empire.

Lord Ripon said he intended to discuss the matter fully with Sir John Thompson, the Canadian Premier, at his first opportunity, but he was anxious to learn first the opinion of such bodies as he had the honor to be receiving. The desires of one of the great colonies were entitled to his most serious consideration. On the other hand, the interests represented by the deputation could not be slighted. He promised the whole subject his most careful attention.

The Daily News endorses Mr. Besant's speech in the colonial office and advises the government to consider well the strong case presented by him.

Cattle Embargo Question.

Canadian residents interested in the cattle trade criticize severely the letter received by Sir John Long from Mr. Herbert Gardiner, president of the Board of Agriculture, and published yesterday. They say Mr. Gardiner merely expresses the weakness of his position and they ask how Canada can watch and report cases of pleuro-pneumonia when none such can be found in the Dominion. The Board of Agriculture is well aware, they contend, that the strictest inquiries in Canada as to the Mongolian and other reported cases failed to give grounds for even suspicions. It is understood that Sir Charles Tupper, Canadian High Commissioner, is preparing a reply to Mr. Gardner.

The Vice-Regal Party in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—The Governor-General and Lady Aberdeen arrived in Montreal by the Winnipeg special express last night. The vice-regal party was met at the Canadian Pacific station by Mayor Villeneuve and a deputation from the city council and extended a welcome. Lord and Lady Aberdeen were then driven to the mansion of the late premier, Sir John Abbott, which they will occupy for the next six weeks.

MARRIAGE OF THE CZAR

Emperor Nicholas Wedded to Princess Alix of Hesse.

AN IMPRESSIVE SPECTACLE

The Ceremony Performed With All the Imposing Rites of the Orthodox Greek Church—All the Churches in the Capital Hold Services.

ST PETERSBURG, Nov. 27.—The marriage of Czar Nicholas II. to Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt was celebrated yesterday.

The Czar and his attendants arrived at the winter palace at ten o'clock. All who had been invited to witness the marriage ceremony had been directed to assemble in the rooms to which they were respectively assigned by 11.30 o'clock at the very latest. The gentlemen of the court were all in uniform, and the ladies were dressed in court costume of strawberry color, trimmed with velvet of a similar shade, with long trains and wearing long white veils. The ladies of honor assisted Princess Alix in completing her toilette before assembling in the concert hall. In Nicholas and Avent halls were assembled the military household of the Czar, the suites of foreign sovereigns, the princes and the grand dukes, generals, admirals and officers of the guard. In Armorial hall were present the wives of the dignitaries of the first class, the nobles and the chief civil employes of the government. In Field Marshals' hall were the mayors of St. Petersburg and other cities, the leading bankers, merchants and others.

THE ROYAL GROOM.

The spectacle was one of the utmost brilliancy as the procession re-filed from the gorgeous Malachite hall and traversed the Concert, Nicholas, Avent, Field Marshal and Armorial halls, through the entire length and breadth of the palace. When the procession reached the cathedral, at the extreme end of the Alexander Platz, it was met at the entrance by the Metropolitan of St. Petersburg, the holy synod and the church clergy bearing crosses, holy water and sacred books. The Metropolitan conducted the Czar to a position upon a dais which had been placed in the centre of the chancel behind the rail. As the Emperor took his place at the right of the dais the Czarina led Princess Alix to him and placed her at his left hand. The Czarina then took her place in the chancel at the right of the dais. The crosses, holy water and sacred books were then placed before the gate of Ikonostas and the marriage service in use in the Orthodox church was begun by the singing of Psalm 127. The ceremony was of the most impressive character, and lasted nearly two hours. After the Psalm the Metropolitan said a few words of instruction to the couple, telling them what is the mystery of marriage, and how in marriage they have to live acceptably unto God and honorably. At the conclusion of this the prelate returned to the Czar and said: "Hast thou, Nicholas, a good and unconstrained will and a firm determination to take unto thyself this woman, Alix, whom here thou seest before thee?" To this the Czar answered: "I have, reverend father."

The prelate then blessed the couple three times, thrice saying: "O, Lord, our God, crown them with glory and honor."

After anthems and prayers the "communion cup" was brought and blessed.

THE ROYAL BRIDE.

The cup was filled and handed first to the Czar and then to the Princess, each taking a sip of the wine. The Metropolitan then took the couple by the hand, the groomsmen and bridesmaids walking behind and holding the crowns over their heads, and led them three times around the dais, the choir meanwhile singing a troparion. The rings were exchanged for the last time, they having been exchanged twice before. The prelate then took the crown from the Czar, saying: "Be thou magnified, O bridegroom, as Abraham, and blessed as Isaac, and increased as Jacob, walking in peace and performing in righteousness the commandments of God."

Taking the crown from Princess Alix, he said: "And thou, O bride, be thou magnified as Sarah, and rejoiced as Rebecca, and increased as Rachel, being glad in thy husband and keeping the paths of the law, for God is well pleased."

The priest then offered up the following prayer: "O, God our God, who was present in Cana of Galilee, and did'st bless the marriage there, do Thou bless also these Thy servants, who by Thy providence are conjoined in the community of marriage. Bless their incomings and outgoings, replenish their life with good things, accept their crowns in Thy kingdom unsullied and undefiled and preserve them without offence to ages of ages."

After an anthem the priest pronounced the blessing as follows: "The Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, the all-holy and consubstantial and life-originating Trinity, one Godhead and sovereignty, bless you and vouchsafe unto you long life, well favored children, progress in this life and faith, and replenish you with the good things of earth, and count you worthy of obtaining the promised blessing, through the prayers of the Holy God, bearing one one and of all the saints! Amen!"

The Czar then kissed the bride and the guests came forward to congratulate the couple.

At the conclusion of congratulations the dismissal was pronounced and the bride and bridegroom and the wedding guests returned to the Winter palace.

At the close of the ceremony the newly-wedded couple kissed the picture of the Virgin, which is supposed to have been painted by St. Luke. The relic is now covered with jewels so that only the face is visible. Upon the neck is a necklace of diamonds and emeralds and the head is surmounted by a diamond crown.

The Emperor and his bride were received at the Anitchkoff palace by the Czar's mother, the Dowager Czarina. Services were held in all the churches during the marriage ceremony and the church bells were rung throughout the day.

THE ARMENIAN MASSACRE.

A Later Story of the Outrage by the Sultan's Troops.

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—A private letter received from Constantinople gives the following details of the Armenian massacre:

"We have word from Bitlis that the destruction of life in Sassoun, south of Moosh, was even greater than was supposed. The brief note which has reached us says that 27 villages were annihilated in Sassoun, and 6,000 men, women and children were massacred by troops and Kurds. This awful story is only just beginning to be known, though the massacre took place early in September. The Turks have used infinite pains to prevent the news leaking out, even going to the length of sending back from Trebizond many hundreds from the Moosh region who had come this way on business.

"The massacre was ordered from here in the sense that some Kurds having robbed Armenian villages of flocks the Armenians pursued and tried to recover their property and a fight ensued, in which a dozen Kurds were killed. The slain men were semi-official robbers enrolled as troops and armed as such, but not under control. The authorities there telegraphed here that Armenians had killed some of the Sultan's troops. The Sultan at once ordered infantry and cavalry to put down the Armenian rebellion and they did it; only, not finding any rebellion, they cleared the country so that none should occur in the future."

Hungary's Religious Liberty Bills.

VIENNA, Nov. 27.—Dr. Wekerle, Prime minister of Hungary, was received by Emperor Joseph yesterday and afterward had a conference with Count Kalnoky, the Imperial Premier. It is reported that the Emperor fully supports the policy of Dr. Wekerle who will again send to the House of Magnates his projects for religious liberty. If the House of Magnates reject the religious liberty bill again the Hungarian Cabinet will probably resign. In religious circles these bills are regarded as much more pernicious than the civil marriage bill.

Not the Work of the "Ripper."

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The dead body of a woman was found in a street in Kensington. The woman, who was one of the lower grade of abandoned females, had been stabbed in the neck and had bled to death. Her murderer left a walking stick lying by her side. There is no indication of "ripperism" in connection with the murder, which was the result of a street brawl, and nobody on this side of the water has any notion that "Jack the Ripper" has resumed his bloody work.

Canada's Test of Cattle Experts.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The order issued by the Canadian Government providing that all meat cattle arriving in Canadian quarantine shall be tested by the Koch tuberculine lymph will scarcely affect the United States. The number of cattle exported from this country into Canada is very small. Dr. Salmon, chief of the bureau of animal industry, said that the action of Canadians was intended to apply to cattle imported for breeding purposes, all of which came from Europe.

Pitezel Traced to New York.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—The officers of the Fidelity Insurance Company are now as firm in their belief that Pitezel is alive as they were formerly that he was dead. President Fouse said that Pitezel had been traced to New York city and that Inspector Gary, of the company, would go there to-day and endeavor to locate him. President Fouse also said that the missing Pitezel children were recently at Niagara Falls.

Bakers' Strike in Amsterdam.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 27.—Since Sunday morning the journeymen bakers have been on strike. Bread has been scarce and the master bakers have sold it to-day only under police protection. The strikers plundered several bakers' carts, scattered the loaves, threw stones at the police and smashed bake house windows. Forty master bakers yielded and returned to work, but the rest refused to treat with the men.

Sicily Still Quaking.

ROME, Nov. 27.—Repeated earthquakes shocked Reggio and Messina yesterday. The terror of the inhabitants increases. It is wet and cold throughout the districts round both cities yet hundreds are living in the fields. Many families are destitute of shelter and have only the clothes on their backs. A relief bill is in preparation for parliament.

The Madagascar Credits Carried.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—The Chamber of Deputies yesterday took a final vote on the Madagascar credits which were carried by a vote of 377 to 148. During the debate there was a heated exchange of words between M. Raymond Poincaire, Republican, and M. Gustave Rouanet, Socialist, which resulted in the former sending seconds to M. Rouanet.

A SNOBBISH MINISTER.

Sir Adolph Caron, as post master general, is not a shining success. He does not seem to be of the right stamp for the position. They are after him in British Columbia, where his close-fisted treatment of the Victoria post office employees compelled them to strike, causing of course great inconvenience to the public. A public meeting was held in Victoria to protest against the conduct of the postmaster-general. It was presided over by the mayor and there were present the most representative citizens, including the Bishop, Messrs. Prior and Earle, M.P's., the president of the board of trade and the mayor and city council. One and all spoke in condemnation of the conduct of affairs by the postmaster general, which had brought about such a condition of affairs as to produce a strike of post office employees and all its consequent inconveniences. The Victoria Times, speaking of the meeting, says:—"If Sir Adolphe Caron or any of the other Ottawa autocrats had the courage to follow in Mr. Laurier's footsteps just now, the reception they would be accorded in Victoria would be in marked contrast to the warm and affectionate welcome given to the leader of the Opposition, especially if they had the good fortune to be present at yesterday's meeting. Not even the Tory members could say a word, save in reproof, of the governmental administration which forced men who receive $29 per month to strike before they could obtain the payment of their poor salaries." A man of Sir Adolph's "stamp" should be first "licked" and then cancelled.

THE Montreal Star says: "People up in Ontario will be very apt to regard the active revival of the Trent Valley Canal project as a sign of the near approach of the General Elections. When the news goes forth that some of the contracts for this perennial political work have been let the conviction that there will not be another session before the elections will gain a host of new converts. The new voters' lists will be ready in February, they will point out, and Trent Valley Canal enthusiasm ought to be about ripe by that time too. But it will not be enough for the Government to make itself 'solid' with Central Ontario. The Trent Valley Canal style of argument has a good deal of 'kick' about it, for the taxpayers in the rest of the country do not like the prospect of bearing the cost." Montreal should not be among the "kickers," for the completion and operation of the Trent Valley Canal will be of great benefit to that city as a transhipping point from barges to ocean-going vessels of the grain from the Northwest that will be carried over this route.

THE ravages of smallpox and diphtheria have thrown Detroit into a partial panic. The spread of the latter disease, particularly, has been rapid, and the Board of Health has ordered the closing of six public and five parochial schools. The epidemic is confined to children, and the mortality is great. Peterborough need not hope for sewerage to assist in warding off diphtheria, but the Board of Health might do something to raise up a barrier against a possible epidemic of small-pox. A traveller from Chicago got off at a western country town, a day or two ago, and is there ill with a most virulent type of small pox, and the citizens, who have not been vaccinated, are exposed to the disease. Yet, doubtless, that town has some wiseacres, who declared vaccination a useless expense, as there was no danger of smallpox from Chicago. Yet failure to have had vaccination made compulsory may result in the loss of many lives. The lesson is obvious.

THE Presbyterian General Assembly of the United States, at its last meeting decided to ask the theological seminaries to give to the assembly direct control over the professors, both in regard to their appointment and continuance in office. The object, of course, was to make it possible to stamp out heresies, like that of Briggs, at their first appearance. Last week both the Auburn and Chicago Seminaries declined to do anything of the kind, and Union Seminary has already asserted its independence. There only remain the Princeton and Alleghany Seminaries, and they are not likely willing to part with their important powers of self-government. At present the Assembly has only a veto on the appointment of the professors, and no remedy in the case of a man whose heresies develop after appointment.

THE New York Sun in an article calling attention to the great strides the cheese business has taken in Canada, and in reproach of the American dairymen says:—"It cannot be that American farmers will let Canadians get ahead of them in this profitable business." Such a thing can very easily be, for that is the situation now. Our southern neighbours are full of go-ahead-itiveness and in general the American "hare" gets the start of the slower-going Canadian "tortoise," but in the matter of stock breeding, cheese making and education, the Canadian has got the lead, and is constantly putting more daylight between himself and his American competitor. Our cheese is our strong point. "Skim-milk" morality won't work in cheese making.

"DESTROY US."

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—I have been waiting with interest for an explanation of the words "destroy us", recorded in Mark i, 21-34, found in the Sunday school lesson of October 21st. I have seen two replies to the question, but neither, to my mind, explains the question, and I hereby beg to offer what I consider an explanation of the passage.

It would seem from the reply given by the pastor of the Christian Scientist Church, of Toronto, that Christ cleanses the unclean heart of men, against their will. This would destroy their free agency and make him an unaccountable being. This does not give the desired information. If we examine the Scriptures and our English language I think we will find the true meaning of "destroy" and how it should be used.

The Bible teaches us that man when created was in the image of his Creator, and united to Him in loving obedience; but he hearkened to the voice of the tempter, and thereby severed his connection with God by transgressing the divine command. He united his power to transgress, with the devil's will to transgress, and "so completely are they one that the evil spirit accompanies the man to the House of God, (but Jesus was there preaching.) This union strengthens both parties in their rebellion against God and their opposition to everything heavenly or divine. This appears to be the state of every sinner's heart, but how can Christ destroy them who are thus united?

"Destroy." What is it? In our language we are told it is to pull down, to demolish, to separate the parts of an edifice, the union of which is necessary to constitute a thing. It appears to me that this is what Jesus meant when he said to the Jews "destroy this temple, etc. Destroy the union between this body and soul by death and in three days I will unite them again and rise from the dead. This also shows how united the evil spirit went with the man to the house of God to worship, but Jesus was the preacher and astonished the people.

We see this fully explained in the construction of an arch. The keystone which unite the two parts is the strength of the arch, but remove it and you destroy the arch. This shows what "destroy" in the text means. It is neither the unclean spirit nor the man whom it possessed, Jesus came to destroy, but the union of their spirits. United they can turn Paradise to a place of misery and shame; disunited they are powerless to successfully oppose the operation of the workings of the Holy Spirit.

Men and Women Who Are Martyrs to Rheumatism Can be Thoroughly Cured.

Paine's Celery Compound The Infallible Remedy.

The great modern triumph of medical science is Paine's Celery Compound. Its marvellous curing powers are talked of in every quarter of the civilized world, and the ablest physicians are astonished with its life-giving and health-restoring results.

As a positive cure for rheumatism and sciatica, Paine's Celery Compound has no equal known to man. In Canada alone, this wonderful medicine has cured more rheumatic men and women than have been cured by all other combined agencies. The most obstinate and most desperate cases have been met with perfect success. Hundreds of testimonials from the very best people of Canada support every claim made for Paine's Celery Compound.

Are you suffering from rheumatism or sciatica, dear reader? Have you met with reverses and failures in the past through the use of deceptive and worthless preparations? There are many we know who have been driven deeper into sufferings and agonies owing to experiments with pills and mixtures and compounds that are positively harmful and dangerous.

If you are now using any such medicines stop them at once if you value your life. Ask your druggist or dealer for Paine's Celery Compound. That will surely and certainly banish your troubles.

The following letter from Mr. G. J. McDonald, merchant tailor, of Cornwall, Ont., demonstrates the superiority of nature's medicine:

"After having given your Paine's Celery Compound a thorough testing, I am pleased to say a few words in its favour. For three years I suffered terribly from rheumatism. It seemed to me that I was forced to endure all the agonies and pains that a mortal could possibly experience from the dreadful disease.

While suffering I tried many of the advertised medicines and also doctors' prescriptions, but never found a cure until I procured a supply of Paine's Celery Compound from McHaffie & Elvidge, druggists, of this town. Paine's Celery Compound worked like a charm—it seemed to strike at the very root of my trouble. I am now cured—all pains are vanished, and in every respect I am a new man.

"I shall always consider it a pleasure and duty to strongly recommend Paine's Celery Compound to all who are afflicted with rheumatism."

FULL OF ENCOURAGEMENT
FOR ALL WOMEN.

In Bed 5 Months—Had Given Up All Hope of Getting Well—A Remedy Found at Last to which "I Owe My Life."

Science has fully established the fact that all the nervous energy of our bodies is generated by nerve centres located near the base of the brain. When the supply of nerve force has been diminished either by excessive physical or mental labours, or owing to a derangement of the nerve centres, we are first conscious of a languor or tired and worn-out feeling, then of a mild form of nervousness, headache, or stomach trouble, which is perhaps succeeded by nervous prostration, chronic indigestion, and dyspepsia, and a general sinking of the whole system. In this day of hurry, fret and worry, there are very few who enjoy perfect health; nearly everyone has some trouble, an ache, or pain, a weakness, a nerve trouble, something wrong with the stomach and bowels, poor blood, heart disease, or sick headache; all of which are brought on by a lack of nervous energy to enable the different organs of the body to perform their respective work.

South American Nervine Tonic, the marvellous nerve food and health giver, is a satisfying success, a wondrous boon to tired, sick, and overworked men and women, who have suffered years of discouragement and tried all manner of remedies without benefit. It is a modern, a scientific remedy, and in its wake follows abounding health.

It is unlike all other remedies in that it is not designed to act on the different organs affected, but by its direct action on the nerve centres, which are nature's little batteries, it causes an increased supply of nervous energy to be generated, which in its turn thoroughly oils, as it were, the machinery of the body, thereby enabling it to perform perfectly its different functions, and without the slightest friction.

If you have been reading of the remarkable cures wrought by South American Nervine, accounts of which we publish from week to week, and are still sceptical, we ask you to investigate them by correspondence, and become convinced that they are true to the letter. Such a course may save you months, perhaps years, of suffering and anxiety.

The words that follow are strong, but they emanate from the heart, and speak the sentiments of thousands of women in the United States and Canada who know, through experience, of the healing virtues of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, a prominent and much respected lady, writes as follows:—

"I owe my life to the great South American Nervine Tonic. I have been in bed for five months with a scrofulous tumour in my right side, and suffered with indigestion and nervous prostration. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I cannot recommend it too highly."

Tired women, can you do better than become acquainted with this truly great remedy?

THE END IS NEAR.

Negotiations for Peace to be Pushed Rapidly Forward.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—A despatch from Rome to the Daily Graphic says: "The latest news from Tokio is that as soon as China shall make proposals for peace Japan will accept the good offices of the United States in the negotiations."

The Times correspondent in Yokohama says that Japan has consented to receive China's proposals of peace through the American ministers in Tokio and Pekin.

The Daily News has this despatch from Yokohama: "It is reported that a large number of Chinese fled from Port Arthur on the night of the 21st. Another report is that during the hottest part of the fight part of the Chinese troops fled to the warships waiting to receive them. Thereupon the Japanese are said to have cannonaded the ships and sunk two."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—It is not believed here that Mr. Dietring, the chief of the Chinese customs service, who left for Tokio a week ago, has been instructed to negotiate for peace between China and Japan, but that his mission is principally to learn the temper of the Japanese foreign office and communicate his conclusions to Pekin.

All indications now point to a speedy termination of the war. It is believed that the negotiations for peace will be pushed rapidly forward. China, it is thought, will have no difficulty in securing the funds with which to pay the war indemnity.

Union of the Chicago Roads.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—The initial step in joining all the principal lines running into Chicago in one big association was taken in this city yesterday. Every road which could be benefited by becoming a member was represented. Even the Canadian Pacific, which has hitherto been a trifle shy about affiliating with other lines for a mutual preservation of passenger rates, was there. A resolution was passed providing for the appointment of a committee of nine, three from territories east of the Missouri river, three from territory west of the river and three from the transcontinental territory. This committee is to report next Wednesday on a plan of reorganization. As there is likely to be a difference of opinion, it is probably three reports will be made.

Troublesome Times for Brazil.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—A special from Rio Janeiro says: Italy has decided to send a fleet against this country, it is learned, on account of Brazil's refusal to arbitrate a pending question. Though the action of the government in the case is universally approved here, President Moraes will prepare new propositions and forward them to the Italian government. The United States may be asked to arbitrate. Part of Brazil's fleet has left with sealed orders. It is rumored the warships have been sent after Admiral Da Gama, who now commands 8,000 men. The monarchists, the report says, propose rising all over the country. It is feared the government will be unable to cope with them. Troublesome times are predicted.

Bandit-Infested Oklahoma.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Nov. 27.—Indian Agent Wisdom and ex-Indian Agent Bennett, both of Muskogee, have arrived from the bandit-infested part of the territory. At Wagoner they were notified that the freight train just ahead of them had been fired into near Bragg station. Seven men mounted on horses undertook to hold up the train in broad daylight, but the engineer and fireman lay down in the cab and let the train go ahead. A volley was fired at the cab, and as the caboose went by that also was riddled with bullets.

A LONG SIEGE.

How a Sufferer for Twenty Years Regained Health and Strength.

Mr. John A. Stewart, of Napinka, Man., a former well known resident of Stratford, Ont., writes :—

"It gives me pleasure to give you a plain statement of what your Pink Pills have done for me. I have been troubled with a lame back for the past twenty years, caused by a strain while cradling wheat, and once or twice a year for four or five weeks at a time I would be completely laid up with it. I tried plasters and medicine, with such little benefit that at last I gave up all hope of ever getting better. In May, 1891, I first heard of Pink Pills. A that time I was laid up with a particularly severe attack, which left me perfectly useless, as I could neither stand nor walk. All I could do was to be on my back, and it was in this condition I was when I was advised to try Pink Pills, by a man working for me. He had about half a box, and at his urgent solicitation I began their use. Having began them I decided to give them a fair trial, and procuring more from Dr. Snider, and kept on taking them all summer. My recovery was slow, but after the first few weeks I could feel that I was getting better every week. By the fall I was perfectly well, and yet I feared that the cure might not be permanent as the trouble was of such long standing, but I am pleased to be able to say that after the lapse of so much time I have not had the slightest recurrence of the trouble, and am feeling in perfect health. I still use Pink Pills in the fall and spring as a tonic medicine, and find much benefit from them. I may say that there are numbers of others here who have been benefitted by the use of your pills.

You are at full liberty to use this letter in any manner you choose for the benefit of suffering ones."

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Nov. 27, 1894.

On the street here 100 bushels of wheat sold at 59 1-2c for white and 58c for goose; 2,000 bushels of barley at 40 to 45c; one load of peas at 57c, 300 bushels of oats at 31c, and one load of buckwheat at 42 1-2c.

The visible supply of barley is 3,949,000 bushels as compared with 3,515,000 last week.

Wheat was strong in Chicago in sympathy with foreign markets closing 1 3 8c higher. May corn closed firm but cash was lower on account of heavy receipts. Oats were quiet.

In sheep and lambs at East Buffalo, 61 cars only were on sale of which 19 cars were of Canada's. Owing to the light supply, cold weather and good eastern reports, prices were advanced. Some of the best of the Canada's sold up to $4.20, the bulk being at $3.90 to $4.15.

There was a good tone to the London stock market, but no business except in consols and mines, a curious combination. Americans, after improving, closed dull, especially Erie.

The New York stock market opened and closed extremely dull, a slight and general downward movement during the midday hours being its only sign of life. Naturally enough, Northwestern stock was heavy and Reading positively weak. The one development of the day which had distinct influence on prices was the St. Paul full report for October.

CHILDREN FATALLY BURNED.

Sad Circumstances Attending a Sunnidale Township Fire.

NEW LOWELL, Ont., Nov. 27.—The dwelling house of Mr. Jas. Scott, Sunnidale township, was burned to the ground. Mr. and Mrs. Scott left the house to look after the farm stock in a barn, 150 yards from the dwelling. They were absent about twenty minutes when they discovered the dwelling on fire. Mr. Scott rushed into the burning building and carried out his two children, aged 4 and 2 years. Both were badly burned and died next morning. Fire is supposed to have been caused by a lamp exploding or being upset by the children, as the lamp was left burning low and the children in bed when Mr. and Mrs. Scott left the house and there was no one else in the house at the time but the two children.

Mrs. Berry's Wanderings.

BURFORD, Ont., Nov. 27.—The inquest on the body of Mrs. Henry Brrry, who was missing since August last, and whose body was discovered in the Oakland swamp on Saturday, was held in this village yesterday. There was an evidence given by relatives of the unfortunate woman as to her leaving Brantford for her home in Simcoe, tracing her to Port Dover Junction, where she is now said to have left the train. She was seen after this in the neighborhood of Simcoe, about a mile from her own home; and from there she was traced east as far as Waterford, and it is supposed she wandered around until she got lost in the swamp and sank down to die. It is estimated that she must have travelled 30 or 40 miles in her wanderings. The jury brought in a verdict to the effect that the deceased had come to her death while in a fit of temporary insanity from exposure and lack of the necessaries of life and that there was no violence to her body so far as the evidence produced went to show.

In the Quebec Assembly.

QUEBEC, Nov. 27.—In the Legislative Assembly Mr. Tellier, M.P.P. for Joliette, introduced his notice of motion for the copies of the order-in-council determining what tolls the Charlemagne and Lake Andreau Lumber Company is entitled to levy on floating timber passing through certain improved parts of the Onareau and Dufresne rivers. Mr. Tellier said that such fees had created a certain discontent among lumbermen who floated timber down these rivers. Hon. Mr. Casgrain, speaking of his motion in reference to libel, says that he wishes to alter the law on libel so as to protect newspapers against libel suits instituted against them for frivolous articles. Later Hon. Mr. Casgrain introduced his resolutions regarding coroner fees which will be placed at $2,500.

A Big Scatter in Diamonds.

GRAND RAPIDS, Nov. 27.—A team of horses ran away and crashed through the front window of Herman Idemas' pawnshop, scattering $5,000 worth of diamonds into the street. The precious stones became mixed with the broken glass and the large crowd that quickly gathered made it difficult to find them. It is thought $2,000 worth of the gems were stolen by people who picked them up from the sidewalk.

A Dangerous Counterfeit.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—What is said to be the most dangerous counterfeit that has made its appearance in many years is an imitation of the Windom $2 silver certificate. Chief Hazen, of the secret service, has issued a detail warning to the public in which he says the note will bear the closest scrutiny. The counterfeit is being circulated in the large cities principally.

A Notable Record.

The Great Life-Saving Lactated Food.

The past summer was a most remarkable season for Lactated Food. There was such a demand for this pure and nutritious infant food from every quarter of the Dominion, that the manufacturers were compelled to enlarge their producing capacity.

During the past summer, thousands of mothers bought and used Lactated Food, and have been so thoroughly satisfied with the results, that no pleadings or arguments can ever induce them to use any other make of food.

Hundreds of thankful letters have been received telling what Lactated Food has done in saving little lives. Every letter proves strongly and conclusively that "Lactated Food Saves Babies Lives."

No other food can show such a series of successes and victories; no other food now in existence is so popular as the Lactated

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, and have no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similiar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose to pay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times

A Pleasant Gathering.

The members of Mr. Alfred Parker's Bible Class of the George street Methodist church, together with a number of friends to the number of about thirty, assembled at the house of their teacher last evening, in response to an invitation issued by him. Mr. Parker had chosen this opportunity of asking the members down for a social evening, and it proved a most enjoyable one indeed, the time passing pleasantly, and being enlivened by games and vocal and instrumental music. A most bountiful and appetising repast was served during the evening.

Sunday School Convention.

The Sunday school workers of the town will remember with pleasure the two conventions held last year by the P.S.S. Association. A third one is to be held in the Baptist church on Thursday evening of this week. A conference on the subject of "Teacher Training" will be conducted by Rev. J. J. Rae, an active and progressive Sunday school worker. Rev. Mr. Trotter will give by blackboard a birds-eye view of the life of Christ. A short musical programme will also be rendered. All adult friends of the Sunday school are invited to attend, and teachers are particularly urged to be present. 2d124

—Mrs. W. M. Graham, of Lakefield, will give an address at the meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of St. Andrew's church, this evening at a quarter to eight o'clock. All ladies interested in missions are invited to attend.

—Twenty dollars and costs or two months in gaol, was the judgment in the case of assault preferred by a boarding house keeper against a belligerent lodger, who made a too free use of his fists the other night.

—The soot in the chimney of a house on Park street, just above Brock, occupied by Mr. Geo. Ball, took fire last night, and blazed furiously for half an hour to the no small alarm of the neighbourhood. The fire brigade was not summoned and the flames gradually died away.

—The police visited the Temperance Houses conducted by Messrs. Jamieson, Croft, Connors and Cavanaugh, this morning, in order to ascertain if liquor in any quantities was being kept on the premises. Sufficient quantities were not found to warrant prosecution.

—In a large consignment of Italian fancy groceries, the firm of E. F. Mason & Co., has received a small quantity of the famous Gargonzola cheese. It is most carefully packed in a covering of paste and wrapped in tin foil in order to preserve the flavour, which so tickles the palate of the epicure.

—It may probably interest the town young man who wants to be away up in the very latest "go," that Oscar Wilde wears an enormous cravat, and his coat tails are a little longer than anybody else's. He is adorned with a gold chain bracelet, and the little finger of the left hand is ringed to the nail.

—A business man on a trip to Peterborough a day or two since, remarked that he never ran across a town where the citizens were so much addicted to taking short cuts across corners as were the residents of Peterborough. He thought that it was a good sign of the proof that the Peterboroughians were hustlers.

—It is rumored that the business men will shortly petition the local banks to change their office hours. The petitioners will ask to have banks closed at one o'clock, on Friday, and remain open on Saturday afternoon until three. It is thought the farmers, as well as business men of the town, would favour the keeping open of the banks on Saturday.

—A number of town families, who have not the waterworks service in their homes, prefer to use rain water rather than the more questionable liquid in the well. There is danger in so doing. Mrs. Joseph Donnally, of Evergreen, Ohio, died last week from the effects of rain water which she drank. The water was caught from a roof that has recently been painted with white lead.

—For selling tobacco to a minor, Mr. Sullivan, of Water street, was discharged this morning, at the Police Court, as it appears that the article was sold by his daughter in ignorance of the law regarding such sale. Mr. J. C. Sullivan's name has been mentioned in regard to this transaction, but the popular Ashburnham grocer was not in any way connected with it. Mr. Sullivan has always made it a principle through life to abide by all laws.

—The case of Grocer Collins, of Ashburnham, was discharged, this morning, at the police court. Mr. Collins was charged with selling liquor to a minor. The magistrate asked the chief of police to withdraw the charge, and upon his refusing to do so, assumed the responsibility of dismissing the case. The liquor was given to a boy who frequently brings orders for liquor from others and Mr. Collins did not suspect that it was for his own use when he purchased it.

—Patrick O'Donnell, the young lad who was disgustingly drunk, on Saturday, was up before the magistrate for judgment, this morning, and as it was his first offence, he was let off with a reprimand, coupled with the caution against ever appearing before the police magistrate again on pain of being dealt with in a manner, which would make him remember the occasion. The magistrate impressed on the boy that there was nothing manly in getting drunk and lying in the gutter like a hog, but that it was but the first step towards degradation to the level of a beast.

—F. X. Arnes, one of the greatest musical critics, and who is European correspondent for the New York Musical Courier, attended the musical festival in Berlin, Germany, last year, where the celebrated Rose String Quartette, of Vienna, played, writes: "While listening to them Herr Yunck, now of Detroit, loomed up before my mental vision, and, allow me to state right here, that in point of finesse, the Rose quartette remind me of the Detroit Philharmonic club, of which Herr Yunck is leader and solo violinist. Hearing an artist like Herr Yunck will always remain fresh in one's memory." Opera House, Tuesday, Dec. 4th. General admission 50c, reserved seats 75c. Plan of hall now open at Salisbury's Bookstore.

MR. MOODY AND THE Y. M. C. A.

He Urges Young Men to Go and Help the Secretary and Make the Association a Success.

While in Toronto, Mr. Moody at one of his meetings, made the following remarks regarding the Toronto branch of the Y. M. C. A.: "I want to say a word on behalf of the Young Men's Christian Association. The associations are beacon lights set on a hill in our great cities. They are open 365 days in the year. They are places where the Christian young man can go and do Christian work every night in the week. Mr. Budge of Montreal, whom I consider the most successful secretary I have ever known on this continent wrote to me some weeks ago urging that I would say a good word for the Young Men's Christian Association in this city. I am glad to say that the Christian Association is a good thing, and a very helpful thing for the young man coming to the city, and I hope the Christian men here will do all in their power to support it with their prayers, their influence and their money. If the association has made mistakes, and I understand they have met with some reverses, forget these mistakes and help them to make a fresh start again. I am told that the young Secretary is a splendid young fellow, and he must be so, for whatever my friend Mr. Budge says is all right. Stand right by that Secretary. I wish that every young man that has come out for Christ would go and help them there. It will broaden him in every way. I have no sympathy with the people who think that the Christian Association is a hindrance to any particular denomination. I am worth a hundred times more to the church of God than I would be if I had never seen a Young Men's Christian Association. I have done a hundred times more for the church of God, because I have known the Young Men's Christian Association. The association broadened me out and made me far more useful. It will do you good to get acquainted with men of all the denominations, as they meet together."

Music-lars, Attention!

The piano to be used at the Herr Yunck concert on Dec. 4th, is a cabinet, grand specially selected and loaned by Whaley, Royce & Co., Toronto, and is manufactured by the Heimer Piano Co., and contains one of Wessel, Nichol & Gross' best American actions. The touch is light and elastic—the very acme of perfection. It has great power and volume of tone, combined with a rich quality that delights and captivates. A Tone Liberator, a Patent Muffler, which, when put into operation, produces the softest tone possible, and enables the performer to practice at any hour of the day or night, without disturbing any one in the house or neighbourhood and a Metallic Key-board Support, are special features of these instruments. If this instrument is not sold within a few days after the concert, it will be returned to the show rooms on Yonge street, Toronto.

THE PRIZES.

—)o(—

In order to stimulate public interest in the Trent Valley Canal, and also to get at some idea of the public feeling in reference to the date of completion of this important local public work, which has been hung up before the eyes of the public for the past half century; and which to the eyes of the Government seems to assume a vastly increased importance just previous to an election, the EXAMINER offers the following prizes as an inducement to some of our expert mathematical and logarithmic specialists to exercise their estimating powers.

In order to furnish calculators with some data to assist them, it may be mentioned that Sir Charles Tupper in 1882 stated in Peterborough that the work would be proceeded with as rapidly as the finances of the country would permit, and that in 1890, on the eve of the election, the late Sir John A. Macdonald telegraphed to Mr. Jas. Stevenson the day before the election, to the effect that the commission having reported in favour of the feasibility of the canal, the work would at once be proceeded with.

On the night of the election in the opera house, Mr. Stevenson, in expressing his unbounded faith in the bona fides of this telegram and of the government's intentions generally, said, that if the following summer (1891) there were not a thousand men at work on the Peterborough-Lakefield section he would resign his seat. Mr. Stevenson, not having resigned his seat, it is to be inferred that there is some underground canal work going on, and the operators will work upwards and meet the new contractors as they work downward.

The EXAMINER makes this proposition out of consideration for those who are standing around idle, in order that they may form some idea of the time when, on the completion of the canal, they may expect to look for another job.

Any person sending in to the EXAMINER five of the following coupons, containing their estimate of the time when they think the sections will be completed, will have a chance to compete for the following valuable prizes:

To the lady making the nearest average estimate, A NEW DRESS.

To the gentleman making the nearest average estimate, A NEW SUIT OF CLOTHES.

No estimate considered unless accompanied with five of the following coupons, which will be printed in the DAILY EXAMINER, every day this week, and in the weekly for two weeks. Readers of the latter who may not procure complete copies of the daily may use their weekly coupons to make up the required number:

TRENT VALLEY CANAL COUPON.

I estimate that the Simcoe and Balsam Lake division of the Trent Valley Canal, (54 miles) will be completed and accepted as finished, by the Government, on

——————, —— day of ——, 1—

That the Peterborough and Lakefield section (34 miles) will be completed on

——————, —— day of ——, 1—

TWO MORE NOVEMBER WEDDINGS.

The Doris-Maher and Bain-Lane Nuptials in the Cathedral This Morning.

DORIS-MAHER.

A quiet wedding took place this morning in St. Peter's Cathedral. The contracting parties were Miss Jo Maher, daughter of Mr. Dennis Maher, and Mr. P. J. Doris. Rev. Father Collins performed the ceremony.

The bride was prettily attired in a bluette Henrietta gown trimmed with point lace, and carried a bouquet of roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Maher, cousin of the bride, was attired in a handsome shade of brown Henrietta and the bride's travelling suit was of blue serge. Mr. Doris was assisted by Mr. Joseph Begley, and at the conclusion of the ceremony the the wedding party adjourned to the residence of the bride's parents where a sumptuour wedding breakfast was served.

As an evidence of the groom's popularity, it may be mentioned that last evening he was the recipient of two presentations. A number of his friends assembled at the City Hotel and gave him a handsome clock as a wedding gift, and the boarders of the Balmoral Hotel presented him with a very handsome lamp.

Mr. Jas. McGill, on behalf of the Balmoral, read the following address :—

P. G. Doris, Esq. :

DEAR SIR,—We, your fellow boarders at the Balmoral Hotel, accept the opportunity offered on this evening, when you are about to accept the responsibilities of a benedict, to wish you and the young lady, who is to join you as partner for life, all happiness and success. You have a good heart and possess many amiable qualities that have won our esteem, and we know that as a married man, you will be a model husband and yours a happy home.

To yourself and your intended we extend the heartiest well wishes and as a mark of these good wishes, ask you to accept this accompanying parlour lamp.

On behalf of them with whom you have met for the past two years, as a fellow boarder at the Balmoral.

The newly married couple left at midday for a trip Eastward.

BAIN-LANE.

Rev. Father Scollard performed the marriage ceremony between Mr. John Bain and Miss Lizzie Lane, daughter of Mr. John Lane, Auburn, at day break this morning in the Cathedral.

The bride was most becomingly attired in a travelling suit of brown serge, trimmed with bluette, with hat to match. Miss Burke performed the office of bridesmaid. The groom was assisted by Mr. Thos. Lane, brother of the bride, and after partaking of a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bain left by the early train on a bridal trip.

Among the many handsome presents received was a beautiful Louis XIV clock, presented by the employees of the Auburn Mills, among whom the groom was a great favourite, and a very handsome dinner and tea service by the staff of P. Simons & Co.

SOMETHING MORE OF JOHNSTON

This Young Couple Were Married in Peterborough.

Some weeks ago Harry Johnston, an erstwhile dentist student of Port Hope, was brought before Judge Benson in the County Judge's Criminal Court on a charge of having neglected to support his wife, nee Miss Maybee, of the township of Hamilton. An affecting reconciliation took place in the court room, and Johnston was allowed his freedom on consenting to take care of his wife and family. Mrs. Johnston had succeeded in saving $17 and with this sum the re-united couple left for Toronto where they put up at an hotel. When the $17 became exhausted, Johnston went out to look for a boarding house, but like the historical cat, never came back. Mrs. Johnston was left in the lurch and has not yet seen her unrepentant husband. In the meantime the police are looking for him. He seems to be a heartless scoundrel who should spend the rest of his days behind the bars.—Sentinal Star. It will be remembered that the wedding of these two young people occurred in Peterborough. Quite a sensation was caused at the time by the denouement. Both have friends in town and are well known here.

SALVATION ARMY NOTES.

The Week of Self Denial Begins on Dec. 1st.

The Salvation Army is preparing for their annual self denial week, which will be celebrated throughout the Dominion of Canada, from December 1st to 8th, inclusive.

The proceeds, which have been raised in other years through this concentrated effort, has been a remarkable testimony to the Army's development and activity. Every member of the Army, as well as the numerous friends of its institutions, are asked to abstain from some or all luxuries, and in some cases, officers and soldiers have determined to do without even such expenditure as is ordinarily considered necessary in order to raise funds to support the Salvation Army in its many different branches. The social operations, especially, have been greatly developed during the last twelve months, and, as a natural consequence, the demands upon the funds of the Army have increased, which will require greater efforts to raise an increased amount during this self-denial week. The total amount aimed for is $23,000. The local corps raised the sum of $123.40 last year, during the week of self denial, and this year will endeavour to increase the sum to $250.

WILLIAMS' CASE.

All Good Pennsylvanians Rejoice Exceedingly Over It.

Bradford, Pa., Nov. 27.—The Buffalo alien labour crank, DeBarry, thinks that nothing good comes from Canada. He should have a talk with Mary E. Williams of this city. Then he will make an exception in favour of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Her case was considered by local practitioners as incurable, and yet three boxes of this wonderful remedy effected a perfect and permanent cure. She suffered from diabetes for many months and could get no relief, much less a cure, until she used Dodd's Kidney Pills, and these made her well.

Cream Ale.

Ask for Calcutt's Cream Ale, special Christmas brewings, on draft at all leading hotels. Keep the money in town and drink home brewed.

15c. Pipes 15c.

A good briar pipe for 15c., generally sold at 25c. Fancy French clay pipes, straight and bent stems, 1c. Corn cobs, 5 and 10c. Extra cool smokers, with long bent stems, 15c.—at CLEGG'S, 415 George street.

Grafton & Co., manufacturers of Clothing, sell direct to the wearer at close wholesale prices.

NEGLECTED CHILDREN.

Acting on the suggestions of persons in this Province who are prominently identified with child rescue work, Hon. Mr. Gibson, Provincial Secretary, is at present on a visit to the States of Massachusetts and New York, conducting a personal investigation of the systems of those states with reference to the care and treatment of neglected or dependent children. The Massachusetts system is perhaps more nearly akin than that of any other state to the system of our own province, and is said in addition to possess some admirable institutions for dealing with juvenile offenders, such as the Lyman or Westborough Reformatory School for Boys and the Lancaster Reformatory School for Girls. These and other institutions in the State will be visited by the Provincial Secretary, and, in fact, the whole system of dealing with neglected children and juvenile offenders carefully looked into. Mr. Gibson will afterwards visit New York, and continue his investigations. The suggestion has also been made that he should personally examine the Michigan system, and this he will probably do at some future time. The method adopted in that State, though an admirable one in many respects, differs from that of this Province, and is carried on at a very much greater expense to the Government, and it is doubtful whether in the end the results are better, or so good. As the author and administrator of the "act for the prevention of cruelty to and better protection of children," as well as from his position as Minister in charge of the juvenile reformatories, it is well known that Mr. Gibson takes a deep interest in this unfortunate class of our population, and is thoroughly familiar with our own operations with respect to the reclaiming and reformation of children. His present inquiries will enable him to see for himself just what are the advantages and defects of other systems, and this Province may expect to profit by the adoption of what is good in them.

FRUIT BUDS.

Doesn't your orchard want manuring?

For apples and pears autumn planting is good enough.

Albinos or white spots among huckleberries and blackberries are hardly rare enough to deserve much fuss to be made over them.

The complaints of the authorities about zinc found in America dried apples, seems to be "much ado about nothing."

The English walnut may be a semi-tropical fruit, and not entirely hardy But it flourishes and bears well in protected spots, especially in the the suburbs of cities, as far north as western New York and lower Canada.

Corn stalks cut in pieces two feet long (whole or split), set around the tree and tied top and bottom with willow or binder twine will stay on for three years, and protect the tree from sun-scald, borers, mice and rabbits. At least this is what one of our contemporaries says.

SOCIETY'S WAYS.

Ringlets for women and whiskers for men are announced as among the fashionable possibilities of London's near future.

The stovepipe hat is shaking on its pedestal. It began to disappear in the circles of British business. The great heat in London has worked a revolution.

Fashions may come, and fashions may go, but the diamond furor abates not. The sparkling little stone holds its fascination as of yore, and maintains its high value.

In Austrian society it is the custom to take a partner for only one round of a dance. By this means ladies and gentlemen change partners five or six times in a single dance.

To be photographed while you doze in a corner of your pew at church is one of the latest terrors. The kodak has made its way into the pulpit. An Irish clergyman the other Sunday during the service took a snap shot of his congregation.

A Child Enjoys

The pleasant flavour, gentle action and soothing effects of Syrup of Figs, when in need of a laxative, and if the father or mother be costive or bilious, the most gratifying results follow its use; so that it is the best family remedy known, and every family should have a bottle on hand.

Norway Pine Syrup cures coughs, colds, hoarseness, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis etc.

Apples! Apples!

Table apples, cooking apples, all kinds large assortment and prices right.—W. G. FOWLER & Co., Grocers, 159 Hunter street. Telephone 262.

Men's Fur Coats in natural Russian dog at $12, $15 and $18. The warmest and best cap in the world for the price, at FAIRWEATHER & Co., corner of George and Simcoe street, Peterborough.

Organs and Pianos.

Messrs. Jackson & Co. have a number of second hand organs and pianos from $50.00 up, which they are anxious to clear out, in order to make room for their Christmas goods. Easy payment. Terms to suit buyers. Organs and pianos to rent. Show rooms and factory 378 Aylmer street.

Not Guilty.

Last night yesterday morning about two o'clock in the afternoon, before breakfast time, a hungry boy appeared before the beak charged with having in his possession a pair of five dollar pants bought in the usual way. He cleared himself by producing a receipt from W. J. Green, Hunter street, who is selling $5.00 pants for $3.00. Come thou and do likewise—that is, buy the pants.

Protect your Horses.

Don't allow your valuable horses to go without a waterproof cover during the cold wet days of the fall. Be good to them, provide them with one of Kingscotte's strictly waterproof covers, costing only a dollar or two. If you are shipping and receiving goods that are liable to damage from wet, Kingscotte's black oiled canvas waterproof covers "fills the bill,"—nothing better or cheaper. They have no tar in their composition, being an OIL preparation, which keeps them soft and pliable. Awnings taken down and stored in a careful and agreeable manner. Halls decorated for assemblies, balls and meetings of all kinds. ALF. KINGSCOTTE, tent, sail and awning maker, 344 Water street.

WILL BEGIN ON SATURDAY.

On Saturday, Nov. 24th, the sale of the China Hall stock will begin, and continue for two weeks—or until the whole stock has been disposed of. The goods have been reduced from 25 to 50 per cent., and in some cases 75 per cent., so there will be big bargains for everyone. Dinner, Tea and Chamber Sets, Silver Ware, Lamp Goods, Ornaments, etc., at prices that cannot be repeated again. Buy now for Christmas. China Hall and Silver Bazaar, Saturday, Nov. 24th.

A "Cold" Day!

You caught a cold last week—one of those long, lingering sorts of colds that's sneezy thing to get. Everybody you knew, and some people whom you had never been introduced to, told you what to take, and the more you took the more cold you took. Finally you went to see a doctor. He felt your pulse, told you to hold out your tongue, which felt like an all wool blanket, and advised you to drink plenty of COLD WATER, take two grains of quinine every two hours—and wear a good warm Overcoat. "Two dollars, please," said the doctor, and as you paid him like a little man, you made up your mind that if you had bought an Overcoat when you should, you would have saved your two dollars, the quinine, and wouldn't have to drink so much COLD WATER.

We Will Back Our Overcoats

Against any Others in Canada

for saving doctors' bills, and you couldn't have better advice than to get into one of GOUGH'S tip-top Overcoats FORTHWITH.

Buy a $4.00 one if you can't afford a better one, as that may save a five dollar doctor's bill. Buy an All-Wool $10 one for $6 50 if you want a better one—or if you want a heap o style for your money, we've got the extreme styles at from $12 to $15.

A GENTLE CORRECTIVE

is what you need when your liver becomes inactive. It's what you get when you take Dr. Pierce's Pellets; they're free from the violence and the griping that come with the ordinary pill. All medical authorities agree that in regulating the bowels mild methods are preferable. For every trouble of the liver, stomach and bowels, these tiny, sugar-coated pills are most effective. They go about their work in an easy and natural way, and their good lasts — they strengthen and tone up the lining membranes of the stomach and bowels, thereby promoting digestion. Sick and Bilious Headache, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, Dizziness, are prevented, relieved, and permanently cured. They're the cheapest pill for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction or your money is returned.

THE SILVER SIREN.

As I watched her,—watched that startled look, with which the unknown mysteries of a winter night on the plains of Russia spoke to her, I tried to analyze the quality of her beauty. The word "elusive" constantly came to me, as expressive of the character of her charm. Beauty seemed to animate the face from the depths of her blue-grey eyes, and then when I had fixed the home of her attraction there, some witching movement of the mouth—a smile which chased from their hiding in the soft contour of her cheeks and lips a rippling gambol of dimples, would change my mind, and then I would give to the mouth the definite note of beauty which struck the first harmony of the whole.

Thus I watched her, while the old count twaddled on about mints and mines, and the liveried yamschik and footmen of his excellency pierced the night, every now and then, with their strident Russian cries of endearment to the fleet horses that carried us swiftly over the snow. Presently the old count began to nod, but the young countess kept an alert eye upon the passing interests of the night.

The road grew more irregular now, and was broken up in great ukhabs or deep furrows, causing us to sway, every now and then, like a sloop at sea. It was during these tortuous movements that I began to watch for the radiating smile of the Countess Stephanie, while the count, rudely jostled from his dozing dreams, would scold his yamschik in a volley of expressive Russian. When this attack became violent, the Countess Stephanie would slip her hand from her sable muff, and caress her father's arm, till the vituperative anger of the count would cease, or merge into some qualifying correction. It was sweet to see the silent influence of the girl, and one felt that she took the part of that poor servant, whose cringing phrases showed how cruel his training had been, enabling him to accept with patience reprimands which he did not deserve.

The snow had ceased. It had only lasted long enough to veil the trees and decorate with a soft, cloud-like delicacy, the panorama of the night. The intense stillness recalled to one dreams of a primeval age. The very heart beats of Pan seemed suspended. The sounds which we associate with man's inheritance of the earth seemed a strange suggestion in that hour. So far have we become removed from the actual reserve of nature that the natural seemed supernatural, and the hush which pervaded all was like a palpable incantation breathed upon the earth by some mighty spirit of the air, which held the night subservient to her will.

We had entered a thick pine forest. The trees, those voiceful children of the woods, were held in an icy calm. If architecture be indeed frozen music, the brush seemed put in abstract form before us. The branches and vertical lines made cathedral and vista aisles under their moulding of ice and snow. Sometimes whole processions of cowled monks seemed to be lining our route, or spectral arms, stretched outward from the gloom, beckoned us to the murky mystery of the dark forest. Those soft thuds of snow which fell when the top of our kibitka touched the edge of some protruding pine branch, fell behind us like ghostly steps trying to escape their thraldom to the midnight by following our lead to life and light.

But no wierd influences of the night seemed to approach the consciousness of the young countess. As I looked at her that song of Heine's seemed written for her, "Thou art like a lovely floweret!" All but peace and purity seemed separated from her.

The count moved uneasily in his seat. The sledge made a sudden lunge, as it heaved through one of the transverse ruts, and our near horse (we were driving three abreast) gave an ugly tug at the traces, as he swayed outward from his place. The count, now fully awake, cried out: "Ivan Ivanovitch, are you forgetting whom you are driving!"

"No, gracious excellency," the man replied, "but his lordship's horse, Petrovitch is restive."

Almost at the instant, the horse gave a second pull, which was so violent that the whole kibitka was jerked aslant.

"Something is out of gear with the harness!" called the count, "let one of the grooms see to it."

The two footmen were half asleep, and I could hear Ivan muttering to them, while he was bringing the sledge to less rapid motion.

Suddenly there was a cry, piercing and petulant, like a peevish child's—a cry which made my blood curdle in my veins. I glanced at the Countess Stephanie and saw her face blanch, as she shrank into the corner of the sledge. The count sprang to his feet and the awful word was spoken;

"Wolves!"

In an instant the horses, having heard that cry, felt some subtle sense of fright which hastened their speed. The count unlocked his pistol case. I noticed that he was calm, and that he fitted the key into the lock with accuracy.

"Are you armed?" he asked me. I drew my pistol from my pocket, as he spoke.

"I have never heard of the brutes coming so far south at this season," he said. Then he turned to the countess. "Be very calm, my daughter," he said, "your father will defend you."

"I am not afraid," was the proud reply, though her voice was thick and her lips trembled. The count turned quickly and cut the straps which held the closed opening at the back of the sleigh.

"Crouch down, my child," he said to the Countess Stephanie; "crouch down in the bottom of the sledge and cover your head with this rug. May heaven shield thee!"

All the concentrated love of paternity was in his voice.

"Itsik, you—are your pistols ready?" he said next.

"Ready, excellency," was the reply.

The count and I peered into the darkness through the opening of the sleigh. Behind us there appeared a movement like a rolling cloud, resembling dust seen at night.

"They are upon us!" the count exclaimed and fired. As I imitated him I heard the countess give a little stifled scream. On came the moving column, and the cries of angry, ravening mouths filled the air with a deep and ominous rumble.

How they were gaining on us! Ivan Ivanovitch was yelling to his horses, and they, brave creatures, strained every nerve and muscle to obey his commands. A sudden awful thought passed through me. What if there were something really wrong with the harness! How long could any mal-adjustment stand this strain?

Somewhere from the recesses of memory came the recollection of a story I had once read, of hunting wolves in a battue in Russia, and that it was stated there that unaccustomed and peculiar sounds had a terrifying effect upon these beasts—even that a clatter of pans could accomplish what pistols failed to do. Again I fired into that approaching mass of yelping horror. As my hand resumed its position after doing so, it touched the cold surface of the little silver siren which hung upon my watch chain.

Instantly it flashed upon me to try its effect upon this pack of hungry wolves. I put it to my lips, and with all the strength of my lungs forced that weird crescendo note into the icy night. A writhing serpent of the air was that python of sound, which struck its piercing sting into the frightened hearts of those wild beasts.

The younger countess fainted dead away. The horses gained electric fear from what they thought was some new terror in pursuit, but best of all—miracle as it has ever seemed—that pack of angry wolves, with a bellowing howl of fear, tumbled pell-mell into the black depths of the forest and disappeared like a column of smoke whose force is spent!

As they did so, Ivan Ivanovitch cried out that the lights of Riga were in sight, and we were saved!

* * * * *

A year later I was again in Regent street, but not alone nor defeated nor depressed, for Stephanie was there!

I was showing her the shop where I had bought the silver siren.

"Now take me, dearest, to the place where you bought my wedding ring," she said. "Did you not say that that was near Bond street?"

"Yes, near Bond, Stephanie," I began, but this has nothing to do with the story of the silver siren, which has now been told.

Rheumatism is primarily caused by acidity of the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, and thus cures the disease.

A Terrible Experience:

Mr. Geo. Tribe, of Straffordville, Ont. a pretty village near the shores of Lake Erie, went through an experience lately that he will never forget. He tells it in his own words:

"For three years I suffered from skin disease in its worst form. I tried Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura remedies, and doctored one year with the best physicians in the land, but got no benefit; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but failed to remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard, white scales; the itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. I can truly say I owe my good health to B. B. B., and I advise all sufferers to use this splendid medicine.

THE TYPHOON.

It Blows in China Seas and is Dreaded by Mariners.

"The worst storms," said the captain of a tramp steamship the other day, "are the typhoons of the Chinese seas. They cover a large area, are uncertain in their movements and follow each other quickly. The typhoon season is on just now. And I see that one reason the Japanese and Chinese war fleets are anxious to stay at home is because they are afraid of the big storms.

"The first signs of the storm are light, cirrus clouds coming from the east, with hot, dry weather, light winds and a slight rise in the barometer. This fine weather lasts for several days.

"There are usually halos to be seen round the sun by day and around the moon by night, while the phosphorescence of the sea becomes suddenly increased; the sunsets and sunrises become gloriously colored with crimson, gold and amber, and the twilight rays are beautiful beyond description.

"Then at a distance of about 500 miles from the center activity of the typhoon, heavy swells begin to heave the surface of the ocean. A heavy swell in the China sea is a certain indication of a distant typhoon.

"Then the cirrus clouds begin to be replaced gradually by heavy masses of cumulus, and where the blue sky is visible between it is seen to be streaked by faint dashes of pale cirrus clouds.

"Next the temperature begins to fall and this air becomes oppressive from increasing dampness. During the early hours of the morning a slight haze is noticed and the sky presents a vaporous appearance.

"At this stage of a typhoon's growth the animal world, including human beings, is seen to be strangely affected. Numerous writers have very graphically described the ominous terror of some animals and the nervous excitement of others, while the overpowering sense in the human mind of foreboding, presentiment and coming danger is in many cases little short of absolute terror.

"The weather is depressing and many people find it impossible to sleep. All sorts of vermin, including snakes, spiders, beetles, frogs and typhoon flies, become unusually active. The larger animals, such as horses, cattle and dogs, show all the signs of nervous terror that may be noticed in a very heavy thunderstorm in western lands.

"There is no thunder with a typhoon, though the sound of the wind may be often mistaken for it. The air becomes very dry, and the wind blows in sudden, short and terrific squalls, lasting perhaps 6 to 10 minutes. The sky is black and threatening, and has a peculiar ominous appearance.

"Among the rigging of a ship caught in a typhoon the sea birds as well as butterflies, birds and insects from the land may be seen. The surface of the sea presents the appearance of boiling water, due to the seething foam and the crests of the huge waves lashed into fury by the force of the wind."—New York Sun.

Archæological Research.

Archæological excavations in Greece are being enthusiastically carried on by the American and German schools and the Archæological School of Athens. At Delphi the excavations are progressing very favorably on the site of the temple of Apollo, the foundations of which have partly been laid bare, as also a part of the peribolos or sacred enclosure leading up to the sanctuary. Carved lion-head capitals of columns, the pedestal of the statue of victory, erected by Gelon of Syracuse to commemorate his victory at Himera on the day of Salamis, together with many inscriptions, relief carvings, and further fragments of the hymn to Apollo discovered last autumn, are among the recent finds. At Epidaurus excavations by the Athens Archæological Society have uncovered the ancient stadium or race-course with its rows of marble chairs, each with its inscription. The stanium is the first yet discovered in its original state. At Athens, also, Professor Dorpfeld will soon resume his excavations between Mars Hill and the Pnyx, and to facilitate explorations the Greek Government has declared the whole region from the Thesion to the monument of Lysikrates "archæological grounds," which can thus be expropriated to archæological purposes on the payment of comparatively small fees.—The Interior.

Old Age and Hard Work.

Old people make a great mistake when they give up work. Many men who have made a competency in business and feel entitled to retire from active work find themselves declining in health and becoming prematurely old for want of occupation. In most aged persons the vital functions continue in active exercise under normal conditions, but if the regularity and moderation of business life are departed from trouble will surely follow. On the other hand, The Lancet held that "it in any direction it is allowable for competitors in the race of life to dispense with self-control it would appear that they may, to a great extent, use this liberty with respect to physical and mental exertion." In other words, we must not eat too much or drink too much, but we can study hard and take plenty of exercise not only without harm, but with the best results, and if the old people wish to live out all the days they should find plenty to do for both mind and body.—London Lancet.

Mrs. Wigglestein—"James, it says here in the paper that the entertainment of the evening was a monologue by Miss Curafew. What is a monologue, anyway?"

Mr. Wigglestein—"Oh, it's what I have to listen to for half or three-quarters of an hour whenever I come home unusually late at night."—Somerville Journal.

My Toothache!

Is an exclamation heard every hour in the day. Toothache is the most common ailment of young and old, and in the aggregate inflicts more suffering than perhaps any other single complaint. A one minute cure is just what every person desires to possess. Nerviline—nerve pain cure—acts almost instantly in relieving the agony, and a sample bottle affords a quantity sufficient for 100 applications. 10 cents foots the bill. Poison's Nerviline is the only positive remedy for toothache and all nerve pains. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

GOWNS THAT COST $100 EACH.

Those Worn on Official Occasions by Justices of the Supreme Court.

A justice pays as much for his robe o office as he would pay for a very handsome suit of clothing, says the Washington Star. There is a fixed price for the gown—a price which does not vary with the fluctuations in the duties on silk. One woman has made all the justices' gowns for forty years, and her invariable price for one is $100. Like the tailors who make a specialty of outfits for officers of the army and navy, she knows just what are the requirements of a justice's gown, and all that her customer has to be concerned about is the fit. The gown must set well across the shoulders, and it should reach from the neck to the heels; but it should not drag on the floor. I say floor, because, except on inauguration day, the justice does not wear his gown out of doors. When he attends an official dinner or reception at the White House, he wears the garb of every day life; even when he calls on the President on the opening day of the court's session, he goes in the clothes he would wear at the breakfast table. If you visited one of the justices at his home of an evening, you would find a pleasant, rather offhanded man, in a frock coat with none of the solemnity of manners that cloaks the justices when they are on the bench. The supreme court justices are by no means unapproachable. They are, in fact, considered very jolly after dinner companions and they are in great demand in social Washington. The justice wears his robe only when the supreme court, as a body, is participating in some official ceremony. He may go gowned to a funeral, if it is an official funeral. He wears it at the inauguration of a president, but ordinarily he puts it on in the robing-room in the morning and takes it off in the robing-room at dusk. He does not wear it even in the consulting-room, so there is very little wear and tear on it, and one robe will outlast several suit of clothing.

According to the technical description of it, the judge's robe is made of large, straight widths of silk. It is three and a quarter yards wide at the bottom. It has a narrow hem around the bottom and a broad hem down the front. It is gauged at the top to a yoke, which is short on the shoulders and forms a deep scallop at the back. The flowing sleeves are a yard and a quarter wide and reach to the wrist. A justice usually accepts his first gown without question; but as he grows a little older on the bench he is as fussy about the fit of the garment as a young woman with her first ball dress. Having donned their robes with the aid of the old attendants—and they are old enough to be conspicuous even in this city of long service—the justices, at a few minutes before noon, cross the hall to the ante-room of the court. The transit of the justices is a matter of daily interest and wonder to the visitors at the capitol. It is the signal for a raid—a very subdued, dignified raid—on the door of the courtroom, where a doorkeeper sits, solemnly manipulating the swinging door with a cord. Only so many people are admitted to the courtroom, and the number is small. There are but a few rows of benches outside the inclosure reserved for the members of the bar. No crowding of the courtroom is permitted.

The Price of a Kiss.

Kissing, as many people have found, is a comparative costly amusement; but few people have had to pay so highly for an attempted kiss as an unlucky doctor of the Madras civil service. This gentleman was driving in a dog cart with another gentleman's wife, and so far forgot himself, under the influence of the lady's charms, as to ask her for a kiss. In some reprehensible cases of this sort of indulgence has been taken first and permission asked afterwards; but we are glad to know that the Madras civil surgeon did not soar to such heights of wickedness as that. At any rate, when he asked leave to kiss her, the lady very properly refused. Smitten by remorse, the erring doctor wrote a letter of apology to the wife; the wife laid the letter before her husband; the husband laid it before the Madras Government; and the Madras Government called on the doctor to resign. All the clemency they could show him was to allow him to remain in the service a few months longer so as to qualify for the lowest grade of pension. Who shall say that the Indian Government is not a paternal ruler? Or that we do not govern the licentious East on the principles of the highest British morality? Still, it does seem hard on a man to lose his profession, prospects, and career for the sake of a kiss, especially when he hasn't even got the kiss.—St. James' Gazette.

Jogging His Memory.

The good-natured but absent-minded Professor chides his neglectful servant: "Three weeks ago I told you to remind me every day I needed to buy a notebook. Hereafter I only ask you to remind me of it every eight days."—Fliegende Blaetter.

The Envious Sex.

One night at a concert ball in the Tuileries Napoleon III. was so attentive to a beautiful young woman as to excite commemt among the other women. At last in response to a direct tribute to her beauty she said:

"Ah, but your majesty compliments me too much."

"How remarkable," he replied with a twinkle in his eye, "that you should say just what every other woman here is thinking.

THE Y. P. S. CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR RALLY.

GEORGE STREET CHURCH THE RENDEZVOUS.

The Young People of the Different Churches who Belong to the Organization Assemble and Spend an Evening in Listening to Most Instructive Addresses.

The different societies of town, with many of their friends, assembled together in the Sunday school room of the George street Methodist church last night, filling the room to its utmost capacity. The programme differed considerably from the rallies heretofore held in town, in the respect of addresses. At a meeting of the county executive held early in the fall it was decided to hold a series of rallies throughout the county, to take up subjects of deep interest, not only to Endeavourers, but to all Christian workers. The subjects presented were "Christian Citizenship," "Missions and systematic giving," and "The Junior Societies, their place and usefulness." And two of these subjects were discussed last night. Below are given just suggested in the addresses.

A FEW OF THE POINTS

The meeting was opened by singing "All hail the power of Jesus name," after which the Rev. Mr. Trotter offered prayer. Rev. Mr. Young presided, and after extending, on behalf of the George street society, a hearty welcome to all, and some pointed remarks pertaining to the work of the society, he introduced the first speaker of the evening, Miss Kennedy, of Coldsprings, her subject being the "Responsibility of senior societies to the juniors." She asked them the question, "Why should they be interested in the children?" First, Because childhood is the impressionable age. Second—Because Christ was interested in them, and they should not, only for His sake, be interested, but the boys and girls of to-day were to be the men and women of the future. They were to be the heads of families, to fill seats in parliament, and what was sadder if the saloon ages they must surely take their place there. She showed that their example had a great deal to do in the moulding of the characters of the juniors. They could not afford to treat their respective duties lightly. The eye of the junior was ever on them—in the Sunday school in their homes, in their senior societies. Children learn a great deal more than they give them credit for. So their standard should be high, their walk circumspect, that the children in following their example would not stumble. Then as seniors they should show sympathy towards the children. Always wear a smile for them, encourage them in their work, get them some work to do to assist the senior society, let them come into their meetings once in a while, that they may grow up side by side with that one standard ever before them, the Bible and Christ. She did not think it advisable for visitors to come to every junior meeting, but for the superintendents to have an open meeting once a month and invite parents and friends of the children to be present at this meeting.

HER LAST APPEAL

was for them to awaken to the interests of the children.

Rev. A. MacWilliams then gave an interesting and profitable address on "The relation of the Sunday school to the Junior C.E." Many people do not realize the value of the junior society, especially the parents. They think it is not necessary, being merely another branch of the Sunday school. The distinctive feature of the Sunday school is teaching. Children are sent there to be taught God's Word. We have many helps in this work. We have definite subjects to study there. Then again the Sunday school is well adapted for teaching, owing to the class arrangements. The school thus nobly fills a necessary place. But the junior society takes the scholar still farther—he is there taught to apply the truths taught in the Sunday school. But the junior society is a teaching institution as well as the Sunday School. We have our stated topics and on these some excellent papers are brought out. The little ones are sometimes better prepared for the topics than the seniors are, thus showing home study on their part. They get an excellent idea of God's word being thoroughly drilled in it.

IN A PRACTICAL MANNER

It is thus a grand teaching institution, some of the parents say there is better work being done in the Junior Society than in the S. S., and yet the school should be superior in that direction. But the Juniour Society is most successful in its practical work. God's word teaches us to pray. When we hear these Juniors pray we bow our heads in reverence and wonder at the development of this talent. The same is the case when they

READ FROM GOD'S WORD.

These gifts are put into practice now and thus they will become practical men and women in church work in the future. The Committee work is also good for them. Under the Missionary Committee they study Missionary News—they learn to save money and give it for missionary work. The Social Committee devolops the social part of their lives. The Temperance and the Visiting Committees put into practice what God's word teaches.

The speaker again emphasized the difference between the S. S. and Junior Society, the one teaches the other practices. What good is it if we know much of God's word but do not know how to use it. It is one thing to know a thing but another to know how to us it. Divine principles should always be put into practice not kept in the head. We are teaching our Juniors

TO PRAY IN PUBLIC.

In our prayer meetings and even senior society meetings it is sad to see so few take part in prayer, but this will not be so in the future. The old people now say that they were not taught to do so in their youth, but they are glad that the children of to-day are not thus being neglected. Youth is the time to put these principles into practice. Let us take the children in their innocency and purity and mould them in the right way. Then our homes, our Sunday schools, our senior societies and our churches will soon realize the benefits of the junior. When we pass away, the teachings we are giving to the juniors will not have been lost, but will bear fruit in

of our land.

Rev. J. J. Rae gave a splendid address on "Good Citizenship." He opened with the question "what is a citizen?" Any person, native or naturalized, who has the right of the country's protection. What is a Christian citizen? One who puts the teaching of God's Word into practical every day life. An ordinary citizen does not care to think of eternal things. He rarely looks beyond the present results. His looks are downward rather than upward for the present, rather than for the future. He does not recognize God in human affairs. God is all right in the church, the Sunday school, the home, for mothers and for men (when at home.) But in the regular affairs of the world, God is not wanted. The citizen says to the church—keep God in his place. We do not want him in worldly affairs. This kind of a citizen looks

ONLY TO HUMAN FORCE;

if Governments can't stop intemperance, social evils, etc., what more can we do about it? Let things go on as they are—we can't stop them. They say the purification of politics is a dream, the Golden Rule and the Decalogue have no place in practical politics. Men have tried to stop these things and failed. If human nature cannot do it why should we look elsewhere? Politicians don't ask "Is it right?" but "Will it take? will it draw votes?" If it will, that is all that is wanted.

They don't ask in their candidate "Is he a good man?" but "Will he lead our party to victory?" If he will he is

THE MAN FOR US!

Good principles may go down but the party flag must wave.

Another cry is, Silence. Preachers may preach, they may use their pulpits, but don't touch social evils, don't speak roughly about corruption among the ruling powers. These things only cause hard feelings in the town, please don't deal with them. Keep in the old ruts, let us alone—this is what the evil citizen says.

The saloon keeper says, "Endeavourers, you go on and talk in you meetings, don't do any more. Don't interfere with our rights or our prey. You may try and reform the 'old soaks,' but keep still as far as we are concerned. You will only have the down on you—just keep still. And you women, don't take too much interest in men's affairs, just keep quiet in your homes, don't organize against us, keep silence.

Shall we, as Christians, let things go on as they are? Many of our leaders are really elected and appointed to offices by enemies of God and the right. To have good citizens we must recognize the Lord God of nations as having higher powers than rulers and thrones. We shall never have good citizens until we recognize

GOD AS OUR CHIEF.

We must look back over the history of nations to find that God guards His own people. We find there that somehow right prevails over might in the long run. Man must take God as his guide, teaching him the right way—teaching him that he is responsible to God. Man must recognize God's law as sufficient to solve the problems of the ages.

We may talk as we will about the power of the ballot, but what we want is more Bibles. Some people say we have plenty of Bibles. But do we use them enough. We want to make it the rule of our life.

The men and women who are filled with the word are of power in our land. If we will move the world to-day it will be when God's truth is lived and loved by his people.

THE MEN AND WOMEN

Man acts in this life as the agent of God. We should go forth as ambassadors of God to solve the problems that trouble us now.

We need men and women who, touched by the Holy Ghost, will live as bright lights in the world, showing men the way heavenward. Men are needed who cannot be bought; true men, pure men. We want men who feel that they are Christ's representatives. We need Christ's power to-day in men's hearts and lives. With better material

GOD CAN AND WILL

do all things. We want nobler, better Christian citizens.

Let us have God and truth over us and in us, and then his power will circle all things, then evil will go down and God's power be made manifest. We know not what the future has in store, but no work done for him shall be fruitless. Endeavourers be good men and women, lift up the right, dare to work for God. Struggling brings us higher, fight on, fight nobly. In the name of the Lord of Hosts let us be good citizens.

Rev. Dr. Torrance was to have spoken on "Missions and Systematic Giving," but owing to the lateness of the hour he deferred his remarks until a future meeting.

After the collection, Rev. Mr. Young on behalf of the Union thanked the Baptist Society for the fine music; he also thanked the speakers for their excellent addresses. After singing a hymn, Dr. Torrance pronounced the benediction. And thus closed the most successful Union Endeavour meeting held in Peterborough.

NOTES OF THE RALLY.

The musical portion of the programme was supplied by the Baptist Society, and some very acceptable numbers were presented. Two selections rendered by the boys of the choir were deeply interesting. A solo by Mrs. Dr. Hunter, and a quartette composed of Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Scott, Miss Hutchinson and Mr. Routley made up one of the finest musical programmes represented at a rally in town.

We have had the pleasure of hearing the Rev. Mr. Ray speak three times on the subject of "Good Citizenship," and every-time he gave new thoughts.

The Rev. Mr. Young said that it would be hard to distinguish the members of one denomination from the other on this occasion.

At all Christian Rallies it is customary for Endeavourers to take notes of points scored that might be useful to them in the future. Last night when the chairman said that the meeting would proceed when the conversation thus being carried on by pencil and paper was discontinued. This was a set back to Endeavourers because they had to pocket note book to avoid suspicion.

The local junior societies will rally in the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, an excellent programme has been prepared, and all who attend may expect a treat. The gallery has been reserved for visitors. There is plenty of room, so parents and all interested in the Juniors should attend.

The Lacos Committed for Trial.

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—At the investigation into the baby farming case yesterday Inspector Armstrong described the Lace premises on Gladstone avenue as being in a filthy condition. Mrs. McLaren, nurse at the Children's Shelter, said the infant was emaciated and the skin entirely off its body from the middle of its back to its toes. It was in a stupor as if drugged. Dr. Harrington said that death was caused by starvation, but whether this was due to organic trouble or neglect he could not be positive. However, he could find no trace of any organic trouble. Lace and his wife were committed for trial on a charge of manslaughter of an infant called Thomas.

London Personation Case.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 27.—The unknown man charged with personation in the recent election came up at the police court yesterday. Magistrate Parke considered the evidence insufficient to send him for trial for personating Wm. Turner, and a charge of perjury in the same case, preferred by Mayor Essery, was also dropped, despite the latter's vigorous protests. Another charge of impersonating William Dillon was enlarged for a week and bail fixed at $400. The young men arrested for the alleged kidnapping of Morkin were all bailed until Thursday.

Fined for Conspiracy.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—John B. Wood, vice-president and chief stockholder of the Holmes Electric Protective Company, was fined $50 or three months for conspiracy by Judge Hall, in the Court of Queen's bench. Clemency was asked by Mr. Grose, the private prosecutor, and his Honor remarked that as a civil suit for damages was now in progress in another court, the action being instituted by John A. Grose, he was willing to impose the lightest penalty known to the law.

Deer Hunting in New York State.

ALBANY, Nov. 27.—There is a prospect that a bill to prevent the hounding of deer will be introduced in the legislature this winter. Col. Fox, superintendent of the state forests, does not agree with those who fear that the deer may be killed off. He estimates that there are 25,000 deer in the Adirondacks, and that only about 1,800 are killed in a season. The deer multiply more rapidly than they have been shot, he thinks, and he points to the fact that they were never more plentiful than during the present season.

Petrel Makes Another Seizure.

AMHERSTBURG, Ont., Nov. 27.—The Canadian Government cruiser Petrel seized yesterday in Lake Erie, near Little Hen and Chickens Islands, 21 gill white fish nets with a quantity of fish and brought them to this port last night.

A Quebec Boy's Fatal Fall.

QUEBEC, Nov. 27.—A boy named Plante fell from the fortification wall while coasting in front of Montcalm market on Sunday, a height of 30 feet. He was picked up senseless and bleeding profusely. He died next morning.

Serious Charge Against a Toronto Man.

MONTREAL Nov. 27.—Andrew Rutherford, of Toronto, was charged in the Police Court with obtaining money under false pretences and forging Workmen's Steamship tickets. He was remanded until to-day for trial.

Editor Polstorff Released.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—Dr. Polstorff, who as an editor of Kladderdasch, got into trouble with Baron Kiderlen-Waechter and fought a duel with him, was pardoned by the Emperor yesterday and was released from the fortress confinement to which he was sentenced for duelling.

Collision Off Little Canso.

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—A report has been received here from Halifax that the British ship Forest King, from Sydney, C. B., November 15, bound to Berlin, was run down and sunk by a steamer off Little Canso. The crew of sixteen men were saved.

Young Kossuth Swears Allegiance.

They include free reclining, palace, sleeping and dining cars of the latest and best patterns Call on or write any railway agent for tickets and all information, or address J. A. RICHARDSON, Canadian passenger agent, north-east corner King and Yonge streets Toronto.

Sale of the Thousand Islands.

OTTAWA, Nov. 27.—A return to the department of the interior shows that the sale by tender this season of a number of the Thousand Islands group has resulted in the disposal of 186 islands of various sizes, aggregating 256 acres. The amount realised by the sale was $32,110, which is at the rate of about $127 an acre. During the fiscal year, 1893, islands in the St. Lawrence aggregating 107 acres were sold for $1,520, or less than $15 per acre.

West Huron Patrons.

GODERICH, Ont., Nov. 27.—A large and influential meeting of the Patrons of Industry for West Huron met in convention at Carlow to select a candidate to represent them at the next election for the Dominion House. Mr. David Forrester of Clinton was selected as their candidate.

Mrs. Harkies Out on Bail.

MOSO MILLS, Ont., Nov. 27.—Mrs. Harkies is home again. It seems she has got bail for two weeks longer when she is to have another trial. At a preliminary investigation held here on Saturday night in connection with the affair, Mrs. Harkies was duly committed for trial.

London West's Dishonest Tax Collector.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 27.—The defalcations of John M. Lord, the runaway tax collector of London West, will aggregate at least $2,028. This is the fourth tax collector that has proven dishonest since the village was incorporated twenty years ago.

Barns and Contents Burned.

TILBURY CENTRE, Ont., Nov. 27.—The barns in connection with the Peltier hotel were burned with all their contents, including two horses. Loss about $1,200; insurance $300. Sparks were carried by the high wind to the barns of J. B. Marchand, a half mile distant, and they were burned to the ground. Loss about $3,000; insurance $2,000.

Valuable Horses Burned.

COLLINGWOOD, Ont., Nov. 27.—A fire broke out in the stables of the Central Hotel and destroyed the interior of the stable and burned to death seven horses, among which was the celebrated trotter Dolly C. Mr. Thos. Collins, owner of stable and horses, will lose about $1,500 by the fire; fairly covered by insurance.

Toronto's Aldermanic Investigation.

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—In connection with the aldermanic investigation now going on, there is a rumor on the streets to the effect that Mr. H. A. Everett has resigned his position on the directorate of the Street Railway Company, but Mr. McKenzie, the president, will neither deny or confirm this.

Lumber Fire on St. John River.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Nov. 27.—A fire around the wharves near W. B. Hayford's mill, three miles up St. John river, destroyed $6,000 worth of lumber. At one time it was feared the mill would be destroyed, but several tugboats came to the rescue and conquered the flames.

A Young Woman Charged With Fraud.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 27.—Lillian Galbraith, a young woman formerly of Thorold, now of Brantford, is under arrest, charged with obtaining money under false pretences. She represented herself as collector for the King's Daughters to assist an aged lady.

Children at school are often abused and laughed at because of their "dullness," when the whole trouble is imperfect vision; for although they see perfectly well when at play outdoors, and quite well when they first take up a book, they cannot continue to read for more than a few minutes at a time. Such children will sooner or later become Cross-Eyed unless the defect is properly corrected by an eye specialist.

English Interests Presented to Lord Ripon, Colonial Secretary.

WALTER BESANT'S ARGUMENTS

Sir Albert Kays Rollit Strongly Opposes Canada's Attitude on the Question—Sir Charles Tupper Will Reply to Mr. Herbert Gardner.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Lord Ripon, colonial secretary, received yesterday a deputation from the chamber of commerce and the allied section known as the Society of Authors, the Copyright Association and the Print Sellers' Association.

Sir Albert Kays Rollit, president of the associated chambers of commerce, introduced the deputation and stated its business. After denying that he was hostile to Canadian interests in general he opened in the deputation's behalf a rather hot attack on Canada's attitude to the copyright question. He might talk strongly, he said, because he felt strongly. He knew that in the copyright question Canada violated the established principles on which the copyright law of the empire had rested hitherto. If the constitution in question should be passed it would create a precedent whose effect would be almost unlimited.

Mr. Underdown, Q.C., described Sir John Thompson's demands in the matter of copyright as solely an effort to advance the trade in Canadian reprints. France, as a signer of the Berne convention, to which the colonies had agreed prior to its adoption, might also complain in view of the 2,000,000 French-speaking Canadians.

Walter Besant said: "The question is a most serious one for authors. The American Act has already borne great fruits for American authors, who have shown increased vitality and strength since they have been able to compete on fair terms with English writers. Moreover, when the new conditions become thoroughly established the English authors will find their best audience in the United States. However, if Canada passes a separate Act, the old, miserable game of cheap reprints, vieing with others, will begin again. The American Act will be torn to pieces and piracy will be resumed. Then American authors will be compelled to fall back on the unfair conditions preceding 1891. Worse still, all the old bitterness will come back and the reprisals will be revived."

"Briefly the question is this: Ought a country with five million inhabitants be allowed to wreck this mischief on the English-speaking world of 120,000,000 merely that a few of its publishers may enrich themselves by underselling the Americans?"

Mr. Clayton, of a music publishing firm, Commoner Arnold Foster, and others, endorsed Mr. Besant's arguments. One speaker suggested that Great Britain assist Canada by offering a short bill excluding Canada reprints, even though not copyrighted in the Dominion, from all other parts of the Empire.

Lord Ripon said he intended to discuss the matter fully with Sir John Thompson, the Canadian Premier, at his first opportunity, but he was anxious to learn first the opinion of such bodies as he had the honor to be receiving. The desires of one of the great colonies were entitled to his most serious consideration. On the other hand, the interests represented by the deputation could not be slighted. He promised the whole subject his most careful attention.

The Daily News endorses Mr. Besant's speech in the colonial office and advises the government to consider well the strong case presented by him.

Cattle Embargo Question.

Canadian residents interested in the cattle trade criticize severely the letter received by Sir John Long from Mr. Herbert Gardiner, president of the Board of Agriculture, and published yesterday. They say Mr. Gardiner merely expresses the weakness of his position and they ask how Canada can watch and report cases of pleuro-pneumonia when none such can be found in the Dominion. The Board of Agriculture is well aware, they contend, that the strictest inquiries in Canada as to the Mongolian and other reported cases failed to give grounds for even suspicions. It is understood that Sir Charles Tupper, Canadian High Commissioner, is preparing a reply to Mr. Gardner.

The Vice-Regal Party in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—The Governor-General and Lady Aberdeen arrived in Montreal by the Winnipeg special express last night. MARRIAGE OF THE CZAR

Emperor Nicholas Wedded to Princess Alix of Hesse.

AN IMPRESSIVE SPECTACLE

The Ceremony Performed With All the Imposing Rites of the Orthodox Greek Church—All the Churches in the Capital Held Services.

ST PETERSBURG, Nov. 27.—The marriage of Czar Nicholas II. to Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt was celebrated yesterday.

The Czar and his attendants arrived at the winter palace at ten o'clock. All who had been invited to witness the marriage ceremony had been directed to assemble in the rooms to which they were respectively assigned by 11.30 o'clock at the very latest. The gentlemen of the court were all in uniform, and the ladies were dressed in court costume of strawberry color, trimmed with velvet of a similar shade, with long trains and wearing long white veils. The ladies of honor assisted Princess Alix in completing her toilette before assembling in the concert hall. In Nicholas and Avent halls were assembled the military household of the Czar, the suites of foreign sovereigns, the princes and the grand dukes, generals, admirals and officers of the guard. In Armorial hall were present the wives of the dignitaries of the first class, the nobles and the chief civil employes of the government. In Field Marshals' hall were the mayors of St. Petersburg and other cities, the leading bankers, merchants and others.

THE ROYAL GROOM.

The spectacle was one of the utmost brilliancy as the procession re-filed from the gorgeous Malachite hall and traversed the Concert, Nicholas, Avent, Field Marshal and Armorial halls, through the entire length and breadth of the palace. When the procession reached the cathedral, at the extreme end of the Alexander Platz, it was met at the entrance by the Metropolitan of St. Petersburg, the holy synod and the church clergy bearing crosses, holy water and sacred books. The Metropolitan conducted the Czar to a position upon a dais which had been placed in the centre of the chancel behind the rail. As the Emperor took his place at the right of the dais the Czarina led Princess Alix to him and placed her at his left hand. The Czarina then took her place in the chancel at the right of the dais. The crosses, holy water and sacred books were then placed before the gate of Ikonostas and the marriage service in use in the Orthodox church was begun by the singing of Psalm 127. The ceremony was of the most impressive character, and lasted nearly two hours. After the Psalm the Metropolitan said a few words of instruction to the couple, telling them what is the mystery of marriage, and how in marriage they have to live acceptably unto God and honorably. At the conclusion of this the prelate returned to the Czar and said: "Hast thou, Nicholas, a good and unconstrained will and a firm determination to take unto thyself this woman, Alix, whom here thou seest before thee?" To this the Czar answered: "I have, reverend father."

The prelate then blessed the couple three times, thrice saying: "O, Lord, our God, crown them with glory and honor."

After anthems and prayers the "communion cup" was brought and blessed.

THE ROYAL BRIDE.

The cup was filled and handed first to the Czar and then to the Princess, each taking a sip of the wine. The Metropolitan then took the couple by the hand, the groomsmen and bridesmaids walking behind and holding the crowns over their heads, and led them three times around the dais, the choir meanwhile singing a troparion. The rings were exchanged for the last time, they having been exchanged twice before. The prelate then took the crown from the Czar, saying: "Be thou magnified, O bridegroom, as Abraham, and blessed as Isaac, and increased as Jacob, walking in peace and performing in righteousness the commandments of God."

Taking the crown from Princess Alix, he said: "And thou, O bride, be thou magnified as Sarah, and rejoiced as Rebecca, and increased as Rachel, being glad in thy husband and keeping the paths of the law, for God is well pleased."

The priest then offered up the following prayer: "O, God our God, who was present in Cana of Galilee, and did'st bless the marriage there, do Thou bless also these Thy servants, who by Thy province are conjoined in the community of marriage. Bless their incomings and outgoings, replenish their life with good things, accept their crowns in Thy kingdom unsullied and undefiled and preserve them without offence to ages of ages."

After an anthem the priest pronounced the blessing as follows: "The Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, the all-holy and consubstantial and life-originating Trinity, one Godhead and sovereignty, bless you and vouchsafe unto you long life, well favored children, progress in this life and faith, and replenish you with the good things of earth, and count you worthy of obtaining the promised blessing, through the prayers of the Holy God, bearing one one and of all the saints! Amen!"

The Czar then kissed the bride and the guests came forward to congratulate the couple.

At the conclusion of congratulations the dismissal was pronounced and the bride and bridegroom and the wedding guests returned to the Winter palace.

At the close of the ceremony the newly-wedded couple kissed the picture of the Virgin, which is supposed to have been painted by St. Luke. The relic is now covered with jewels so that only the face is visible. Upon the neck is a necklace of diamonds and emeralds and the head is surmounted by a diamond crown.

The Emperor and his bride were received at the Anitchkoff palace by the Czar's mother, the Dowager Czarina. Services were held in all the churches during the marriage ceremony and the church bells were rung throughout the day.

THE ARMENIAN MASSACRE.

A Later Story of the Outrage by the Sultan's Troops.

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—A private letter received from Constantinople gives the following details of the Armenian massacre:

"We have word from Bitlis that the destruction of life in Sassoun, south of Moosh, was even greater than was supposed. The brief note which has reached us says that 27 villages were annihilated in Sassoun, and 6,000 men, women and children were massacred by troops and Kurds. This awful story is only just beginning to be known, though the massacre took place early in September. The Turks have used infinite pains to prevent the news leaking out, even going to the length of sending back from Trebizond many hundreds from the Moosh region who had come this way on business.

"The massacre was ordered from here in the sense that some Kurds having robbed Armenian villages of flocks the Armenians pursued and tried to recover their property and a fight ensued, in which a dozen Kurds were killed. The slain men were semi-official robbers enrolled as troops and armed as such, but not under control. The authorities there telegraphed here that Armenians had killed some of the Sultan's troops. The Sultan at once ordered infantry and cavalry to put down the Armenian rebellion and they did it; only, not finding any rebellion, they cleared the country so that none should occur in the future."

Hungary's Religious Liberty Bills.

VIENNA, Nov. 27.—Dr. Wekerle, Prime minister of Hungary, was received by Emperor Joseph yesterday and afterward had a conference with Count Kalnoky, the Imperial Premier. It is reported that the Emperor fully supports the policy of Dr. Wekerle who will again send to the House of Magnates his projects for religious liberty. If the House of Magnates reject the religious liberty bill again the Hungarian Cabinet will probably resign. In religious circles these bills are regarded as much more pernicious than the civil marriage bill.

Not the Work of the "Ripper."

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The dead body of a woman was found in a street in Kensington. The woman, who was one of the lower grade of abandoned females, had been stabbed in the neck and had bled to death. Her murderer left a walking stick lying by her side. There is no indication of "ripperism" in connection with the murder, which was the result of a street brawl, and nobody on this side of the water has any notion that "Jack the Ripper" has resumed his bloody work.

Canada's Test of Cattle Exports.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The order issued by the Canadian Government providing that all meat cattle arriving in Canadian quarantine shall be tested by the Koch tuberculine lymph will scarcely affect the United States. The number of cattle exported from this country into Canada is very small. Dr. Salmon, chief of the bureau of animal industry, said that the action of Canadians was intended to apply to cattle imported for breeding purposes, all of which came from Europe.

Pitezel Traced to New York.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—The officers of the Fidelity Insurance Company are now as firm in their belief that Pitezel is alive as they were formerly that he was dead. President Fouse said that Pitezel had been traced to New York city and that Inspector Gary, of the company, would go there to-day and endeavor to locate him. President Fouse also said that the missing Pitezel children were recently at Niagara Falls.

Bakers' Strike in Amsterdam.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 27.—Since Sunday morning the journeymen bakers have been on strike. Bread has been scarce and the master bakers have sold it to-day only under police protection. The strikers plundered several bakers' carts, scattered the loaves, threw stones at the police and smashed bake house windows. Forty master bakers yielded and returned to work, but the rest refused to treat with the men.

Sicily Still Quaking.

ROME, Nov. 27.—Repeated earthquakes shocked Reggio and Messina yesterday. The terror of the inhabitants increases. It is wet and cold throughout the district round both cities yet hundreds are living in the fields. Many families are destitute of shelter and have only the clothes on their backs. A relief bill is in preparation for parliament.

The Madagascar Credits Carried.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—The Chamber of Deputies yesterday took a final vote on the Madagascar credits which were carried by a vote of 377 to 148. During the debate there was a heated exchange of words between M. Raymond Poincaire, Republican, and M. Gustave Rouanet, Socialist, which resulted in the former sending seconds to M. Rouanet.

A SNOBBISH MINISTER.

Sir Adolph Caron, as post master general, is not a shining success. He does not seem to be of the right stamp for the position. They are after him in British Columbia, where his close-fisted treatment of the Victoria post office employees compelled them to strike, causing of course great inconvenience to the public. A public meeting was held in Victoria to protest against the conduct of the postmaster-general. It was presided over by the mayor and there were present the most representative citizens, including the Bishop, Messrs. Prior and Earle, M.P's., the president of the board of trade and the mayor and city council. One and all spoke in condemnation of the conduct of affairs by the postmaster general, which had brought about such a condition of affairs as to produce a strike of post office employees and all its consequent inconveniences. The Victoria Times, speaking of the meeting, says:—"If Sir Adolphe Caron or any of the other Ottawa autocrats had the courage to follow in Mr. Laurier's footsteps just now, the reception they would be accorded in Victoria would be in marked contrast to the warm and affectionate welcome given to the leader of the Opposition, especially if they had the good fortune to be present at yesterday's meeting. Not even the Tory members could say a word, save in reproof, of the governmental administration which forced men who receive $29 per month to strike before they could obtain the payment of their poor salaries." A man of Sir Adolph's "stamp" should be first "licked" and then cancelled.

THE Montreal Star says: "People up in Ontario will be very apt to regard the active revival of the Trent Valley Canal project as a sign of the near approach of the General Elections. When the news goes forth that some of the contracts for this perennial political work have been let the conviction that there will not be another session before the elections will gain a host of new converts. The new voters' lists will be ready in February, they will point out, and Trent Valley Canal enthusiasm ought to be about ripe by that time too. But it will not be enough for the Government to make itself 'solid' with Central Ontario. The Trent Valley Canal style of argument has a good deal of 'kick' about it, for the taxpayers in the rest of the country do not like the prospect of bearing the cost." Montreal should not be among the "kickers," for the completion and operation of the Trent Valley Canal will be of great benefit to that city as a transhipping point from barges to ocean-going vessels of the grain from the Northwest that will be carried over this route.

THE ravages of smallpox and diphtheria have thrown Detroit into a partial panic. The spread of the latter disease, particularly, has been rapid, and the Board of Health has ordered the closing of six public and five parochial schools. The epidemic is confined to children, and the mortality is great. Peterborough need not hope for sewerage to assist in warding off diphtheria, but the Board of Health might do something to raise up a barrier against a possible epidemic of small-pox. A traveller from Chicago got off at a western country town, a day or two ago, and is there ill with a most virulent type of small pox, and the citizens, who have not been vaccinated, are exposed to the disease. Yet, doubtless, that town has some wiseacres, who declared vaccination a useless expense, as there was no danger of smallpox from Chicago. Yet failure to have had vaccination made compulsory may result in the loss of many lives. The lesson is obvious.

THE Presbyterian General Assembly of the United States, at its last meeting decided to ask the theological seminaries to give to the assembly direct control over the professors, both in regard to their appointment and continuance in office. The object, of course, was to make it possible to stamp out heresies, like that of Briggs, at their first appearance. Last week both the Auburn and Chicago Seminaries declined to do anything of the kind, and Union Seminary has already asserted its independence. There only remain the Princeton and Alleghany Seminaries, and they are not likely willing to part with their important powers of self-government. At present the Assembly has only a veto on the appointment of the professors, and no remedy in the case of a man whose heresies develop after appointment.

THE New York Sun in an article calling attention to the great strides the cheese business has taken in Canada, and in reproach of the American dairymen says:—"It cannot be that American farmers will let Canadians get ahead of them in this profitable business." Such a thing can very easily be, for that is the situation now. Our southern neighbours are full of go-ahead-itiveness and in general the American "hare" gets the start of the slower-going Canadian "tortoise," but in the matter of stock breeding, cheese making and education, the Canadian has got the lead, and is constantly putting more daylight between himself and his American competitor. Our cheese is our strong point. "Skim-milk" morality won't work in cheese making.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Ottawa Journal asks if the duplication of the canals said to have been noticed on Mars may be taken as an indication that a general election is taking place on that planet.

THE Kingston Provincial election petition and cross-petition will be tried at Kingston, on Monday, the 17th December, before Mr. Chancellor Boyd and Mr. Justice Osler.

"DESTROY US."

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—I have been waiting with interest for an explanation of the words "destroy us", recorded in Mark i, 21-34, found in the Sunday school lesson of October 21st. I have seen two replies to the question, but neither, to my mind, explains the question, and I hereby beg to offer what I consider an explanation of the passage.

It would seem from the reply given by the pastor of the Christian Scientist Church, of Toronto, that Christ cleanses the unclean heart of men, against their will. This would destroy their free agency and make him an unaccountable being. This does not give the desired information. If we examine the Scriptures and our English language I think we will find the true meaning of "destroy" and how it should be used.

The Bible teaches us that man when created was in the image of his Creator, and united to Him in loving obedience; but he hearkened to the voice of the tempter, and thereby severed his connection with God by transgressing the divine command. He united his power to transgress, with the devil's will to transgress, and "so completely are they one that the evil spirit accompanies the man to the House of God, (but Jesus was there preaching.) This union strengthens both parties in their rebellion against God and their opposition to everything heavenly or divine. This appears to be the state of every sinner's heart, but how can Christ destroy them who are thus united?

"Destroy." What is it? In our language we are told it is to pull down, to demolish, to separate the parts of an edifice, the union of which is necessary to constitute a thing. It appears to me that this is what Jesus meant when he said to the Jews "destroy this temple, etc. Destroy the union between this body and soul by death and in three days I will unite them again and rise from the dead. This also shows how united the evil spirit went with the man to the house of God to worship, but Jesus was the preacher and astonished the people.

We see this fully explained in the construction of an arch. The keystone which unite the two parts is the strength of the arch, but remove it and you destroy the arch. This shows what "destroy" in the text means. It is neither the unclean spirit nor the man whom it possessed, Jesus came to destroy, but the union of their spirits. United they can turn Paradise to a place of misery and shame; disunited they are powerless to successfully oppose the operation of the workings of the Holy Spirit.

Not being a member of the Normal Class of Otonabee, but simply a Sabbath School teacher, I must apologize for answering a question addressed to them.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the space in your valuable paper, I remain,

Yours truly,
A SABBATH SCHOOL TEACHER.

Men and Women Who Are Martyrs to Rheumatism Can be Thoroughly Cured.

Paine's Celery Compound The Infallible Remedy.

The great modern triumph of medical science is Paine's Celery Compound. Its marvellous curing powers are talked of in every quarter of the civilized world, and the ablest physicians are astonished with its life-giving and health-restoring results.

As a positive cure for rheumatism and sciatica, Paine's Celery Compound has no equal known to man. In Canada alone, this wonderful medicine has cured more rheumatic men and women than have been cured by all other combined agencies. The most obstinate and most desperate cases have been met with perfect success. Hundreds of testimonials from the very best people of Canada support every claim made for Paine's Celery Compound.

Are you suffering from rheumatism or sciatica, dear reader? Have you met with reverses and failures in the past through the use of deceptive and worthless preparations? There are many we know who have been driven deeper into sufferings and agonies owing to experiments with pills and mixtures and compounds that are positively harmful and dangerous.

If you are now using any such medicines stop them at once if you value your life. Ask your druggist or dealer for Paine's Celery Compound. That will surely and certainly banish your troubles.

The following letter from Mr. G. J. McDonald, merchant tailor, of Cornwall, Ont., demonstrates the superiority of nature's medicine:

"After having given your Paine's Celery Compound a thorough testing, I am pleased to say a few words in its favour. For three years I suffered terribly from rheumatism. It seemed to me that I was forced to endure all the agonies and pains that a mortal could possibly experience from the dreadful disease.

While suffering I tried many of the advertised medicines and also doctors' prescriptions, but never found a cure until I procured a supply of Paine's Celery Compound from McHaffie & Elvidge, druggists, of this town. Paine's Celery Compound worked like a charm—it seemed to strike at the very root of my trouble. I am now cured—all pains are vanished, and in every respect I am a new man.

"I shall always consider it a pleasure and duty to strongly recommend Paine's Celery Compound to all who are afflicted with rheumatism."

Hood's Sarsaparilla Gave Perfect Health.

The following letter is from a well-known merchant tailor of St. George, N. B.:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen—I am glad to say that Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills have done me a great deal of good. I had a severe attack of the grip in the winter, and after getting over the fever I did not seem to gather strength, and had no ambition. Hood's Sarsaparilla proved to be just what I needed. The results were very satisfactory, and I recommend this medicine to all who are afflicted with rheumatism or other

FULL OF ENCOURAGEMENT
FOR ALL WOMEN.

In Bed 5 Months—Had Given Up All Hope of Getting Well—A Remedy Found at Last to which "I Owe My Life."

Science has fully established the fact that all the nervous energy of our bodies is generated by nerve centres located near the base of the brain. When the supply of nerve force has been diminished either by excessive physical or mental labours, or owing to a derangement of the nerve centres, we are first conscious of a languor or tired and worn-out feeling, then of a mild form of nervousness, headache, or stomach trouble, which is perhaps succeeded by nervous prostration, chronic indigestion, and dyspepsia, and a general sinking of the whole system. In this day of hurry, fret and worry, there are very few who enjoy perfect health; nearly everyone has some trouble, an ache, or pain, a weakness, a nerve trouble, something wrong with the stomach and bowels, poor blood, heart disease, or sick headache; all of which are brought on by a lack of nervous energy to enable the different organs of the body to perform their respective work.

South American Nervine Tonic, the marvellous nerve food and health giver, is a satisfying success, a wondrous boon to tired, sick, and overworked men and women, who have suffered years of discouragement and tried all manner of remedies without benefit. It is a modern, a scientific remedy, and in its wake follows abounding health.

It is unlike all other remedies in that it is not designed to act on the different organs affected, but by its direct action on the nerve centres, which are nature's little batteries, it causes an increased supply of nervous energy to be generated, which in its turn thoroughly oils, as it were, the machinery of the body, thereby enabling it to perform perfectly its different functions, and without the slightest friction.

If you have been reading of the remarkable cures wrought by South American Nervine, accounts of which we publish from week to week, and are still sceptical, we ask you to investigate them by correspondence, and become convinced that they are true to the letter. Such a course may save you months, perhaps years, of suffering and anxiety.

The words that follow are strong, but they emanate from the heart, and speak the sentiments of thousands of women in the United States and Canada who know, through experience, of the healing virtues of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, a prominent and much respected lady, writes as follows:—

"I owe my life to the great South American Nervine Tonic. I have been in bed for five months with a scrofulous tumour in my right side, and suffered with indigestion and nervous prostration. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I cannot recommend it too highly."

Tired women, can you do better than become acquainted with this truly great remedy?

THE END IS NEAR.

Negotiations for Peace to be Pushed Rapidly Forward.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—A despatch from Rome to the Daily Graphic says: "The latest news from Tokio is that as soon as China shall make proposals for peace Japan will accept the good offices of the United States in the negotiations."

The Times correspondent in Yokohama says that Japan has consented to receive China's proposals of peace through the American ministers in Tokio and Pekin.

The Daily News has this despatch from Yokohama: "It is reported that a large number of Chinese fled from Port Arthur on the night of the 21st. Another report is that during the hottest part of the fight part of the Chinese troops fled to the warships waiting to receive them. Thereupon the Japanese are said to have cannonaded the ships and sunk two."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—It is not believed here that Mr. Dietring, the chief of the Chinese customs service, who left for Tokio a week ago, has been instructed to negotiate for peace between China and Japan, but that his mission is principally to learn the temper of the Japanese foreign office and communicate his conclusions to Pekin.

All indications now point to a speedy termination of the war. It is believed that the negotiations for peace will be pushed rapidly forward. China, it is thought, will have no difficulty in securing the funds with which to pay the war indemnity.

Union of the Chicago Roads.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—The initial step in joining all the principal lines running into Chicago in one big association was taken in this city yesterday. Every road which could be benefited by becoming a member was represented. Even the Canadian Pacific, which has hitherto been a trifle shy about affiliating with other lines for a mutual preservation of passenger rates, was there. A resolution was passed providing for the appointment of a committee of nine, three from territories east of the Missouri river, three from territory west of the river and three from the transcontinental territory. This committee is to report next Wednesday on a plan of reorganization. As there is likely to be a difference of opinion, it is probably three reports will be made.

Troublesome Times for Brazil.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—A special from Rio Janeiro says: Italy has decided to send a fleet against this country, it is learned, on account of Brazil's refusal to arbitrate a pending question. Though the action of the government in the case is universally approved here, President Moraes will prepare new propositions and forward them to the Italian government. The United States may be asked to arbitrate. Part of Brazil's fleet has left with sealed orders. It is rumored the warships have been sent after Admiral Da Gama, who now commands 8,000 men. The monarchists, the report says, propose rising all over the country. It is feared the government will be unable to cope with them. Troublesome times are predicted.

Bandit-Infested Oklahoma.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Nov. 27.—Indian Agent Wisdom and ex-Indian Agent Bennett, both of Muskogee, have arrived from the bandit-infested part of the territory. At Wagoner they were notified that the freight train just ahead of them had been fired into near Bragg station. Seven men mounted on horses undertook to hold up the train in broad daylight, but the engineer and fireman lay down in the cab and let the train go ahead. A volley was fired at the cab, and as the caboose went by that also was riddled with bullets.

A LONG SIEGE.

How a Sufferer for Twenty Years Regained Health and Strength.

Mr. John A. Stewart, of Napinka, Man., a former well known resident of Stratford, Ont., writes :—

"It gives me pleasure to give you a plain statement of what your Pink Pills have done for me. I have been troubled with a lame back for the past twenty years, caused by a strain while cradling wheat, and once or twice a year for four or five weeks at a time I would be completely laid up with it. I tried plasters and medicine, with such little benefit that at last I gave up all hope of ever getting better. In May, 1891, I first heard of Pink Pills. A that time I was laid up with a particularly severe attack, which left me perfectly useless, as I could neither stand nor walk. All I could do was to be on my back, and it was in this condition I was when I was advised to try Pink Pills, by a man working for me. He had about half a box, and at his urgent solicitation I began their use. Having began them I decided to give them a fair trial, and procuring more from Dr. Snider, and kept on taking them all summer. My recovery was slow, but after the first few weeks I could feel that I was getting better every week. By the fall I was perfectly well, and yet I feared that the cure might not be permanent as the trouble was of such long standing, but I am pleased to be able to say that after the lapse of so much time I have not had the slightest recurrence of the trouble, and am feeling in perfect health. I still use Pink Pills in the fall and spring as a tonic medicine, and find much benefit from them. I may say that there are numbers of others here who have been benefitted by the use of your pills.

You are at full liberty to use this letter in any manner you choose for the benefit of suffering ones."

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Nov. 27, 1894.

On the street here 100 bushels of wheat sold at 59 1-2c for white and 58c for goose: 2,000 bushels of barley at 40 to 45c; one load of peas at 57c; 300 bushels of oats at 31c, and one load of buckwheat at 42 1-2c.

The visible supply of barley is 3,949,000 bushels as compared with 3,515,000 last week.

Wheat was strong in Chicago in sympathy with foreign markets closing 1 3 8c higher. May corn closed firm but cash was lower on account of heavy receipts. Oats were quiet.

In sheep and lambs at East Buffalo, 66 cars only were on sale of which 12 cars were of Canada's. Owing to the light supply, cold weather and good eastern reports, prices were advanced. Some of the best of the Canada's sold up to $4.20, the bulk being at $3.90 to $4.15.

There was a good tone to the London stock market, but no business except in consols and mines, a curious combination. Americans, after improving, closed dull, especially Erie.

The New York stock market opened and closed extremely dull, a slight and general downward movement during the midday hours being its only sign of life. Naturally enough, Northwestern stock was heavy and Reading positively weak. The one development of the day which had distinct influence on prices was the St. Paul fall report for October.

CHILDREN FATALLY BURNED.

Sad Circumstances Attending a Sunnidale Township Fire.

NEW LOWELL, Ont., Nov. 27.—The dwelling house of Mr. Jas. Scott, Sunnidale township, was burned to the ground. Mr. and Mrs. Scott left the house to look after the farm stock in a barn, 150 yards from the dwelling. They were absent about twenty minutes when they discovered the dwelling on fire. Mr. Scott rushed into the burning building and carried out his two children, aged 4 and 3 years. Both were badly burned and died next morning. Fire is supposed to have been caused by a lamp exploding or being upset by the children, as the lamp was left burning low and the children in bed when Mr. and Mrs. Scott left the house and there was no one else in the house at the time but the two children.

Mrs. Berry's Wanderings.

BURFORD, Ont., Nov. 27.—The inquest on the body of Mrs. Henry Brrry, who was missing since August last, and whose body was discovered in the Oakland swamp on Saturday, was held in this village yesterday. There was an evidence given by relatives of the unfortunate woman as to her leaving Brantford for her home in Simcoe, tracing her to Port Dover Junction, where she is now said to have left the train. She was seen after this in the neighborhood of Simcoe, about a mile from her own home; and from there she was traced east as far as Waterford, and it is supposed she wandered around until she got lost in the swamp and sank down to die. It is estimated that she must have travelled 30 or 40 miles in her wanderings. The jury brought in a verdict to the effect that the deceased had come to her death while in a fit of temporary insanity from exposure and lack of the necessaries of life and that there was no violence to her body so far as the evidence produced went to show.

In the Quebec Assembly.

QUEBEC, Nov. 27.—In the Legislative Assembly Mr. Tellier, M.P.P. for Joliette, introduced his notice of motion for the copies of the order-in-council determining what tolls the Charlemagne and Lake Andreau Lumber Company is entitled to levy on floating timber passing through certain improved parts of the Onareau and Dufresne rivers. Mr. Tellier said that such fees had created a certain discontent among lumbermen who floated timber down these rivers. Hon. Mr. Casgrain, speaking of his motion in reference to libel, says that he wishes to alter the law on libel so as to protect newspapers against libel suits instituted against them for frivolous articles. Later Hon. Mr. Casgrain introduced his resolutions regarding coroner fees which will be placed at $2,500.

A Big Scatter in Diamonds.

GRAND RAPIDS, Nov. 27.—A team of horses ran away and crashed through the front window of Herman Idemas' pawnshop, scattering $5,000 worth of diamonds into the street. The precious stones became mixed with the broken glass and the large crowd that quickly gathered made it difficult to find them. It is thought $2,000 worth of the gems were stolen by people who picked them up from the sidewalk.

A Dangerous Counterfeit.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—What is said to be the most dangerous counterfeit that has made its appearance in many years is an imitation of the Windom $2 silver certificate. Chief Hazen, of the secret service, has issued a detail warning to the public in which he says the note will bear the closest scrutiny. The counterfeit is being circulated in the large cities principally.

A Notable Record.

The Great Life-Saving Lactated Food.

The past summer was a most remarkable season for Lactated Food. There was such a demand for this pure and nutritious infant food from every quarter of the Dominion, that the manufacturers were compelled to enlarge their producing capacity.

During the past summer, thousands of mothers bought and used Lactated Food, and have been so thoroughly satisfied with the results, that no pleadings or arguments can ever induce them to use any other make of food.

Hundreds of thankful letters have been received telling what Lactated Food has done in saving little lives. Every letter proves strongly and conclusively that "Lactated Food Saves Babies Lives."

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, and have no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose to pay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times

IT IS HERE!

The Peterborough Hardware Company have to-day opened out a Magnificent Stock of the finest Silver-Plated Ware ever offered for sale in Peterborough. Inspection of quality and prices invited. You will be very much pleased by calling and looking over this beautiful line of goods, which is a marvel of beauty, and of the cheapness with which these wares can be produced.

A Pleasant Gathering.

The members of Mr. Alfred Parker's Bible Class of the George street Methodist church, together with a number of friends to the number of about thirty, assembled at the house of their teacher last evening, in response to an invitation issued by him. Mr. Parker had chosen this opportunity of asking the members down for a social evening, and it proved a most enjoyable one indeed, the time passing pleasantly and being enlivened by games and vocal and instrumental music. A most bountiful and appetizing repast was served during the evening.

Sunday School Convention.

The Sunday school workers of the town will remember with pleasure the two conventions held last year by the P.S.S. Association. A third one is to be held in the Baptist church on Thursday evening of this week. A conference on the subject of "Teacher Training" will be conducted by Rev. J. J. Rae, an active and progressive Sunday school worker. Rev. Mr. Trotter will give by blackboard a birds-eye view of the life of Christ. A short musical programme will also be rendered. All adult friends of the Sunday school are invited to attend, and teachers are particularly urged to be present. 2d134

—Twenty dollars and costs or two months in gaol, was the judgment in the case of assault preferred by a boarding house keeper against a beligerent lodger, who made a too free use of his fists the other night.

—The soot in the chimney of a house on Park street, just above Brock, occupied by Mr. Geo. Ball, took fire last night, and blazed furiously for half an hour to the no small alarm of the neighbourhood. The fire brigade was not summoned and the flames gradually died away.

—The police visited the Temperance Houses conducted by Messrs. Jamieson, Croft, Connors and Cavanaugh, this morning, in order to ascertain if liquor in any quantities was being kept on the premises. Sufficient quantities were not found to warrant prosecution.

—In a large consignment of Italian fancy groceries, the firm of E. F. Mason & Co., has received a small quantity of the famous Gargonzola cheese. It is most carefully packed in a covering of paste and wrapped in tin foil in order to preserve the flavour, which so tickles the palate of the epicure.

—It may probably interest the town young man who wants to be away up in the very latest "go," that Oscar Wilde wears an enormous cravat, and his coat tails are a little longer than anybody else's. He is adorned with a gold chain bracelet, and the little finger of the left hand is ringed to the nail.

—A business man on a trip to Peterborough a day or two since, remarked that he never ran across a town where the citizens were so much addicted to taking short cuts across corners as were the residents of Peterborough. He thought that it was a good sign of the proof that the Peterboroughians were hustlers.

—It is rumored that the business men will shortly petition the local banks to change their office hours. The petitioners will ask to have banks closed at one o'clock, on Friday, and remain open on Saturday afternoon until three. It is thought the farmers, as well as business men of the town, would favour the keeping open of the banks on Saturday.

—A number of town families, who have not the waterworks service in their homes, prefer to use rain water rather than the more questionable liquid in the well. There is danger in so doing. Mrs. Joseph Donnally, of Evergreen, Ohio, died last week from the effects of rain water which she drank. The water was caught from a roof that has recently been painted with white lead.

—For selling tobacco to a minor, Mr. Sullivan, of Water street, was discharged this morning, at the Police Court, as it appears that the article was sold by his daughter in ignorance of the law regarding such sale. Mr. J. C. Sullivan's name has been mentioned in regard to this transaction, but the popular Ashburnham grocer was not in any way connected with it. Mr. Sullivan has always made it a principle through life to abide by all laws.

—The case of Grocer Collins, of Ashburnham, was discharged, this morning, at the police court. Mr. Collins was charged with selling liquor to a minor. The magistrate asked the chief of police to withdraw the charge, and upon his refusing to do so, assumed the responsibility of dismissing the case. The liquor was given to a boy who frequently brings orders for liquor from others and Mr. Collins did not suspect that it was for his own use when he purchased it.

—Patrick O'Donnell, the young lad who was disgustingly drunk, on Saturday, was up before the magistrate for judgment, this morning, and as it was his first offence, he was let off with a reprimand, coupled with the caution against ever appearing before the police magistrate again on pain of being dealt with in a manner, which would make him remember the occasion. The magistrate impressed on the boy that there was nothing manly in getting drunk and lying in the gutter like a hog, but that it was but the first step towards degradation to the level of a beast.

—F. X. Arnes, one of the greatest musical critics, and who is European correspondent for the New York Musical Courier, attended the musical festival in Berlin, Germany, last year, where the celebrated Rose String Quartette, of Vienna, played, writes: "While listening to them Herr Yunck, now of Detroit, loomed up before my mental vision, and, allow me to state right here, that in point of finesse, the Rose quartette remind me of the Detroit Philharmonic club, of which Herr Yunck is leader and solo violinist. Hearing an artist like Herr Yunck will always remain fresh in one's memory." Opera House, Tuesday, Dec. 4th. General admission 50c, reserved seats 75c. MR. MOODY AND THE Y. M. C. A.

He Urges Young Men to Go and Help the Secretary and Make the Association a Success.

While in Toronto, Mr. Moody at one of his meetings, made the following remarks regarding the Toronto branch of the Y. M. C. A.: "I want to say a word on behalf of the Young Men's Christian Association. The associations are beacon lights set on a hill in our great cities. They are open 365 days in the year. They are places where the Christian young man can go and do Christian work every night in the week. Mr. Budge of Montreal, whom I consider the most successful secretary I have ever known on this continent wrote to me some weeks ago urging that I would say a good word for the Young Men's Christian Association in this city. I am glad to say that the Christian Association is a good thing, and a very helpful thing for the young man coming to the city, and I hope the Christian men here will do all in their power to support it with their prayers, their influence and their money. If the association has made mistakes, and I understand they have met with some reverses, forget these mistakes and help them to make a fresh start again. I am told that the young Secretary is a splendid young fellow, and he must be so, for whatever my friend Mr. Budge says is all right. Stand right by that Secretary. I wish that every young man that has come out for Christ would go and help them there. It will broaden him in every way. I have no sympathy with the people who think that the Christian Association is a hindrance to any particular denomination. I am worth a hundred times more to the church of God than I would be if I had never seen a Young Men's Christian Association. I have done a hundred times more for the church of God, because I have known the Young Men's Christian Association. The association broadened me out and made me far more useful. It will do you good to get acquainted with men of all the denominations, as they meet together."

Musicians, Attention!

The piano to be used at the Herr Yunck concert on Dec. 4th, is a cabinet, grand specially selected and loaned by Whaley, Royce & Co., Toronto, and is manufactured by the Reimer Piano Co., and contains one of Wessel, Nichol & Gross' best American actions. The touch is light and elastic—the very acme of perfection. It has great power and volume of tone, combined with a rich quality that delights and captivates. A Tone Liberator, a Patent Muffler, which, when put into operation, produces the softest tone possible, and enables the performer to practice at any hour of the day or night, without disturbing any one in the house or neighbourhood and a Metallic Key-board Support, are special features of these instruments. If this instrument is not sold within a few days after the concert, it will be returned to the show rooms on Yonge street, Toronto.

Trent Valley Canal.

—)o(—

A CHANCE FOR THE PUBLIC AS WELL AS THE CONTRACTORS TO MAKE MONEY.

—)o(—

A SUIT OF CLOTHES AND A NEW DRESS

THE PRIZES.

—)o(—

In order to stimulate public interest in the Trent Valley Canal, and also to get at some idea of the public feeling in reference to the date of completion of this important local public work, which has been hung up before the eyes of the public for the past half century; and which to the eyes of the Government seems to assume a vastly increased importance just previous to an election, the EXAMINER offers the following prizes as an inducement to some of our expert mathematical and logarathmic specialists to exercise their estimating powers.

In order to furnish calculators with some data to assist them, it may be mentioned that Sir Charles Tupper in 1882 stated in Peterborough that the work would be proceeded with as rapidly as the finances of the country would permit, and that in 1890, on the eve of the election, the late Sir John A. Macdonald telegraphed to Mr. Jas. Stevenson the day before the election, to the effect that the commission having reported in favour of the feasibility of the canal, the work would at once be proceeded with.

On the night of the election in the opera house, Mr. Stevenson, in expressing his unbounded faith in the bona fides of this telegram and of the government's intentions generally, said, that if the following summer (1891) there were not a thousand men at work on the Peterborough-Lakefield section he would resign his seat. Mr. Stevenson, not having resigned his seat it is to be inferred that there is some underground canal work going on, and the operators will work upwards and meet the new contractors as they work downward.

The EXAMINER makes this proposition out of consideration for those who are standing around idle, in order that they may form some idea of the time when, on the completion of the canal, they may expect to look for another job.

Any person sending in to the EXAMINER five of the following coupons, containing their estimate of the time when they think the sections will be completed, will have a chance to compete for the following valuable prizes:

To the lady making the nearest average estimate, A NEW DRESS.

To the gentleman making the nearest average estimate, A NEW SUIT OF CLOTHES.

No estimate considered unless accompanied with five of the following coupons, which will be printed in the DAILY EXAMINER, every day this week, and in the weekly for two weeks. Readers of the latter who may not procure complete copies of the daily may use their weekly coupons to make up the required number:

TRENT VALLEY CANAL COUPON.

I estimate that the Simcoe and Balsam Lake division of the Trent Valley Canal, (54 miles) will be completed and accepted as finished, by the Government, on

TWO MORE NOVEMBER WEDDINGS.

The Doris-Maher and Bain-Lane Nuptials in the Cathedral This Morning.

DORIS-MAHER.

A quiet wedding took place this morning in St. Peter's Cathedral. The contracting parties were Miss Jo Maher, daughter of Mr. Dennis Maher, and Mr. P. J. Doris. Rev. Father Collins performed the ceremony.

The bride was prettily attired in a bluette Henrietta gown trimmed with point lace, and carried a bouquet of roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Maher, cousin of the bride, was attired in a handsome shade of brown Henrietta and the bride's travelling suit was of blue serge. Mr. Doris was assisted by Mr. Joseph Begley, and at the conclusion of the ceremony the the wedding party adjourned to the residence of the bride's parents where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served.

As an evidence of the groom's popularity, it may be mentioned that last evening he was the recipient of two presentations. A number of his friends assembled at the City Hotel and gave him a handsome clock as a wedding gift, and the boarders of the Balmoral Hotel presented him with a very handsome lamp.

Mr. Jas. McGill, on behalf of the Balmoral, read the following address :—

P. G. Doris, Esq.:

DEAR SIR,—We, your fellow boarders at the Balmoral Hotel, accept the opportunity offered on this evening, when you are about to accept the responsibilities of a benedict, to wish you and the young lady, who is to join you as partner for life, all happiness and success. You have a good heart and possess many amiable qualities that have won our esteem, and we know that as a married man, you will be a model husband and yours a happy home.

To yourself and your intended we extend the heartiest well wishes and as a mark of these good wishes, ask you to accept this accompanying parlour lamp.

On behalf of them with whom you have met for the past two years, as a fellow boarder at the Balmoral.

The newly married couple left at midday for a trip Eastward.

BAIN-LANE.

Rev. Father Scollard performed the marriage ceremony between Mr. John Bain and Miss Lizzie Lane, daughter of Mr. John Lane, Auburn, at day break this morning in the Cathedral.

The bride was most becomingly attired in a travelling suit of brown serge, trimmed with bluette, with hat to match. Miss Burke performed the office of bridesmaid. The groom was assisted by Mr. Thos. Lane, brother of the bride, and after partaking of a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bain left by the early train on a bridal trip.

Among the many handsome presents received was a beautiful Louis XIV clock, presented by the employees of the Auburn Mills, among whom the groom was a great favourite, and a very handsome dinner and tea service by the staff of P. Simons & Co.

SOMETHING MORE OF JOHNSTON

This Young Couple Were Married in Peterborough.

Some weeks ago Harry Johnston, an erstwhile dentist student of Port Hope, was brought before Judge Benson in the County Judge's Criminal Court on a charge of having neglected to support his wife, nee Miss Maybee, of the township of Hamilton. An affecting reconciliation took place in the court room, and Johnston was allowed his freedom on consenting to take care of his wife and family. Mrs. Johnston had succeeded in saving $17 and with this sum the re-united couple left for Toronto where they put up at an hotel. When the $17 became exhausted, Johnston went out to look for a boarding house, but like the historical cat, never came back. Mrs. Johnston was left in the lurch and has not yet seen her unrepentant husband. In the meantime the police are looking for him. He seems to be a heartless scoundrel who should spend the rest of his days behind the bars.—Sentinal Star. It will be remembered that the wedding of these two young people occurred in Peterborough. Quite a sensation was caused at the time by the denouement. Both have friends in town and are well known here.

SALVATION ARMY NOTES.

The Week of Self Denial Begins on Dec. 1st.

The Salvation Army is preparing for their annual self denial week, which will be celebrated throughout the Dominion of Canada, from December 1st to 8th, inclusive.

The proceeds, which have been raised in other years through this concentrated effort, has been a remarkable testimony to the Army's development and activity. Every member of the Army, as well as the numerous friends of its institutions, are asked to abstain from some or all luxuries, and in some cases, officers and soldiers have determined to do without even such expenditure as is ordinarily considered necessary in order to raise funds to support the Salvation Army in its many different branches. The social operations, especially, have been greatly developed during the last twelve months, and, as a natural consequence, the demands upon the funds of the Army have increased, which will require greater efforts to raise an increased amount during this self-denial week. The total amount aimed for is $23,000. The local corps raised the sum of $123.40 last year, during the week of self denial, and this year will endeavour to increase the sum to $250.

WILLIAMS' CASE.

All Good Pennsylvanians Rejoice Exceedingly Over It.

Bradford, Pa., Nov. 27.—The Buffalo alien labour crank, DeBarry, thinks that nothing good comes from Canada. He should have a talk with Mary E. Williams of this city. Then he will make an exception in favour of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Her case was considered by local practitioners as incurable, and yet three boxes of this wonderful remedy effected a perfect and permanent cure. She suffered from diabetes for many months and could get no relief, much less a cure, until she used Dodd's Kidney Pills, and these made her well.

NEGLECTED CHILDREN.

Acting on the suggestions of persons in this Province who are prominently identified with child rescue work, Hon. Mr. Gibson, Provincial Secretary, is at present on a visit to the States of Massachusetts and New York, conducting a personal investigation of the systems of those states with reference to the care and treatment of neglected or dependent children. The Massachusetts system is perhaps more nearly akin than that of any other state to the system of our own province, and is said in addition to possess some admirable institutions for dealing with juvenile offenders, such as the Lyman or Westborough Reformatory School for Boys and the Lancaster Reformatory School for Girls. These and other institutions in the State will be visited by the Provincial Secretary, and, in fact, the whole system of dealing with neglected children and juvenile offenders carefully looked into. Mr. Gibson will afterwards visit New York, and continue his investigations. The suggestion has also been made that he should personally examine the Michigan system, and this he will probably do at some future time. The method adopted in that State, though an admirable one in many respects, differs from that of this Province, and is carried on at a very much greater expense to the Government, and it is doubtful whether in the end the results are better, or so good. As the author and administrator of the "act for the prevention of cruelty to and better protection of children," as well as from his position as Minister in charge of the juvenile reformatories, it is well known that Mr. Gibson takes a deep interest in this unfortunate class of our population, and is thoroughly familiar with our own operations with respect to the reclaiming and reformation of children. His present inquiries will enable him to see for himself just what are the advantages and defects of other systems, and this Province may expect to profit by the adoption of what is good in them.

FRUIT BUDS.

Doesn't your orchard want manuring?

For apples and pears autumn planting is good enough.

Albinos or white spots among huckleberries and blackberries are hardly rare enough to deserve much fuss to be made over them.

The complaints of the authorities about sine found in America dried apples, seems to be "much ado about nothing."

The English walnut may be a semi-tropical fruit, and not entirely hardy But it flourishes and bears well in protected spots, especially in the the suburbs of cities, as far north as western New York and lower Canada.

Corn stalks cut in pieces two feet long (whole or split), set around the tree and tied top and bottom with willow or binder twine will stay on for three years, and protect the tree from sun-scald, borers, mice and rabbits. At least this is what one of our contemporaries says.

SOCIETY'S WAYS.

Ringlets for women and whiskers for men are announced as among the fashionable possibilities of London's near future.

The stovepipe hat is shaking on its pedestal. It began to disappear in the circles of British business. The great heat in London has worked a revolution.

Fashions may come, and fashions may go, but the diamond furor abates not. The sparkling little stone holds its fascination as of yore, and maintains its high value.

In Austrian society it is the custom to take a partner for only one round of a dance. By this means ladies and gentlemen change partners five or six times in a single dance.

To be photographed while you doze in a corner of your pew at church is one of the latest terrors. The kodak has made its way into the pulpit. An Irish clergyman the other Sunday during the service took a snap shot of his congregation.

A Child Enjoys

The pleasant flavour, gentle action and soothing effects of Syrup of Figs, when in need of a laxative, and if the father or mother be costive or bilious, the most gratifying results follow its use; so that it is the best family remedy known, and every family should have a bottle on hand.

Norway Pine Syrup cures coughs, colds, hoarseness, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis etc.

Apples! Apples!

Organs and Pianos.

Messrs. Jackson & Co. have a number of second hand organs and pianos from $50.00 up, which they are anxious to clear out, in order to make room for their Christmas goods. Easy payment. Terms to suit buyers. Organs and pianos to rent. Show rooms and factory 378 Aylmer street.

Not Guilty.

Last night yesterday morning about two o'clock in the afternoon, before breakfast time, a hungry boy appeared before the beak charged with having in his possession a pair of five dollar pants bought in the usual way. He cleared himself by producing a receipt from W. J. Green, Hunter street, who is selling $5.00 pants for $3.00. Come thou and do likewise—that is, buy the pants.

Protect your Horses.

Don't allow your valuable horses to go without a waterproof cover during the cold wet days of the fall. Be good to them, provide them with one of Kingscotte's strictly waterproof covers, costing only a dollar or two. If you are shipping and receiving goods that are liable to damage from wet, Kingscotte's black oiled canvas waterproof covers "fills the bill,"—nothing better or cheaper. They have no tar in their composition, being an OIL preparation, which keeps them soft and pliable. Awnings taken down and stored in a careful and agreeable manner. Halls decorated for assemblies, balls and meetings of all kinds. ALF. KINGSCOTTE, tent, sail and awning maker, 344 Water street.

WILL BEGIN ON SATURDAY.

On Saturday, Nov. 24th, the sale of the China Hall stock will begin, and continue for two weeks—or until the whole stock has been disposed of. The goods have been reduced from 25 to 50 per cent., and in some cases 75 per cent., so there will be big bargains for everyone. Dinner, Tea and Chamber Sets, Silver Ware, Lamp Goods, Ornaments, etc., at prices that cannot be repeated again. Buy now for Christmas. China Hall and Silver Bazaar, Saturday, Nov. 24th.

A "Cold" Day!

You caught a cold last week—one of those long, lingering sorts of colds that's sneezy thing to get. Everybody you knew, and some people whom you had never been introduced to, told you what to take, and the more you took the more cold you took. Finally you went to see a doctor. He felt your pulse, told you to hold out your tongue, which felt like an all wool blanket, and advised you to drink plenty of COLD WATER, take two grains of quinine every two hours—and wear a good warm Overcoat. "Two dollars, please," said the doctor, and as you paid him like a little man, you made up your mind that if you had bought an Overcoat when you should, you would have saved your two dollars, the quinine, and wouldn't have to drink so much COLD WATER.

We Will Back Our Overcoats

Against any Others in Canada

for saving doctors' bills, and you couldn't have better advice than to get into one of GOUGH'S tip-top Overcoats FORTHWITH.

Buy a $4.00 one if you can't afford a better one, as that may save a five dollar doctor's bill. Buy an All-Wool $10 one for $6 50 if you want a better one—or if you want a heap o style for your money, we've got the extreme styles at from $12 to $15.

is what you need when your liver becomes inactive. It's what you get when you take Dr. Pierce's Pellets; they're free from the violence and the griping that come with the ordinary pill. All medical authorities agree that in regulating the bowels mild methods are preferable. For every trouble of the liver, stomach and bowels, these tiny, sugar-coated pills are most effective. They go about their work in an easy and natural way, and their good lasts — they strengthen and tone up the lining membranes of the stomach and bowels, thereby promoting digestion. Sick and Bilious Headache, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, Dizziness, are prevented, relieved, and permanently cured. They're the cheapest pill for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction or your money is returned.

THE SILVER SIREN.

As I watched her,—watched that startled look, with which the unknown mysteries of a winter night on the plains of Russia spoke to her, I tried to analyze the quality of her beauty. The word "elusive" constantly came to me, as expressive of the character of her charm. Beauty seemed to animate the face from the depths of her blue-grey eyes, and then when I had fixed the home of her attraction there, some witching movement of the mouth—a smile which chased from their hiding in the soft contour of her cheeks and lips a rippling gambol of dimples, would change my mind, and then I would give to the mouth the definite note of beauty which struck the first harmony of the whole.

Thus I watched her, while the old count twaddled on about mints and mines, and the liveried yamschik and footmen of his excellency pierced the night, every now and then, with their strident Russian cries of endearment to the fleet horses that carried us swiftly over the snow. Presently the old count began to nod, but the young countess kept an alert eye upon the passing interests of the night.

The road grew more irregular now, and was broken up in great ukhabs or deep furrows, causing us to sway, every now and then, like a sloop at sea. It was during these tortuous movements that I began to watch for the radiating smile of the Countess Stephanie, while the count, rudely jostled from his dozing dreams, would scold his yamschik in a volley of expressive Russian. When this attack became violent, the Countess Stephanie would slip her hand from her sable muff, and caress her father's arm, till the vituperative anger of the count would cease, or merge into some qualifying correction. It was sweet to see the silent influence of the girl, and one felt that she took the part of that poor servant, whose cringing phrases showed how cruel his training had been, enabling him to accept with patience reprimands which he did not deserve.

The snow had ceased. It had only lasted long enough to veil the trees and decorate with a soft, cloud-like delicacy, the panorama of the night. The intense stillness recalled to one dreams of a primeval age. The very heart beats of Pan seemed suspended. The sounds which we associate with man's inheritance of the earth seemed a strange suggestion in that hour. So far have we become removed from the actual reserve of nature that the natural seemed supernatural, and the hush which pervaded all was like a palpable incantation breathed upon the earth by some mighty spirit of the air, which held the night subservient to her will.

We had entered a thick pine forest. The trees, those voiceful children of the woods, were held in an icy calm. If architecture be indeed frozen music, the brush seemed put in abstract form before us. The branches and vertical lines made cathedral and vista aisles under their moulding of ice and snow. Sometimes whole processions of cowled monks seemed to be lining our route, or spectral arms, stretched outward from the gloom, beckoned us to the murky mystery of the dark forest. Those soft thuds of snow which fell when the top of our kibitka touched the edge of some protruding pine branch, fell behind us like ghostly steps trying to escape their thraldom to the midnight by following our lead to life and light.

But no wierd influences of the night seemed to approach the consciousness of the young countess. As I looked at her that song of Heine's seemed written for her, "Thou art like a lovely floweret!" All but peace and purity seemed separated from her.

The count moved uneasily in his seat. The sledge made a sudden lunge, as it heaved through one of the transverse ruts, and our near horse (we were driving three abreast) gave an ugly tug at the traces, as he swayed outward from his place. The count, now fully awake, cried out: "Ivan Ivanovitch, are you forgetting whom you are driving!"

"No, gracious excellency," the man replied, "but his lordship's horse, Petrovitch is restive."

Almost at the instant, the horse gave a second pull, which was so violent that the whole kibitka was jerked aslant.

"Something is out of gear with the harness!" called the count, "let one of the grooms see to it."

The two footmen were half asleep, and I could hear Ivan muttering to them, while he was bringing the sledge to less rapid motion.

Suddenly there was a cry, piercing and petulant, like a peevish child's—a cry which made my blood curdle in my veins. I glanced at the Countess Stephanie and saw her face blanch, as she shrank into the corner of the sledge. The count sprang to his feet and the awful word was spoken;

"Wolves!"

In an instant the horses, having heard that cry, felt some subtle sense of fright which hastened their speed. The count unlocked his pistol case. I noticed that he was calm and that he fitted the key into the lock with accuracy.

"Are you armed?" he asked me. I drew my pistol from my pocket, as he spoke.

"I have never heard of the brutes coming so far south at this season," he said. Then he turned to the countess. "Be very calm, my daughter," he said, "your father will defend you."

"I'm not afraid" was the proud reply, though her voice was thick and her lips trembled. The count turned quickly and cut the straps which held the closed opening at the back of the sleigh.

"Crouch down, my child," he said to the Countess Stephanie; "crouch down in the bottom of the sledge and cover your head with this rug. May heaven shield thee!"

All the concentrated love of paternity was in his voice.

"Itsik, you—are your pistols ready?" he said next.

"Ready, excellency," was the reply.

The count and I peered into the darkness through the opening of the sleigh. Behind us there appeared a movement like a rolling cloud, resembling dust seen at night.

"They are upon us!" the count exclaimed and fired. As I imitated him I heard the countess give a little stifled scream. On came the moving column, and the cries of angry, ravening mouths filled the air with a deep and ominous rumble.

How they were gaining on us! Ivan Ivanovitch was yelling to his horses, and they, brave creatures, strained every nerve and muscle to obey his commands. A sudden awful thought passed through me. What if there were something really wrong with the harness! How long could any mal-adjustment stand this strain?

Somewhere from the recesses of memory came the recollection of a story I had once read, of hunting wolves in a battue in Russia, and that it was stated there that unaccustomed and peculiar sounds had a terrifying effect upon these beasts—even that a clatter of pans could accomplish what pistols failed to do. Again I fired into that approaching mass of yelping horror. As my hand resumed its position after doing so, it touched the cold surface of the little silver siren which hung upon my watch chain.

Instantly it flashed upon me to try its effect upon this pack of hungry wolves. I put it to my lips, and with all the strength of my lungs forced that weird crescendo note into the icy night. A writhing serpent of the air was that python of sound, which struck its piercing sting into the frightened hearts of those wild beasts.

The younger countess fainted dead away. The horses gained electric fear from what they thought was some new terror in pursuit, but best of all—miracle as it has ever seemed—that pack of angry wolves, with a bellowing howl of fear, tumbled pell-mell into the black depths of the forest and disappeared like a column of smoke whose force is spent!

As they did so, Ivan Ivanovitch cried out that the lights of Riga were in sight, and we were saved!

* * * * *

A year later I was again in Regent street, but not alone nor defeated nor depressed, for Stephanie was there!

I was showing her the shop where I had bought the silver siren.

"Now take me, dearest, to the place where you bought my wedding ring," she said. "Did you not say that that was near Bond street?"

"Yes, near Bond, Stephanie;" I began, but this has nothing to do with the story of the silver siren, which has now been told.

Rheumatism is primarily caused by acidity of the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, and thus cures the disease.

A Terrible Experience:

Mr. Geo. Tribe, of Straffordville, Ont. a pretty village near the shores of Lake Erie, went through an experience lately that he will never forget. He tells it in his own words:

"For three years I suffered from skin disease in its worst form. I tried Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura remedies, and doctored one year with the best physicians in the land, but got no benefit; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but failed to remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard, white scales; the itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. I can truly say I owe my good health to B. B. B., and I advise all sufferers to use this splendid medicine.

THE TYPHOON.

It Blows in China Seas and is Dreaded by Mariners.

"The worst storms," said the captain of a tramp steamship the other day, "are the typhoons of the Chinese seas. They cover a large area, are uncertain in their movements and follow each other quickly. The typhoon season is on just now. And I see that one reason the Japanese and Chinese war fleets are anxious to stay at home is because they are afraid of the big storms.

"The first signs of the storm are light, cirrus clouds coming from the east, with hot, dry weather, light winds and a slight rise in the barometer. This fine weather lasts for several days.

"There are usually halos to be seen round the sun by day and around the moon by night, while the phosphorescence of the sea becomes suddenly increased; the sunsets and sunrises become gloriously colored with crimson, gold and amber, and the twilight rays are beautiful beyond description.

"Then at a distance of about 500 miles from the center activity of the typhoon, heavy swells begin to heave the surface of the ocean. A heavy swell in the China sea is a certain indication of a distant typhoon.

"Then the cirrus clouds begin to be replaced gradually by heavy masses of cumulus, and where the blue sky is visible between it is seen to be streaked by faint dashes of pale cirrus clouds.

"Next the temperature begins to fall and this air becomes oppressive from increasing dampness. During the early hours of the morning a slight haze is noticed and the sky presents a vaporous appearance.

"At this stage of a typhoon's growth the animal world, including human beings, is seen to be strangely affected. Numerous writers have very graphically described the ominous terror of some animals and the nervous excitement of others, while the overpowering sense in the human mind of foreboding, presentiment and coming danger is in many cases little short of absolute terror.

"The weather is depressing and many people find it impossible to sleep. All sorts of vermin, including snakes, spiders, beetles, frogs and typhoon flies, become unusually active The larger animals, such as horses, cattle and dogs, show all the signs of nervous terror that may be noticed in a very heavy thunderstorm in western lands.

"There is no thunder with a typhoon, though the sound of the wind may be often mistaken for it. The air becomes very dry, and the wind blows in sudden, short and terrific squalls, lasting perhaps 6 to 10 minutes. The sky is black and threatening, and has a peculiar ominous appearance.

"Among the rigging of a ship caught in a typhoon the sea birds as well as butterflies, birds and insects from the land may be seen. The surface of the sea presents the appearance of boiling water, due to the seething foam and the crests of the huge waves lashed into fury by the force of the wind."—New York Sun.

Archæological Research.

Archæological excavations in Greece are being enthusiastically carried on by the American and German schools and the Archæological School of Athens. At Delphi the excavations are progressing very favorably on the site of the temple of Apollo, the foundations of which have partly been laid bare, as also a part of the peribolos or sacred enclosure leading up to the sanctuary. Carved lion-head capitals of columns, the pedestal of the statue of victory, erected by Gelon of Syracuse to commemorate his victory at Himera on the day of Salamis, together with many inscriptions, relief carvings, and further fragments of the hymn to Apollo discovered last autumn, are among the recent finds. At Epidaurus excavations by the Athens Archæological Society have uncovered the ancient stadium or race-course with its rows of marble chairs, each with its inscription. The stanium is the first yet discovered in its original state. At Athens, also, Professor Dorpfeld will soon resume his excavations between Mars Hill and the Pnyx, and to facilitate explorations the Greek Government has declared the whole region from the Thesion to the monument of Lysikrates "archæological grounds," which can thus be expropriated to archæological purposes on the payment of comparatively small fees.—The Interior.

Old Age and Hard Work.

Old people make a great mistake when they give up work. Many men who have made a competency in business and feel entitled to retire from active work find themselves declining in health and becoming prematurely old for want of occupation. In most aged persons the vital functions continue in active exercise under normal conditions, but if the regularity and moderation of business life are departed from trouble will surely follow. On the other hand, The Lancet held that "if in any direction it is allowable for competitors in the race of life to dispense with self-control it would appear that they may, to a great extent, use this liberty with respect to physical and mental exertion." In other words, we must not eat too much or drink too much, but we can study hard and take plenty of exercise not only without harm, but with the best results, and if the old people wish to live out all the days they should find plenty to do for both mind and body.—London Lancet.

GOWNS THAT COST $100 EACH.

Those Worn on Official Occasions by Justices of the Supreme Court.

A justice pays as much for his robe of office as he would pay for a very handsome suit of clothing, says the Washington Star. There is a fixed price for the gown—a price which does not vary with the fluctuations in the duties on silk. One woman has made all the justices' gowns for forty years, and her invariable price for one is $100. Like the tailors who make a specialty of outfits for officers of the army and navy, she knows just what are the requirements of a justice's gown, and all that her customer has to be concerned about is the fit. The gown must set well across the shoulders, and it should reach from the neck to the heels; but it should not drag on the floor. I say floor, because, except on inauguration day, the justice does not wear his gown out of doors. When he attends an official dinner or reception at the White House, he wears the garb of every day life; even when he calls on the President on the opening day of the court's session, he goes in the clothes he would wear at the breakfast table. If you visited one of the justices at his home of an evening, you would find a pleasant, rather offhanded man, in a frock coat with none of the solemnity of manners that cloaks the justices when they are on the bench. The supreme court justices are by no means unapproachable. They are, in fact, considered very jolly after dinner companions and they are in great demand in social Washington. The justice wears his robe only when the supreme court, as a body, is participating in some official ceremony. He may go gowned to a funeral, if it is an official funeral. He wears it at the inauguration of a president, but ordinarily he puts it on in the robing-room in the morning and takes it off in the robing-room at dusk. He does not wear it even in the consulting-room, so there is very little wear and tear on it, and one robe will outlast several suit of clothing.

According to the technical description of it, the judge's robe is made of large, straight widths of silk. It is three and a quarter yards wide at the bottom. It has a narrow hem around the bottom and a broad hem down the front. It is gauged at the top to a yoke, which is short on the shoulders and forms a deep scallop at the back. The flowing sleeves are a yard and a quarter wide and reach to the wrist. A justice usually accepts his first gown without question; but as he grows a little older on the bench he is as fussy about the fit of the garment as a young woman with her first ball dress. Having donned their robes with the aid of the old attendants—and they are old enough to be conspicuous even in this city of long service—the justices, at a few minutes before noon, cross the hall to the ante-room of the court. The transit of the justices is a matter of daily interest and wonder to the visitors at the capitol. It is the signal for a raid—a very subdued, dignified raid—on the door of the courtroom, where a doorkeeper sits, solemnly manipulating the swinging door with a cord. Only so many people are admitted to the courtroom, and the number is small. There are but a few rows of benches outside the inclosure reserved for the members of the bar. No crowding of the courtroom is permitted.

The Price of a Kiss.

Kissing, as many people have found, is a comparative costly amusement; but few people have had to pay so highly for an attempted kiss as an unlucky doctor of the Madras civil service. This gentleman was driving in a dog cart with another gentleman's wife, and so far forgot himself, under the influence of the lady's charms, as to ask her for a kiss. In some reprehensible cases of this sort of indulgence has been taken first and permission asked afterwards; but we are glad to know that the Madras civil surgeon did not soar to such heights of wickedness as that. At any rate, when he asked leave to kiss her, the lady very properly refused. Smitten by remorse, the erring doctor wrote a letter of apology to the wife; the wife laid the letter before her husband; the husband laid it before the Madras Government; and the Madras Government called on the doctor to resign. All the clemency they could show him was to allow him to remain in the service a few months longer so as to qualify for the lowest grade of pension. Who shall say that the Indian Government is not a paternal ruler? Or that we do not govern the licentious East on the principles of the highest British morality? Still, it does seem hard on a man to lose his profession, prospects, and career for the sake of a kiss, especially when he hasn't even got the kiss.—St. James' Gazette.

Jogging His Memory.

The good-natured but absent-minded Professor chides his neglectful servant: "Three weeks ago I told you to remind me every day I needed to buy a notebook. Hereafter I only ask you to remind me of it every eight days."—Fliegende Blaetter.

The Envious Sex.

One night at a concert ball in the Tuileries Napoleon III. was so attentive to a beautiful young woman as to excite commemt among the other women. At last in response to a direct tribute to her beauty she said:

"Ah, but your majesty compliments me too much."

"How remarkable," he replied with a twinkle in his eye, "that you should say just what every other woman here is thinking.

THE Y. P. S. CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR RALLY.

GEORGE STREET CHURCH THE RENDEZVOUS.

The Young People of the Different Churches who Belong to the Organization Assemble and Spend an Evening in Listening to Most Instructive Addresses.

The different societies of town, with many of their friends, assembled together in the Sunday school room of the George street Methodist church last night, filling the room to its utmost capacity. The programme differed considerably from the rallies heretofore held in town, in the respect of addresses. At a meeting of the county executive held early in the fall it was decided to hold a series of rallies throughout the county, to take up subjects of deep interest, not only to Endeavourers, but to all Christian workers. The subjects presented were "Christian Citizenship," "Missions and systematic giving," and "The Junior Societies, their place and usefulness." And two of these subjects were discussed last night. Below are given just suggested in the addresses.

The meeting was opened by singing "All hail the power of Jesus name," after which the Rev. Mr. Trotter offered prayer. Rev. Mr. Young presided, and after extending, on behalf of the George street society, a hearty welcome to all, and some pointed remarks pertaining to the work of the society, he introduced the first speaker of the evening, Miss Kennedy, of Coldsprings, her subject being the "Responsibility of senior societies to the juniors." She asked them the question, "Why should they be interested in the children?" First, Because childhood is the impressionable age. Second—Because Christ was interested in them, and they should not, only for His sake, be interested, but the boys and girls of to-day were to be the men and women of the future. They were to be the heads of families, to fill seats in parliament, and what was sadder if the saloon ages they must surely take their place there. She showed that their example had a great deal to do in the moulding of the characters of the juniors. They could not afford to treat their respective duties lightly. The eye of the junior was ever on them—in the Sunday school in their homes, in their senior societies. Children learn a great deal more than they give them credit for. So their standard should be high, their walk circumspect, that the children in following their example would not stumble. Then as seniors they should show sympathy towards the children. Always wear a smile for them, encourage them in their work, get them some work to do to assist the senior society, let them come into their meetings once in a while, that they may grow up side by side with that one standard ever before them, the Bible and Christ. She did not think it advisable for visitors to come to every junior meeting, but for the superintendents to have an open meeting once a month and invite parents and friends of the children to be present at this meeting.

HER LAST APPEAL

was for them to awaken to the interests of the children.

Rev. A. MacWilliams then gave an interesting and profitable address on "The relation of the Sunday school to the Junior C.E." Many people do not realize the value of the junior society, especially the parents. They think it is not necessary, being merely another branch of the Sunday school. The distinctive feature of the Sunday school is teaching. Children are sent there to be taught God's Word. We have many helps in this work. We have definite subjects to study there. Then again the Sunday school is well adapted for teaching, owing to the class arrangements. The school thus nobly fills a necessary place. But the junior society takes the scholar still farther—he is there taught to apply the truths taught in the Sunday school. But the junior society is a teaching institution as well as the Sunday School. We have our stated topics and on these some excellent papers are brought out. The little ones are sometimes better prepared for the topics than the seniors are, thus showing home study on their part. They get an excellent idea of God's word being thoroughly drilled in it.

It is thus a grand teaching institution, some of the parents say there is better work being done in the Junior Society than in the S. S., and yet the school should be superior in that direction. But the Juniour Society is most successful in its practical work. God's word teaches us to pray. When we hear these Juniors pray we bow our heads in reverence and wonder at the development of this talent. The same is the case when they

READ FROM GOD'S WORD.

These gifts are put into practice now and thus they will become practical men and women in church work in the future. The Committee work is also good for them. Under the Missionary Committee they study Missionary News—they learn to save money and give it for missionary work. The Social Committee devolops the social part of their lives. The Temperance and the Visiting Committees put into practice what God's word teaches.

The speaker again emphasized the difference between the S. S. and Junior Society, the one teaches the other practices. What good is it if we know much of God's word but do not know how to use it. It is one thing to know a thing but another to know how to us it. Divine principles should always be put into practice not kept in the head. We are teaching our Juniors

TO PRAY IN PUBLIC.

In our prayer meetings and even senior society meetings it is sad to see so few take part in prayer, but this will not be so in the future. The old people now say that they were not taught to do so in their youth, but they are glad that the children of to-day are not thus being neglected. Youth is the time to put these principles into practice. Let us take the children in their innocency and purity and mould them in the right way. Then our homes, our Sunday schools, our senior societies and our churches will soon realize the benefits of the junior. When we pass away, the teachings we are giving to the juniors will not have been lost, but will bear fruit in

of our land.

Rev. J. J. Rae gave a splendid address on "Good Citizenship." He opened with the question "what is a citizen?" Any person, native or naturalized, who has the right of the country's protection. What is a Christian citizen? One who puts the teaching of God's Word into practical every day life. An ordinary citizen does not care to think of eternal things. He rarely looks beyond the present results. His looks are downward rather than upward for the present, rather than for the future. He does not recognize God in human affairs. God is all right in the church, the Sunday school, the home, for mothers and for men (when at home.) But in the regular affairs of the world, God is not wanted. The citizen says to the church—keep God in his place. We do not want him in worldly affairs. This kind of a citizen looks

ONLY TO HUMAN FORCE;

if Governments can't stop intemperance, social evils, etc., what more can we do about it? Let things go on as they are—we can't stop them. They say the purification of politics is a dream, the Golden Rule and the Decalogue have no place in practical politics. Men have tried to stop these things and failed. If human nature cannot do it why should we look elsewhere? Politicians don't ask "Is it right?" but "Will it take? will it draw votes?" If it will, that is all that is wanted.

They don't ask in their candidate "Is he a good man?" but "Will he lead our party to victory?" If he will he is

THE MAN FOR US!

Good principles may go down but the party flag must wave.

Another cry is, Silence. Preachers may preach, they may use their pulpits, but don't touch social evils, don't speak roughly about corruption among the ruling powers. These things only cause hard feelings in the town, please don't deal with them. Keep in the old ruts, let us alone—this is what the evil citizen says.

The saloon keeper says, "Endeavourers, you go on and talk in you meetings, don't do any more. Don't interfere with our rights or our prey. You may try and reform the 'old soaks,' but keep still as far as we are concerned. You will only have the down on you—just keep still. And you women, don't take too much interest in men's affairs, just keep quiet in your homes, don't organize against us, keep silence.

Shall we, as Christians, let things go on as they are? Many of our leaders are really elected and appointed to offices by enemies of God and the right. To have good citizens we must recognize the Lord God of nations as having higher powers than rulers and thrones. We shall never have good citizens until we recognize

GOD AS OUR CHIEF.

We must look back over the history of nations to find that God guards His own people. We find there that somehow right prevails over might in the long run. Man must take God as his guide, teaching him the right way—teaching him that he is responsible to God. Man must recognize God's law as sufficient to solve the problems of the ages.

We may talk as we will about the power of the ballot, but what we want is more Bibles. Some people say we have plenty of Bibles. But do we use them enough. We want to make it the rule of our life.

The men and women who are filled with the word are of power in our land. If we will move the world to-day it will be when God's truth is lived and loved by his people.

Man acts in this life as the agent of God. We should go forth as ambassadors of God to solve the problems that trouble us now.

We need men and women who, touched by the Holy Ghost, will live as bright lights in the world, showing men the way heavenward. Men are needed who cannot be bought; true men, pure men. We want men who feel that they are Christ's representatives. We need Christ's power to-day in men's hearts and lives. With better material do all things. We want nobler, better Christian citizens.

Let us have God and truth over us and in us, and then his power will circle all things, then evil will go down and God's power be made manifest. We know not what the future has in store, but no work done for him shall be fruitless. Endeavourers be good men and women, lift up the right, dare to work for God. Struggling brings us higher, fight on, fight nobly. In the name of the Lord of Hosts let us be good citizens.

Rev. Dr. Torrance was to have spoken on "Missions and Systematic Giving," but owing to the lateness of the hour he deferred his remarks until a future meeting.

After the collection, Rev. Mr. Young on behalf of the Union thanked the Baptist Society for the fine music; he also thanked the speakers for their excellent addresses. After singing a hymn, Dr. Torrance pronounced the benediction. And thus closed the most successful Union Endeavour meeting held in Peterborough.

NOTES OF THE RALLY.

The musical portion of the programme was supplied by the Baptist Society, and some very acceptable numbers were presented. Two selections rendered by the boys of the choir were deeply interesting. A solo by Mrs. Dr. Hunter, and a quartette composed of Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Scott, Miss Hutchinson and Mr. Routley made up one of the finest musical programmes represented at a rally in town.

We have had the pleasure of hearing the Rev. Mr. Ray speak three times on the subject of "Good Citizenship," and every-time he gave new thoughts.

The Rev. Mr. Young said that it would be hard to distinguish the members of one denomination from the other on this occasion.

At all Christian Rallies it is customary for Endeavourers to take notes of points scored that might be useful to them in the future. Last night when the chairman said that the meeting would proceed when the conversation thus being carried on by pencil and paper was discontinued. This was a set back to Endeavourers because they had to pocket note book to avoid suspicion.

The local junior societies will rally in the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, an excellent programme has been prepared, and all who attend may expect a treat. The gallery has been reserved for visitors. There is plenty of room, so parents and all interested in the Juniors should attend.

What a Wonderful Discovery is Perry Davis' PAIN-KILLER! It not only cures the ills of the human family, but is also the sure remedy for horses and cattle. It has never been known to fail in a cure of the worst cases of bowel complaint; and for sprains, gals, etc., it never fails—try it once. Directions accompany each bottle. Sold by druggists generally for 25c. a bottle.

Catarrhal Deafness.

Deafness or dull hearing follows catarrh, colds, etc. Hagyard's Yellow Oil cures even the worst cases in a few applications.

The Lacos Committed for Trial.

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—At the investigation into the baby farming case yesterday Inspector Armstrong described the Lace premises on Gladstone avenue as being in a filthy condition. Mrs. McLaren, nurse at the Children's Shelter, said the infant was emaciated and the skin entirely off its body from the middle of its back to its toes. It was in a stupor as if drugged. Dr. Harrington said that death was caused by starvation, but whether this was due to organic trouble or neglect he could not be positive. However, he could find no trace of any organic trouble. Lace and his wife were committed for trial on a charge of manslaughter of an infant called Thomas.

London Personation Case.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 27.—The unknown man charged with personation in the recent election came up at the police court yesterday. Magistrate Parke considered the evidence insufficient to send him for trial for personating Wm. Turner, and a charge of perjury in the same case, preferred by Mayor Essery, was also dropped, despite the latter's vigorous protests. Another charge of impersonating William Dillon was enlarged for a week and bail fixed at $400. The young men arrested for the alleged kidnapping of Morkin were all bailed until Thursday.

Fined for Conspiracy.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—John B. Wood, vice-president and chief stockholder of the Holmes Electric Protective Company, was fined $50 or three months for conspiracy by Judge Hall, in the Court of Queen's bench. Clemency was asked by Mr. Grose, the private prosecutor, and his Honor remarked that as a civil suit for damages was now in progress in another court, the action being instituted by John A. Grose, he was willing to impose the lightest penalty known to the law.

Deer Hunting in New York State.

ALBANY, Nov. 27.—There is a prospect that a bill to prevent the hounding of deer will be introduced in the legislature this winter. Col. Fox, superintendent of the state forests, does not agree with those who fear that the deer may be killed off. He estimates that there are 25,000 deer in the Adirondacks, and that only about 1,800 are killed in a season. The deer multiply more rapidly than they have been shot, he thinks, and he points to the fact that they were never more plentiful than during the present season.

Petrel Makes Another Seizure.

AMHERSTBURG, Ont., Nov. 27.—The Canadian Government cruiser Petrel seized yesterday in Lake Erie, near Little Hen and Chickens Islands, 21 gill white fish nets with a quantity of fish and brought them to this port last night.

A Quebec Boy's Fatal Fall.

QUEBEC, Nov. 27.—A boy named Plante fell from the fortification wall while coasting in front of Montcalm market on Sunday, a height of 30 feet. He was picked up senseless and bleeding profusely. He died next morning.

Serious Charge Against a Toronto Man.

MONTREAL Nov. 27.—Andrew Rutherford, of Toronto, was charged in the Police Court with obtaining money under false pretences and forging Workmen's Steamship tickets. He was remanded until to-day for trial.

Editor Polstorff Released.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—Dr. Polstorff, who as an editor of Kladderdasch, got into trouble with Baron Kiderlen-Waechter and fought a duel with him, was pardoned by the Emperor yesterday and was released from the fortress confinement to which he was sentenced for duelling.

Collision Off Little Canso.

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—A report has been received here from Halifax that the British ship Forest King, from Sydney, C. B., November 15, bound to Berlin, was run down and sunk by a steamer off Little Canso. The crew of sixteen men were saved.

Sale of the Thousand Islands.

OTTAWA, Nov. 27.—A return to the department of the interior shows that the sale by tender this season of a number of the Thousand Islands group has resulted in the disposal of 186 islands of various sizes, aggregating 256 acres. The amount realized by the sale was $32,110, which is at the rate of about $127 an acre. During the fiscal year, 1893, islands in the St. Lawrence aggregating 107 acres were sold for $1,520, or less than $15 per acre.

West Huron Patrons.

GODERICH, Ont., Nov. 27.—A large and influential meeting of the Patrons of Industry for West Huron met in convention at Carlow to select a candidate to represent them at the next election for the Dominion House. Mr. David Forrester of Clinton was selected as their candidate.

Mrs. Harkies Out on Bail.

MONO MILLS, Ont., Nov. 27.—Mrs. Harkies is home again. It seems she has got bail for two weeks longer when she is to have another trial. At a preliminary investigation held here on Saturday night in connection with the affair, Mrs. Harkies was duly committed for trial.

London West's Dishonest Tax Collector.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 27.—The defalcations of John M. Lord, the runaway tax collector of London West, will aggregate at least $2,068. This is the fourth tax collector that has proven dishonest since the village was incorporated twenty years ago.

Barns and Contents Burned.

TILBURY CENTRE, Ont., Nov. 27.—The barns in connection with the Peltier hotel were burned with all their contents, including two horses. Loss about $1,200; insurance $300. Sparks were carried by the high wind to the barns of J. B. Marchand, a half mile distant, and they were burned to the ground. Loss about $3,000; insurance $2,000.

Valuable Horses Burned.

COLLINGWOOD, Ont., Nov. 27.—A fire broke out in the stables of the Central Hotel and destroyed the interior of the stable and burned to death seven horses, among which was the celebrated trotter Dolly C. Mr. Thos. Collins, owner of stable and horses, will lose about $1,500 by the fire; fairly covered by insurance.

Toronto's Aldermanic Investigation.

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—In connection with the aldermanic investigation now going on, there is a rumor on the streets to the effect that Mr. H. A. Everett has resigned his position on the directorate of the Street Railway Company, but Mr. McKenzie, the president, will neither deny or confirm this.

Lumber Fire on St. John River.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Nov. 27.—A fire around the wharves near W. B. Hayford's mill, three miles up St. John river, destroyed $6,000 worth of lumber. At one time it was feared the mill would be destroyed, but several tugboats came to the rescue and conquered the flames.

A Young Woman Charged With Fraud.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 27.—Lillian Galbraith, a young woman formerly of Thorold, now of Brantford, is under arrest, charged with obtaining money under false pretences. She represented herself as collector for the King's Daughters to assist an aged lady.

Prices will continue every day much below even Clearance Prices and your experience every day will prove that our VALUES are THE BEST in the Trade that you get more for your money here. That "the Ribbon is Ours."

"It's Fair's Way." We're all enthusiasm

Now for the Proof.

FOR INSTANCE—

TAKE MANTLES! There is no remnant energy in this department. Fair's is the people's Mantle House—

200 High-Class German Tailor-Made Mantles, ranging in price from $8 to $15 each, can be purchased now for $3.50, $5 and $8 each.

—240 yards Tweed Ulsterings, reduced from $1.50 to 75c.

TAKE SEALETTES! 30 per cent. reduction on Lister's celebrated Sealettes ought to convince skeptical readers that we have reduced in earnest. Here are the figures to prove it:

$13 00 per yard Sealette for	$9 00
11 00 per yard Sealette for	8 00
8 50 per yard Sealette for	6 00
6 50 per yard Sealette for	4 50
5 00 per yard Sealette for	3 00

TAKE FLANNELS! Surely these are things you need. What are the facts:

—40 pieces All Wool Grey Flannels, worth 20 and 25c., sale price 15c per yard.

—30 piece Flannelettes, worth 8c., for 5c. per yard.

TAKE UNDERWEAR!—There will be urgent need of heavier Underwear from this on. We have all the wanted kinds for men and women, but the whole secret lies in selling first-class quality at a second rate price. Look here for value:

Men's Knights of Labour All Wool Shirts and Drawers, worth 85c., sale price 65c.

—10 dozen Men's Natural Wool Shirts and Pants, worth $2.00, the garments clearing at $1.25 each.

—20 dozen Ladies' Undervests, worth $1.10 each, sale price 85c.

15 doz. All Wool Vests, former price 75c., sale price 65c.

TAKE DRESS GOODS! We want no "deume" the other fellows out who are crying Bargains under the ordinary conditions:

—50 pieces Black and Coloured High-class Dress Goods, imported to sell at 75c. to $1.25 per yard, your choice for 50c.

—40 yards 54-inch Dress Tweed Suitings, worth $1.00, sale price 50 to 60c. per yard.

—300 yards All Wool Black and Coloured Dress Goods, worth 50 to 60c., sale price 35c.

—500 yards Double-Fold Costume Cloths, your choice for 25c. per yard.

—$1.00 B & C Corsets really selling at 65c., and Fair's Half dollar Corsets at 35c.

And so on all over the store. If you are paying "regular" prices elsewhere, you are not doing yourself justice, that's all.

ARMENIAN MASSACRES

An Indignation Meeting to be Held by Sympathizers in London.

THE PORTE HELD ANSWERABLE

Great Britain's Apathy in Regard to the Outrages Denounced by Members of the Anglo-Armenian Association as Little Short of Criminal.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Francis S. Stevenson, M.P., Chairman of the Anglo American Association, presided at an American meeting in London last night at which a number of letters and telegrams were read favoring the proposed indignation meeting in London in December. The chairman in his speech said he must again protest, as he had done in the House of Commons, against the mistaken and unworthy policy of Great Britain in persisting in screening the atrocious agents of Turkey in Armenia.

Lord Kimberley's complacency in his recent letter in reply to the Armenian society was remarkable. He thought the Foreign Secretary failed to appreciate the feeling of Englishmen. It was little short of criminal to have withheld consular reports from Parliament, as had been done in the last four years, especially in view of Mr. Gladstone's emphatic utterances when denouncing the Armenian horrors of 1880. The speaker appealed to the press to assist to the utmost the Armenian cause.

Mr. Hagobian, chairman of the Armenian Patriotic Association, appealed for united action.

Prof. Agar Beet urged continued appealing to the governments of Europe as well as the people. The meeting decided to arrange for a gathering in December.

Resolutions were adopted appealing to the government to publish the consular reports on the Armenian troubles, and proposing an international consular inquiry into the massacres and the adoption of a more decided policy in forcing the Berlin treaty.

A long letter from Canon MacColl was read, asserting that the Porte was answerable directly and indirectly for all the Armenian massacres, denouncing the inquiry of the Turkish commission as an utter farce, and insisting upon the powers operating in accordance with the Berlin treaty.

COULD NOT BE BRIBED.

An American Judge Who Would Not be Trifled With.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Presiding Judge Robert Hudspeth, of the Hudson County Court of Common Pleas in Jersey City, created a sensation yesterday when he arose from the bench and announced to the lawyers and reporters present that an attempt had been made to bribe the court. He commanded Edward Wayne to stand before the bar, and after telling him that he was accused of that crime, ordered Constable Loch to take him over to the Hudson county jail, where Justice Maes committed him on a complaint of bribery. He will be held to await the action of the grand jury which is now in session. If indicted and convicted he may be sentenced to five years imprisonment and pay a fine of $1,000.

Wayne's son was recently found guilty of selling policy slips in Jersey City, and Judge Hudspeth sentenced him to one year's imprisonment. The sentence has not yet been carried into effect when the elder Wayne appeared at the court house and asked to see the judge. The latter was conferring in the private room with his Judges Hoffman and Penny, but when Wayne, a masonic sign and asked for a private audience the other judges left the room. Wayne then said to the judge: "I am a Mason, judge, so are you. I want you to let up on my boy. If you will it will be worth to you all the way from one to five thousand dollars."

"Well," answered Judge Hudspeth, who wanted a witness to this statement, "I'll have to consult one of the other judges."

He called in Judge Hoffman, and in his presence Wayne repeated the offer. Then Judge Hudspeth became so angry that he struck Wayne and immediately ordered his arrest. Later Judge Hudspeth said publicly that anybody who attempted to bribe a judge or court in Hudson county must suffer the penalty of the law. Mason is a Mason.

Twenty Houses Destroyed.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 28.—At the oil town of McDonald, fifteen miles from Pittsburg, on the Pan Handle railroad, fire destroyed or badly damaged 20 houses and their contents. Loss, $15,000; insurance small. The town had a narrow escape from total destruction.

Still Searching for Pitezel.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—The whereabouts of Benjamin Pitezel, upon whose supposed body $10,000 insurance was obtained from the Fidelity Mutual Life Association still remains a mystery. The police department seems to be baffled in its efforts to locate the man, and the officers of the insurance company are not meeting with any degree of success, although both the authorities and the company are running out every clue. Until the conspiracy trial of Holmes, Lawyer Howe and Mrs. Pitezel shall begin the only looked for development in the case is the finding of Pitezel. The theory that Pitezel was murdered is not generally believed.

TO GO TO BLUEFIELDS

An American Cruiser Ordered to Proceed to the Coast.

UNEASINESS IN NAVAL CIRCLES

Great Britain Has Refused to Recognize Nicaraguan Sovereignty Over the Mosquito Strip. Report of the Secretary of the Navy Department.

MANAGUA, Nov. 28.—The Nicaragua government has been informed by the British Minister, Mr. Gosching, that Great Britain has refused to recognize Nicaraguan sovereignty over the Mosquito strip and Mr. Gosching has sent to Port Limon, asking that a British warship be sent to Bluefields. In pursuance of instructions, Mr. Guzman, the Nicaraguan Minister at Washington, advised the United States government of Great Britain's action and he was informed that Ambassador Bayard had been instructed to lay the matter before Lord Kimberley.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—As a result of a conference at Woodley yesterday between the President and Secretary Gresham the cruiser, Columbia, which has been for several weeks at Kingston, Jamaica, was cabled peremptory orders to proceed at once to Bluefields for the protection of American interests. Mr. Gresham's visit to the President's country home followed immediately upon an interview he had with the Nicaraguan Minister. All the officials acquainted with the affair refuse to divulge the reason of the hurried orders to the Columbia or to confirm news from Panama in regard to a refusal of Great Britain to recognize the Nicaraguan government.

It is learned, however, on excellent authority that the Columbia and the Marblehead, which arrived at Kingston yesterday, will remain at Bluefields continuously this winter, and that the Montgomery may be sent there from Mobile, and also that preliminary orders have been sent to New York to have all the ships in commission of the North Atlantic squadron prepared for a West Indian cruise at the earliest possible moment. In addition sailing orders for the San Francisco which was to leave December 15 to become the flagship in European waters have been withheld, and she may be sent immediately to the Gulf of Mexico. Instructions to prepare the Minneapolis for sea at once have also been sent to navy department chiefs.

There seems to be, in fact, almost a war scare pervading the navy, brought about by diplomatic rumors to the effect that Great Britain, which several months ago expressed a willingness to recognize the full jurisdictional rights of Nicaragua over the Mosquito coast, had shown a disposition to resent what appears to be the practical annexation of that territory and its complete incorporation as a portion of Nicaragua.

As long as the inter-oceanic canal bill seemed under favorable consideration at the last session of Congress Great Britain remained quiescent in the Mosquito controversy. Not until now is it definitely learned Great Britain had declined to recognize the legality of the new order of things on the Mosquito coast and that it had so notified Nicaragua.

The near approach of the meeting of the Congress, it is said, gives the president assurance that he will be supported to the fullest extent in preventing foreign interference near the route of the proposed inter-ocean canal.

Report of the Naval Secretary.

The annual report of the Secretary of the Navy is given out for publication. In the course of the report the Secretary says: Congress should give careful attention to the ordnance requirements of vessels that are liable to be called into service as auxiliaries in time of war. To mention no others, the Paris and New York, of the Inman line, are now receiving large sums of money annually on condition that they hold themselves in readiness to serve the government whenever demanded. When they hauled down the English to hoist the American flag they were receiving pay from the British government to hold themselves in readiness to serve that nation, and the English had guns and gun mounts ready to be put upon them at a moment's notice. We have now been paying subsidies to these ships for months and have not a gun to put upon them.

Under treaty provisions neither the United States nor the English can keep more than one small naval vessel up on our northern lakes. So far the two countries are matched. In case, however, a war should unfortunately break out between them Great Britain could promptly furnish guns and gun mounts to her merchant marine on the lakes, and though their marine is far inferior to ours in strength, the British might master those waters and do incalculable damage to our lake cities. If we had a reserve of ordnance and ordnance stores we could dominate those waters without question.

Austrian Electoral Reform.

VIENNA, Nov. 28.—Prince Windischgraetz, Austrian Prime minister, informed the electoral reform commission that the conferences on electoral reform with delegates of the coalition parties had been without result. He said that if the commission should prepare a project accepted by the coalition, the government would acquiesce in it, provided it were based on the fundamental Austrian principle of the division of electors into social strata. Universal suffrage, he said, was inadmissible.

Dilke Criticises Rosebery.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Sir Charles Dilke in a speech at Tunstall last evening said that after Lord Rosebery's half hearted utterances in regard to reforming the House of Lords it was evident that the present Government could not satisfy the majority of Liberal opinion on that subject. The Radicals must fight the so-called reform, which was no longer a Liberal but a Tory nostrum and certain to result in strengthening the Lords.

Nicholas Invited to England.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Truth says that Queen Victoria has invited Emperor Nicholas and his bride to visit England and that they will probably pay the visit next June. The programme for their reception and entertainment will be similar to that followed on the occasion of Emperor William's visit in 1891.

FOR DEEP WATERWAYS

The Executive Board of the Association Meets in Chicago.

MATTERS UNDER DISCUSSION

The Wisconsin Delegate Argues for a Change in the Methods and Rates of Transportation. An Address to be Issued to the People of Both Countries.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28. The executive board of the International Deep Waterways Association met in the Rialto building yesterday. All the American and nearly all the Canadian members were present. The day was largely spent in discussing the best methods of carrying on a general educational campaign, how to raise the necessary funds and how to meet the opposition of Buffalo.

Invitations for the next annual convention were received from Superior, Winnipeg, Chicago, St. Paul, Toledo and Cleveland. The last named city will probably be selected.

Frank A. Flower, of Wisconsin, addressed the board on the relative position to deepwater of the several wheat fields of the world. Among other things he said: "Without a revolution in methods and rates of transportation the grain raisers of the great northwest must produce wheat without profit or at a positive loss or go out of the business altogether.

"The wheat field of America is from 1,400 to 2,000 miles from the sea, and the markets for our surplus are beyond that sea. It is insane to suppose our farmers frozen out of water competition half the year can long compete under these conditions with the vast foreign wheat fields rapidly coming into prominence close by the sea or on the banks of wide rivers leading directly down to tidewater."

It is expected the board will complete its labors to-morrow except that of E. A. Flower of Superior and T. E. Codey of Chicago, who will remain to draft an address to the people of the United States and Canada.

OTTAWA NOTES.

The New Belgian Consul—Death of an Old Citizen.

OTTAWA, Nov. 28.—J. de Fougeroul, new Belgian consul to Ottawa, arrived here yesterday.

The latest candidate for the mayoralty is ex-Ald. W. Borthwick. Mr. Borthwick has been requested by a number of leading citizens to stand, and yesterday he stated that he will stay with his friends until the last vote is polled. Mr. Borthwick is the first of the numerously mentioned candidates who have definitely decided to come out and oppose Mayor Cox.

One of the old pioneers of the city died here yesterday in the person of Andrew Mann, who for nearly thirty years was treasurer of St. Andrew's Society of this city. Mr. Mann was 85 years of age and a native of Aberdeen, Scotland. He was in good health up to a few days ago. He is also the oldest Oddfellow in Ottawa.

Canadian trade with Great Britain shows a falling off during October. The British board of trade returns show that during the month the export of goods to Canada amounted to $1,271,391, a decrease of $380,-895; while imports from Canada amounted to $7,576,307, a slight decrease of $268,182 compared with the figures for October 1893. For the ten months ended October 31, the exports of British goods to Canada totalled $14,641,365, a falling off of $6,281,-428. Compared with the value of exports for the corresponding period of last year British imports of Canadian goods for ten months were $41,322,791, an increase of $2,255,214, or about 5 1-2 per cent, the chief increase being in the importation of Canadian wheat, fish and eggs. The lumber trade was fairly good, there being an increase of $127,106 in sawn wood, but a decrease of $142,088 in hewn timber.

MR. BLAKE'S PLANS.

That He is Soon to Retire from British Politics is Incorrect.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The cable sent to the New York papers, stating that Hon. Edward Blake would retire from British politics after the next general election, is quite incorrect. Mr. Blake's plans, according to his utterances at South Longford ten days ago, were cabled last week. This cable stated that Mr. Blake then said that he would stand for the new Parliament if he again was nominated for Longford. However, next session he wished more freedom to visit his family in Canada. There is no question of retirement at present.

The Premier's Movements.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Sir John Thompson will reach London to-morrow from Paris and Rome, in which cities he has been passing the past fortnight. His mission to Paris was in connection with his daughter's studies, and his visit to the Eternal City was in the course of a sight-seeing tour, it is understood. When Sir John returns to London he will discuss fully with Lord Ripon the copyright question. In connection with which the deputation of London publishers yesterday urged Lord Ripon to continue to refuse to assent to the Canadian act.

A Hamilton Woman Poisoned.

HAMILTON, Nov. 28.—Mrs. Charles Plater, of Crooks street, yesterday drank a compound mixture containing a quantity of arsenic and although Dr. Philp was called immediately and prevented the woman's death, her condition is still critical and she may die. The stuff was used by Mr. Plater in his business and whether Mrs. Plater took it with suicidal intent cannot be stated. Her domestic relations are all that could be desired and no reason can be assigned for the woman's rash act. She lives happily with her husband and has a family of small children.

The Cuzner Girl Sentenced.

HAMILTON, Nov. 28.—Edith Cuzner, 14 years of age, who had a very bad record, was yesterday found guilty on three charges of theft and was sentenced by Magistrate Jelfs to serve three years in the Mimico Reformatory. Since being arrested the girl has twice made an attempt on her while confined in a cell.

HUSTLING HAVELOCK.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Mr. Boom, of Allandale, near Barrie, and father of Mrs. John Carey, had a severe stroke of paralysis last Sunday afternoon. He is very low, and recovery is extremely doubtful. Dr. Fowler is in attendance.

The Rev. Dr. McClelland, who was away on a short visit to Montreal, has returned.

The visit of the Rev. Dr. Sexton to this burgh was much appreciated by the public generally. On Sunday he preached before good audiences, both morning and evening, in the Presbyterian church. His discourses were able, eloquent and practical. On Monday evening he lectured before a good sized audience on "The Origin of Man," dealing principally with the theory of evolution. It was a masterly effort, displaying the most profound thought, exhaustive learning and searching analysis. Notwithstanding the depth of the subject and the necessity on the part of the lecturer of using language beyond the common range, still the attention of the audience was maintained easily throughout, and all went home feeling that they had had a feast of reason and flow of soul, and more than ever impressed with the fact that any kinship they might have with the gorilla or the ape was too far out to be worth bothering about. The lecture on Tuesday evening, which was held in the Methodist church, was on the important topic, "If a man die shall he live again?" This lecture was also quite a success, and was even the more interesting of the two. Pastor Coon occupied the chair. Good collections were taken up at both lectures. Dr. Sexton's visit will be pleasantly remembered.

Thanksgiving Day was generally observed here as a public holiday. All the stores were closed and the merchants enjoyed a well-earned holiday. The lads and lasses looked their best and seemed glad of the opportunity of displaying their winter goods. The small boy wandered drearily around dragging after his little carcase the winter-crowned sled and longing for the snow. In the evening the event of the day took place, and many might be seen wending their way towards the English church, where a thanksgiving dinner was being held. The tables were loaded with eatables of all kinds, and were liberally patronized by all denominations. The ladies deserve great credit for the very beautiful and bountiful repast they provided. After dinner an adjournment was made to the new hall over Harper's furniture store, where a programme was gone through, consisting of songs, readings, tableaux, etc. Mr. Maloney, of Toronto, was present and did the calling out. Mr. Tailor McKeven occupied the honourable post of inside guard and ticket puncher, and the Rev. Pastor Williams was everywhere, scattering smiles and good wishes among the large company.

The amateur opera company from Belleville, who were advertised for last Friday evening came to grief for want of funds. The manager of the concern skipped out, and then the second mate had to perambulate the town, calling on the parsons to raise funds to redeem his overcoat, held by the hotel keeper for board bill. The people of this town are very slow and stupid about fourth-rate nigger shows.

THE HIGH PARK BAND CONCERT.

Never did a North Monaghan audience enjoy such a musical treat as that given in the township hall, last Friday night, under the band's management. By eight o'clock, every seat was taken, and the order given throughout the entire performance was excellent. The chair was occupied by Mr. J.D. Thornton, of Omemee, who filled the position to the satisfaction of all. Mr. Thornton, being an old band man himself, he always feels quite at home at a concert of this nature. It was eight o'clock when the chairman called on the first number of the following lengthy programme :—

PART I.

Overture	Band
Vocal solo	Miss Vina Belleghem
Cornet solo	Mr. Herb. D. Williamson
Song	Miss Edith Tully
Comic song	Mr. A. R. Benson
Vocal solo	Miss Clara Belleghem
Song	Mr. Jas. Fowler
Orchestra's selection	Members of the Band
Duet (character)	Miss Edna and Mr. Will Jewett
Comic song	Mr. A. R. Benson
Cornet Duet	Messrs. W. H. Sherwood and H. D. Williamson

PART II.

Cornet solo with band accompaniment	H.D Williamson
Club swinging	The Misses Belleghem
Comic song	Mr. A. R. Benson
Instrumental selection	Messrs. Thornton, Sherwood and Williamson Bros.
Selection	Band
Comic song	Mr. A. R. Benson

God save the Queen.

The opening number by the band was a signal that the entertainment would be of a high order. It was rendered in a faultless manner and Bandmaster Williamson may justly feel proud of his musicians. They show careful training and a natural talent. Miss Vina Belleghem's vocal solo was given in good voice and thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. Miss Edith Tully sang in her usual pleasing manner, while Mr. A. R. Benson almost put the audience into hysterics with his character songs. Mr. Benson is fast gaining popularity as a humourous vocalist, having engagements booked up to the first of January. Although he was only on the programme for four numbers, he was compelled to appear in all nine times in order to satisfy the audience. His name on a programme is sure to draw a crowded house. Mr. Benson's home is at Ballyduff, Ont.

Miss Clara Belleghem's vocal solo was one of the finest numbers on the programme, and the audience were not slow in showing their appreciation, as she had to respond to a hearty encore.

The character duet by Miss Edna and Mr. Will Jewett was a taking number, and called forth a well deserved encore.

The cornet duet by Bandmasters Sherwood and Williamson, was given with a great deal of expression and showed those gentlemen to be musicians of the first rank.

Mr. Jas. Fowler sang his song in a sweet tenor voice, and surprised even his own friends.

The instrumental selections were well rendered and brought forth the applause they earned.

Mr. H. Williamson had full management of the concert and we can heartily congratulate him on the success of the affair, as everything passed off without a hitch of any kind and we bespeak even greater success on a future attempt. A pleasing feature of the entertainment was a neat address by Mr. Robt. Leary, of Peterborough, formerly an old Monaghan boy, who spoke in flattering terms of the band, and urged the people to aid in every way they could such a creditable organization. Mr. Leary's remarks were greeted with tremendous applause, showing the band had many friends.

WARSAW.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Winter has fairly set in by the appearance of the sleighs coming into town.

A. D. Reid, of Tyrone, is the guest of his father, G. W. Reid. Archie is one of the boys.

Thursday evening last scored one for Court Warsaw No. 220, C.O.F., it being the night of their annual oyster supper. The night being a fine one, the supper was largely attended. The tables were laden with the best of the season and were a credit to the managing committee, Fred being the chairman. After the sumptuous repast was partaken of, the guests gave a very impressive programme, consisting of songs, recitations and stump speeches. Dr. Couch delivered an eloquent address on the good of the order, which was highly appreciated, followed by a recitation from Mr. Henning, which brought down the house. Mr. Geo. Payne, jr., sang a song entitled "I'm just as young as I used to be." Of course some doubted the statement, but were convinced at the conclusion of the song, that George was still one of the boys. The instrumental pieces rendered by Miss Robinson were well received and will add great lustre to her musical ability. Bro. Watts also gave a very fine address on the order, after which Freddy gave a stump speech. This ended one of the most successful suppers and entertainments given by the members of Court Warsaw No. 220, C.O.F.

Mr. John Wasson has commenced moving in his new residence.

Thanksgiving Day brought out quite a number of sports from Peterborough, more guns than game, and most of the game was shot with silver shot, I am informed.

The annual settling up of the business of the Warsaw cheese factory for the year 1894, took place on Monday, Nov. 19th, and was largely attended by the patrons of said factory and entire satisfaction prevailed, the price realized on the whole output of factory being $23.32 per standard after deducting manufacturing expenses. The average yield for season was 10.75, which is quite a lot in advance of last year. The success is owing largely to the cheesemaker, Mr. Edwin Squire, who is a first class cheesemaker, which shows for itself. Mr. Henry Smith was salesman and treasurer and B. James, Jr., secretary. The patrons were so well satisfied that they intend purchasing the factory if possible, the following resolution having been passed, on motion of E. Hawthorne and P. Fitzpatrick :—"That A. R. Kidd, Henry Smith, Jno. Anderson, J. Gow, Jno. Rose and E. Hawthorne be a committee to take into consideration the forming of a joint stock company, in the village of Warsaw, for the purpose of manufacturing cheese and also a creamery for the manufacture of butter during the winter season; the committee to make a thorough canvass of the locality as to the amount of milk that can be procured, and also to enter into negotiations with the proprietor as to what arrangements can be made for the purchase of the present factory and all other necessary information and report by calling a public meeting, to be held in the Town and Agricultural Hall, Warsaw, on Saturday evening, Dec. 1st, 1894, at 7 o'clock. All interested will be made welcome.

A new skating rink is talked of. I wonder if it will be a "go."

COLD SPRINGS—OTONABEE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Cold Springs Union Sunday School have arranged for their annual Christmas tea and entertainment for Monday evening, Dec. 24th—Christmas eve. A good programme of music is being prepared, and an enjoyable time is expected. The entertainment will begin at 7.30 p. m. A very cordial invitation is given by the members of the school to all who can make it convenient to be present.

School Matters.—We understand that our present teacher, Mr. A. Ovens, has sent in his resignation, and that the trustees have engaged his successor.

Home Class Department.—A Home Class Department has been organized in the Sunday school here. It is aim is to include all residing in the section who cannot attend Sunday school. These pledge themselves to spend at least half-an-hour each week in the study of the Sunday school lesson, and to try to be present once each quarter—on Review Sunday. The members of the school hope to see a large turnout of their new classmates belonging to the Home Class on Sunday, Dec. 30th. More than fifty members have already been enrolled.

C. E. Rally.—A very pleasant C. E. rally was held here on Friday evening, Nov. 23rd. As a full report will be found in the C. E. column it is needless to repeat it here.

FULL OF ENCOURAGEMENT FOR ALL WOMEN.

In Bed 5 Months—Had Given Up All Hope of Getting Well—A Remedy Found at Last to which "I Owe My Life."

Science has fully established the fact that all the nervous energy of our bodies is generated by nerve centres located near the base of the brain. When the supply of nerve force has been diminished either by excessive physical or mental labours, or owing to a derangement of the nerve centres, we are first conscious of a languor or tired and worn-out feeling, then of a mild form of nervousness, headache, or stomach trouble, which is perhaps succeeded by nervous prostration, chronic indigestion, and dyspepsia, and a general sinking of the whole system. In this day of hurry, fret and worry, there are very few who enjoy perfect health; nearly everyone has some trouble, an ache, or pain, a weakness, a nerve trouble, something wrong with the stomach and bowels, poor blood, heart disease, or sick headache; all of which are brought on by a lack of nervous energy to enable the different organs of the body to perform their respective work.

South American Nervine Tonic, the marvellous nerve food and health giver, is a satisfying success, a wondrous boon to tired, sick, and overworked men and women, who have suffered years of discouragement and tried all manner of remedies without benefit. It is a modern, a scientific remedy, and in its wake follows abounding health.

It is unlike all other remedies in that it is not designed to act on the different organs affected, but by its direct action on the nerve centres, which are nature's little batteries, it causes an increased supply of nervous energy to be generated, which in its turn thoroughly oils, as it were, the machinery of the body, thereby enabling it to perform perfectly its different functions, and without the slightest friction.

If you have been reading of the remarkable cures wrought by South American Nervine, accounts of which we publish from week to week, and are still sceptical, we ask you to investigate them by correspondence, and become convinced that they are true to the letter. Such a course may save you months, perhaps years, of suffering and anxiety.

The words that follow are strong, but they emanate from the heart, and speak the sentiments of thousands of women in the United States and Canada who know, through experience, of the healing virtues of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, a prominent and much respected lady, writes as follows:—

"I owe my life to the great South American Nervine Tonic. I have been in bed for five months with a scrofulous tumour in my right side, and suffered with indigestion and nervous prostration. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I cannot recommend it too highly."

Tired women, can you do better than become acquainted with this truly great remedy?

PRINCESS BISMARCK DEAD.

Germany's Aged Statesman Suffers a Great Bereavement.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—Princess Bismarck (Duchess of Lauenberg), wife of Prince Bismarck, died yesterday morning.

Princess Bismarck had been in poor health for a long time. Her illness became pronounced two months ago. She was deeply affected and received a severe shock when the death of her life-long friend, Frau Eugenie Reckow, prioress of the Stoll Institute for unmarried women, was announced.

Three weeks ago Dr. Schweninger was called to Friedrichsruhe to prescribe for a serious attack of neuralgia. Since that time she has been almost continually under the care of a physician.

It is feared that the effect of the death of his wife upon Prince Bismarck will be serious because of his own failing health and years.

The condition of the Princess became alarming on Monday. All the family were summoned to her bedside. Count Herbert Bismarck arrived on Monday, and was present when his mother passed away. Although it is feared that the effect of his wife's death upon the Prince will be serious, it is satisfactory to add that the great Chancellor has been in better health lately and that he has been able to resume his daily drives.

The Princess died in the arms of her husband who had been watching her throughout the night. She was fully conscious until 15 minutes before her death.

Verdict Against the Central Vermont.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—A verdict against the Central Vermont Railway Company was returned in the United States Circuit yesterday. The verdict was for $5,100 and carries with it a settlement of five other complaints with damages assessed at $25,000 and the probability of settlement of still more cases in New York and Chicago, which, taken with the verdicts in twelve suits tried last week in the State courts, will make a total of nearly $250,000 that the company may be called upon to pay as a result of the burning of its grain elevator at Ogdensburg, N.Y., in September, 1890, provided that all persons who lost grain at the time of the fire are as successful as those who appeared as plaintiffs in the cases tried in Massachusetts. It was contended that the building was not properly protected against fire and that the company was negligent.

Seven Train Robbers Captured.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 28.—A special from Fort Worth, Texas, says: The first news of an attempt to hold up the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe depot and Wells Fargo express office at Canadian on Friday night has reached here. Five packages of money consigned from George Isaacs, Kansas City, to George Isaacs, Canadian, and purporting to contain $23,000, arrived at Canadian on Friday night last. Within 45 minutes after the train came in a band of robbers attempted to hold up the depot. Sheriff McGee, of Hemphill county, who was there alone, attempted to stand the robbers off when he was shot and mortally wounded, dying of his wounds on Saturday night. The robbers escaped unhurt. Word has reached here that the posse surrounded the bandits in the Antelope Hills in Cheyene county, and after a desperate fight captured seven of the party.

Civil War in Alabama.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 28.—A special from Selma, Ala., says the four military companies of this city have received orders from the colonel of the Third Regiment to hold themselves in readiness to move to Montgomery at a moment's notice to resist an attack on the state capitol in case the Kolb faction of the Populist party try to take possession and seat Kolb as governor. All the armories of this city are under guard against a crowd of Kolbites who have come from Perry, an adjoining county, who yesterday made a feeble effort to gain access to the ammunition stored there.

An Englishman's Foolish Jump.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—At daybreak yesterday a daring young Englishman named Harry Menier jumped from the centre of the Brooklyn bridge and by the aid of a parachute performed the feat successfully. Considering the season of the year and other circumstances, it was perhaps the most daring of the three successful bridge jumps on record. Menier says he feels as well as he ever did in his life and is none the worse for his jump.

Mr. Mercier's Seat.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Nov. 28, 1894.

The Grand Trunk's return of traffic for the week ending November 24, show a decrease for the week this year $3,854.

On the streets here 400 bushels of wheat brought 60 to 61c for white, 58 1-2 to 59 1-2c for red and 57 1-2c for goose. Barley, 3,500 bushels sold at from 40 to 45 1-2c, 100 bushels of peas at 55 to 57c, and 600 bushels of oats at 30 1-2 to 31 1-2c.

In Chicago wheat showed weakness on Bradstreet's report of the visible supply and closed 7-8c lower. Corn continued to drop on heavy receipts, closing 1-4 to 3-8c lower. Oats were dull with a tendency to weakness.

Barley at Buffalo is quiet. No. 1 Canada is quoted at 64c, No 2 at 62c, No. 3 at 60 to 61c.

Sheep and lambs offerings at East Buffalo, all sold, were 43 cars, forty cars of which were Canada lambs and the offerings in this class being too heavy, the market broke badly. Most sales were 10 to 15c lower and 12 cars were unsold at the close of the market.

The London stock markets were generally quiet and steady, but dull to flat in the case of Americans, with an average fall of one-half to one dollar. A large Russian loan is expected to be issued at Paris soon, and this probably explains the withdrawal of gold from here.

There was another effort on Wall street on the sharp professional speculators who make up the present market. Prices of stocks were marked up, Northwest rising from 96 5-8 to 99. The stock thrown over recklessly by the smaller speculators was taken with ease by stronger interests, and in the consequent revulsion of feeling prices in general turned upward. There were few other developments in the day's financial news.

SALEM—OTONABEE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.

Amongst the many improvements under contemplation during next summer will be the erection of new barns by several of our most enterprising young farmers. These barns, we understand, will be of the most modern style, assuring all manner of convenience, according to specifications. Our church has also during the past couple of weeks, received its share of attention, the choir and pulpit stands being raised to a common level, thus making both present a more comfortable appearance. More improvements are under contemplation and are quite necessary. When done Salem church will be one of the neatest little country churches anywhere to be found.

It is understood that the Rev. W. C. Beer, pastor of the circuit, is considering commencing a series of special services in the near future in this church. We consider this a step in the right direction, if successfully carried out. We think that if an Epworth League or Christian Endeavour were organized here that it would be of great benefit to the young people of this neighbourhood.

It has been decided to continue the Sabbath school throughout the winter. Formerly this school has been closed during the winter season.

Miss Robb of this neighborhood is visiting friends at Garden Hill this week.

We are pleased to learn that Mr. Patrick Doherty, who has been laid up with inflammatory rheumatism during the past four months, is again able to be around.

Mr. Josh. Chambers of Bethel Otonabee, was the guest of Miss Wood on Sunday last.

Rev. W. R. Young of Peterborough, preached to a well filled church here Sunday afternoon last. Subject: "Earthly and Heavenly Treasures. The reverend gentleman handled his subject in a most able manner.

We understand that several of the public schools in this vicinity are making preparations for holding their Christmas entertainments—and so it draweth nigh once more.

HAULTAIN.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—I should esteem it a great favour if you would kindly allow me a little space in your valuable paper to correct a slight error, which appeared in connection with my name last week. I had the pleasure and the privilege of conducting certain services in St. John's, on Sunday, the 18th, inst., but in the course of my sermon I did not tell the story of my life at Haultain, but gave the history of that station, which was opened up, not by myself, but by the Rev. Canon Harding, of Apsley, in 1881. The funds for erecting the church were gathered by members of the congregation, many of whom have been more self-denying than myself. It is true that I have for some time given up my stipend to help to pay off the debt, but did not sell my furniture for that purpose and my books I still possess. Sixty is the average, not the regular attendance at our church. Although I am living at the house of a friend in Lakefield, I am thankful to say that I am still able to attend to my mission work. If you will allow me to do so, I will take this opportunity of once more thanking the Peterborough people for their kindness and liberality. Thanking you for your kindness in inserting this, I am, dear sir,

Your obedient servant,
J. H. HARTLEY,
Incumbent of Holy Trinity Church, Haultain.

A FALSE STAVEMENT CONTRADICTED.

The rumour having been circulated by interested parties that Ostrom's were not receiving Chicago meats, the following letter is published in contradiction of such an unfounded statement:

MESSRS. OSTROM BROS., Peterborough, Ont.

GENTLEMEN,—In accordance with instructions received through our representative, Mr. Clerihew, we have entered for shipment tomorrow 1,000 lbs. of tenderloins, which will go forward on the 3 o'clock train as desired. We are very much pleased to send these meats, and hope you will find it to your advantage to use them regularly. We are confident the grade of the meats will please you in every respect and will certainly give any orders entrusted to us our most careful attention.

With thanks for the favour, and hoping to hear from you soon again, we remain,

Yours truly,

An American Testimony to the Worth of a Canadian Product.

BRADFORD, Pa., Nov. 28th,—In writing you, yesterday, of the remarkable cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills, I neglected to mention the case of M. W. Greatsinger. In this, as in other instances, they have shown wonderful results. The testimonials given here as to the curative powers of Dodd's Kidney Pills are straightforward and honest, and have convinced all unprejudiced minds of their sincerity and truthfulness. All witnesses state that the pills help them from the start, and invariably result in permanent restoration to health. The most sceptical say that Dodd's Kidney Pills did all that were claimed for them.

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, and have no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similiar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose to pay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times

Sunday School Convention.

The Sunday school workers of the town will remember with pleasure the two conventions held last year by the P.S.S. Association. A third one is to be held in the Baptist church on Thursday evening of this week. A conference on the subject of "Teacher Training" will be conducted by Rev. J. J. Rae, an active and progressive Sunday school worker. Rev. Mr. Trotter will give by blackboard a birds-eye view of the life of Christ. A short musical programme will also be rendered. All adult friends of the Sunday school are invited to attend, and teachers are particularly urged to be present. 2d121

The Diamond Drill.

The new government diamond drill, which is working on the Glendower iron property on Black Lake, in Bedford township, county of Addington, is giving perfect satisfaction. Mr. Joseph Bawden, who is interested in the mine with other Kingstonians, writes to Mr. Archibald Blue, Director of Mines, that the drill is under such complete control, by means of the hydraulic feed, that the percussion is of the slightest and the cutting action of the diamond is perfectly adjusted. One hole was bored to a depth of 182½ feet, when the old workings were struck, of which the records had been lost. The drill has been removed to another part of the property, and a hole will be sunk 600 feet.

A Peterborough Patent Doing Satisfactory Work.

Mr. C. LeGros, was interviewed this afternoon by an EXAMINER reporter in reference to the New Brooks Improved Water Heater, which he has placed in his residence recently. In regard to this new heating apparatus, which is manufactured by the firm of Messrs. Rudkins and Riley, Peterborough, Mr. LeGros stated that he took pleasure in testifying to the effect that though he had experimented with different systems of hot water heating, for the past seventeen years he had never been so thoroughly satisfied with any system as the Brooks Improved. He found that the apparatus placed in position by Messrs. Rudkins and Riley consumed less fuel and heated his residence better than any other of the various systems with which he had experimented.

Mr. Green's Weigh.

Yesterday was live stock day on the market, which was well attended. The principal offering was hogs, and they were quoted at 4 cents per pound on foot and 5 cents to 5¼ cents dressed. During the progress of the market, Mr. Green made a very unusual weigh. He weighed a young horse, about three years old, which scaled 700 lbs. Then a mammoth porker was put on the balance and weighed 760 lbs. also, the exact weight of the horse. This is the largest hog weighed this season—though there are records of a hog, some years ago, weighing dressed on the market as high as 700 lbs., which would mean 875 lbs. live weight. The big hog weighed, yesterday, was raised by Mr. Isaac Clarke of North Monaghan, and on the same farm—the old William Fowler farm—on which the 875 lb. hog was raised by the late Mr. Wm. Fowler and sold to the late Mr. Daniel Hopkins.

A Financial as Well as a Literary Success.

The "at home" which was held at Mr. Jas. Miss M. Owens, of Campbellford, who has been the guest of Miss Edith McKee, since Thanksgiving Day, returned home to-day, accompanied by Miss McKee, who will spend a few days in Campbellford.

Rev. Wm. Logan is in town for a few days in the interests of the Superannuation fund of the English church. Mr. Logan will be remembered by Peterboroughonians as one of the pioneers in the Trent Valley Canal agitation years ago, when he resided at Fenelon Falls.

Mr. H. H. Dean, B.S.A., and Professor of Dairying, at Ontario Agricultural College Guelph, is in town to-day. Mr. Dean will address the patrons and friends of the Hotsaygean cheese factory, at Hotsaygean on Thursday afternoon, Dec. 6th, and of the Finnerville factory, on Friday evening, the 7th.

Mr. J. J. Turner, accompanied by his youngest son, Webber, leaves to-morrow morning for Halifax, whence he will sail by the "Labrador," Dominion line, for London, Eng., whither he is called by the serious illness of his mother. Mr. Turner expects to return in January, and in his absence his son will manage the busines.

The Belleville Intelligencer says: "During the past week Mr. J. T. Warrington's condition has been gradually improving, to the great relief of his many friends, but this afternoon we regret to learn that he took a serious turn for the worse." Mr. Warrington having large connections in the cheese sections, is well known in Peterborough.

Foreman Scott, of the sewer construction force, says that the morning contemporary made a most wild guess when it announced this morning that the sewer was half full of slush. About thirty men are pushing the work along rapidly, and the portion permitted to be finished by the town-[illegible] be completed by about the middle of next week.

Mrs. H. LeBrun, Mrs. Harry Phelan and Miss Maude Morrow were "at home" to their numerous friends, last evening in the Forester's Hall, Simcoe street. The rooms were most prettily decorated with flags and counting for the occasion. Mrs. LeBrun received in a handsome gown of cream silk with silver trimmings, while Mrs. Phelan was prettily attired in cream moire silk, trimmed with bluette velvet. Miss Morrow was daintily dressed in a pretty delaine gown, with lace trimming. Butcher's orchestra was present and a most enjoyable evening was spent. A large number of guests from out of town were present.

MORE COMMENDATION FOR YUNCK.

The following is additional testimony to the artistic ability of Herr Yunck who appears in the Opera House, December 4th.

182 Sherbourne street,
Toronto, Nov. 24th, 1894.

DEAR MR. HOOPER.—I see by the EXAMINER that you are going to give a concert on Dec. 4th, and I am sure it will be a good one, such as you always give. I can speak of one of the company with confidence, I mean Yunck, the violinist. I heard him twice at the Massey Festival in "La Trille du Diable," and the "Faust Fantasie." He playing was simply grand. His technique is wonderful, but it does not surpass his deep purity of tone nor the beauty of his expression. The artistic finish he gives all his work is charming. Last season I heard Musin, Marteau and Yunck, but I think I would have to hear them many times before I could decide upon my favourite. I would envy the people of Peterborough the treat they will have if I did not look forward to hearing another great artist the same night, Ysaye, the great Belgian violinist.

With best wishes for success.

Yours very sincerely,
LOUISE YORGME.

WATSON Q.C., NOW IN THE RING.

The Counsel in the Case Arguing Over Even the Small Points.

The sewer arbitration re-opened this morning again before Judge Ketchum. Watson, Q.C., took up the case for the townships, and by adducing the evidence of Dr. Waters, of Cobourg, and Dr. Shaw, of Keene, strengthened and endorsed the evidence previously given by Dr. Oldwright and the other sanitary experts who were present, to a considerable extent. It is becoming evident that the finish will be a close one in the arbitration and the council, in consequence, spent a great deal of time in discussing even the smallest points of difference. The town may-haps its forces of expert evidence this afternoon, and it is thought that about three days will be occupied in adducing the additional testimony.

The fees paid to the experts in sanitary matters who are giving evidence run as high $75 a day and expenses in some cases and without doubt the arbitration will be a most costly one for the municipality which has to foot the bill.

A CHANCE FOR THE PUBLIC AS WELL AS THE CONTRACTORS TO MAKE MONEY.

—IN—

A SUIT OF CLOTHES AND A NEW DRESS

THE PRIZES.

—IN—

In order to stimulate public interest in the Trent Valley Canal, and also to get at some idea of the public feeling in reference to the date of completion of this important local public work, which has been hung up before the eyes of the public for the past half century: and which to the eyes of the Government seems to assume a vastly increased importance just previous to an election, the EXAMINER offers the following prizes as an inducement to some of our expert mathematical and logarathmic specialists, to exercise their estimating powers.

In order to furnish calculators with some data to assist them, it may be mentioned that Sir Charles Tupper in 1882 stated in Peterborough that the work would be proceeded with as rapidly as the finances of the country would permit, and that in 1891, on the eve of the election, the late Sir John A. Macdonald telegraphed to Mr. Jas. Stevenson the day before the election, to the effect that the commission having reported in favour of the feasibility of the canal, the work would at once be proceeded with.

On the night of the election in the opera house, Mr. Stevenson, in expressing his unbounded faith in the bona fides of this telegram and of the government's intentions generally, said, that if the following summer (1892) there were not a thousand men at work on the Peterborough-Lakefield section he would resign his seat. Mr. Stevenson, not having resigned his seat, it is to be inferred that there is some underground canal work going on, and the operators will work upwards and meet the new contractors as they work downward.

The EXAMINER makes this proposition out of consideration for those who are standing around idle, in order that they may form some idea of the time when, on the completion of the canal, they may expect to look for another job.

Any person sending in to the EXAMINER five of the following coupons, containing their estimate of the time when they think the sections will be completed, will have a chance to compete for the following valuable prizes:

To the lady making the nearest average estimate, A NEW DRESS.

To the gentleman making the nearest average estimate, A NEW SUIT OF CLOTHES.

No estimate considered unless accompanied with five of the following coupons, which will be printed in the DAILY EXAMINER every day this week, and in the weekly for two weeks. Readers of the latter who may not procure complete copies of the daily may use their weekly coupons to make up the required number:

TRENT VALLEY CANAL COUPON.

I estimate that the Simcoe and Balsam Lake division of the Trent Valley Canal, (37 miles) will be completed and accepted as finished, by the Government, on

——, —— day of ——, 1

That the Peterborough and Lakefield section (34 miles) will be completed on

——, —— day of ——, 1

Musicians, Attention!

The piano to be used at the Herr Yunck concert on Dec. 4th, is a cabinet, grand specially selected and loaned by Whaley, Royce & Co., Toronto, and is manufactured by the Reimer Piano Co., and contains one of Wessel, Nichol & Gross' best American actions. The touch is light and elastic—the very acme of perfection. It has great power and volume of tone, combined with a rich quality that delights and captivates. A Tone Liberator, a Patent Muffler, which, when put into operation, produces the softest tone possible, and enables the performer to practice at any hour of the day or night, without disturbing any one in the house or neighbourhood and a Metallic Key board Support, are special features of these instruments. If this instrument is not sold within a few days after the concert, it will be returned to the show rooms on Yonge street, Toronto.

THE FORTNIGHTLY CLUB.

Inspector Brown on "The English Language" Mr. Dumble's Essay on "The Effect of Ice Expansion on Canadian Lakes."

The fourth regular meeting of the Fortnightly met last evening as announced. The meeting was quite up to the standard of interest maintained at the previous gatherings, while the discussion and talk were perhaps freer.

Mr. Brown began with a lecture on "The English Language." He believes that English will be the universal language. In Shakespeare's time there were 5,000,000 people speaking it, now there are 105,000,000. Mr. Brown would make the road to the learning of it a little less thorny. It takes children under the present system, he states, from four to eight years to learn to read, and the average age of children in the second book is ten years and three months. The difficulty is in our alphabet, the characters not being named so as to suggest the sound they have in words. He would name the different characters as they

SHE ACTUALLY SOUNDED.

Thus, c, g, h, k, q, w, y, and z, should be named respectively ke, ge, he, ka, koo, yi, and ze, and the combinations, ck, ch, and tch, should be named as one symbol, ek, che and etche, respectively. Mr. Brown believes that, with this reform, children at the age of nine would be as far advanced in reading as they are now at twelve. It will be seen that he is not an advocate of the phonic method, which finds in Mr. Garvin an enthusiastic champion. He had not time to explain his system fully, and the members of the club expressed a wish that he would at another time continue his lecture.

No less interesting was Mr. Dumble's clear treatment of "The effect of ice expansion on Canadian Lakes." He did not speak, he said at the outset, as one having accurate scientific knowledge. He had, however, been interested in the subject, and had given it

SOME THOUGHT AND STUDY.

It is well known that Mr. Dumble's brother, Mr. J. H. Dumble, of Cobourg, has made important discoveries in connection with this matter. These discoveries were the basis of this lecture. It has been found to be impossible in any cold climates to maintain a bridge across large bodies of water owing to the effect of ice on the structures. The cause of the destructive force was a mystery until Mr. Dumble cleared it up. The trouble does not lie in the floating blocks of ice being flung by the wind, waves or current against the structure, nor in the expansion of the ice while freezing, but in the expansion and contraction of the ice mass with every variation of the temperature after the same has frozen. When there is a over the ice, it is protected from the change of temperature, but in the case of glare ice with every rise of temperature it expands, and with every fall of temperature it contracts. The force of the expansion is irresistible, it will break anything in the line of least resistance. The bridge of the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway on Rice Lake has disappeared, and the bridge across the Bay of Quinte was destroyed in this way. In Stony Lake there is a huge boulder, eight feet square, which during the past five or six years, has been moved by the force of ice expansion about sixty feet inland. Another interesting fact mentioned by Mr. Dumble, is the existence of a narrow ridge of land, following the sinuosities of the shore, of Round Lake, township of Belmont, being at some places about half a mile in length. This he can account for only by the theory that it is the result of a series of deposits of debris brought by the ice shove along the shore.

HEAVY BLANKET OF SNOW

Mr. Dumble explains the great extent of the expansion in this way: During the very cold weather the ice contracts and becomes filled with fissures and interstices, into which the water is drawn as into a sponge. This water freezes, and the mass of ice is increased, and thus with every

there is an addition to the mass of ice, and increased expansion. His brother's great experiment, which clearly established this theory of ice expansion was explained. He built a shed one hundred feet long over a pond of water, and, by cutting a channel all around the frozen mass, created a huge

FLOATING BLOCK OF ICE.

At each end of it a post was frozen, and connecting these posts was a pole in two pieces, one of which fitted into the other as into a socket, so as to move freely to and fro, if the ice expanded or contracted. It was found that the ice was as sensitive as the thermometer. The pole advanced and retreated in perfect harmony with the thermometer as the temperature fell or rose.

The next meeting will be held at the Judge's chambers on Tuesday, December 18th, when Mr. Fessenden will read a paper entitled "Flying Machines." Several gentlemen will be prepared to discuss the paper. Their names will be announced later.

Twenty-four members have signed the roll, and there are others who have expressed a wish to become members who have not done so. There were twenty-eight members at the meeting last night, the largest number yet.

RESCUE FOR OUR NEGLECTED AND DEPENDENT CHILDREN.

A Scheme for Their Temporary Shelter Will be Formulated by Friday.

Mr. J. J. Kelso, Provincial Superintendent of Neglected and Dependent Children, arrived in Peterborough yesterday afternoon from Lindsay, where a Children's Protective Society was organized under the most favourable auspices. A mass meeting of the citizens of that town was held and the police magistrate presided.

Mr. Kelso was met at the station here by some of those most interested in the work of the local Children's Protective Society, and a conference with the Finance Committee took place. Mr. Kelso explained that while the law respecting the providing of a shelter for neglected children was strict, yet the idea was rather to urge the municipal councils to perform their duty through feelings of sympathy rather than to coerce them into so doing by invoking the law.

After discussing the question regarding the providing of temporary shelters for rescued children, in its different phases, the finance committee finally asked the Children's Protective Society to prepare some feasible scheme to this end, which could be discussed and presented, to the council, by Friday evening next.

THE NON-COMS WISH TO FORM A CLUB.

The Esprit du Corps of the Rangers to be Preserved Through the Winter Months.

The non-commissioned officers of the 57th Battalion, assembled at the drill shed last night in response to a call issued by the sergeants.

The object of the meeting was to get the non-coms together to discuss the feasibility of forming a club or association for the winter months, and fitting up the room of the sergeants' mess in such a manner as to hold forth attractions for the men and induce them to keep together and maintain the esprit du corps of the Rangers during the enforced idleness of the battalion during the cold weather.

The sergeants mess, though a recognized organization of the 57th, has heretofore only held meetings of a business nature, but the idea is now to enlarge the scope of the mess by admitting the other non-commissioned officers into membership and introducing a number of games into the rooms, besides keeping the daily papers on file and rendering the rooms sufficiently attractive to gather the non-coms. together nightly for friendly discussion. The perfecting of a bond of union of this nature between the corporals and sergeants will, it is thought, have a tendency to draw the non-coms. sufficiently close together to prevent the entire disorganization of the force during the winter, when there are no parades. The chair was occupied during the evening by Sergeant Elcome, but no definite action will be taken until the sanction of the colonel, regarding the formation of the club has been obtained. The meeting adjourned to meet again next Tuesday evening by which time the decision of the colonel will have been obtained. About twenty of the non-coms. were present at the meeting, and all were most enthusiastic regarding the perfecting of the scheme.

OMEMEE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.

Good wheeling—little more snow and good sleighing.

Farmers are busy preparing their hogs and poultry for market.

Every Saturday, between now and the new year, Emily's representation will be large on the Peterborough market.

The Presbyterian pulpits were occupied last Sunday by a student, Mr. Borling, of Knox College.

The Young People's Association of the Presbyterian church, have in contemplation a New Year's entertainment of a high order.

Fires, caused by accidents from lamps and defective chimney throughout the country surrounding here, are very prevalent, and in most cases the insurance does not nearly cover the loss.

The anniversary services at Bethel church, East Emily, were very successful this year. Notwithstanding the cry of hard times this church is fast getting out of debt.

The farmers in the neighbourhood of Lakevale, including the the Tullys, Deyells, Fowlers, Bests, Darlings and others are amongst the most progressive. Most of their lands and churches are unencumbered.

Professor Sherwood, bandmaster of Omemee, assisted the High Park brass band, North Monaghan, on last Friday evening in the town hall, and speaks very highly of the performances of this farmer-band, being far above the ordinary country village or many town bands. The programme included vocal selections as well by Peterborough talent of a high order. Mr. J. D. Thornton, insurance agent for Cox & Davis, Peterborough, filled the chair in the absence of Mr. Foster, selected. The whole affair was orderly and well conducted.

THE STAFF OF LIFE.

Bread is the staff of life. It is the one thing that enters into the daily necessities of every family that is able to appease the pangs of hunger, and it is the one thing of all that should be furnished to the public without extortion.—Philadelphia Times.

It has been demonstrated beyond doubt that bread is too dear in proportion to the price of flour. Whilst we claim that those engaged in the trade should have sufficient remuneration to pay them well, there does not seem to be any reason for the price of bread not being reduced to a certain extent at least, to correspond with the constantly decreasing price of flour, which is down to the lowest price in the history of the world. We give below a table from the American Grocer, a recognized trade authority, showing the average price of flour during 10 years:

1894	$3 65 to $3 30	per barrel
1893	3 85 to 3 92	"
1892	4 15 to 4 65	"
1891	4 65 to 5 20	"
1890	4 40 to 5 20	"
1889	4 40 to 5 25	"
1888	4 67 to 5 53	"
1887	4 35 to 5 00	"
1886	4 57 to 5 47	"
1885	4 68 to 5 75	"

In view of the above, if there is any reason why the price of bread should remain stationary whilst the price of flour has been so greatly reduced, we would like to hear it.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

THE RACE IS WON

—over to good health and rendered impervious to disease when the blood is pure and the liver active. For the liver is the sentinel which permits or forbids the germs of disease to enter the circulation of the blood.

You ought to be germ-proof against Grip, Malaria, or Consumption; you will be—if you take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

When your flesh is reduced below a healthy standard, when you are troubled with pimples and boils, or if you have dizzy, weak and sleepless spells—it's best to heed the warning.

Build up your strength, purify the blood, and set all the organs of the body into activity, by taking the "Discovery." It's guaranteed to benefit or cure all the diseases resulting from impure blood or inactive liver, or the money paid is refunded.

For a perfect and permanent cure of Catarrh, take Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Its proprietors offer $500 reward for an incurable case of Catarrh in the Head.

SHE FEARED THE WORST.

And Even the Death of Her Aunt Did Not Move Her Soul.

"Give me the pie."

Out upon the lawn of the Castle McMurty stood a young girl just in the springtide of youth. Some scarlet roses that swung lazily to and fro in the breath of a June morning were not more beautiful than those which bloomed so brightly in the peachy cheeks of the Lady Constance McMurty, and her slight but faultlessly moulded figure set off to perfection by a plain morning dress of white muslin, had in it movements more of grace and beauty than those of the gray hound which lay silently at the feet of his mistress, watching her every movement with intelligent and loving eyes. The girl's rippling golden hair was simply tied with a blue ribbon; the lovely, half-childish face was a poem complete in itself. It was a face that changed with every thought—one moment gay and bright, in another thoughtful and sad. As she spoke the words with which this chapter opens there was a wistful look upon the pretty face, and the brown eyes shot forth a yearning will-I-ever-find-the-hair-brush glance that was pitiful in its sad beauty.

For a moment Lord Wyverne did not reply. Then, placing his hand on the girl's shoulders and looking into her eyes with a grave tenderness that told how the horror of the scene was pressing upon him, he said, in tones that were almost a sob, "You must be brave, my child; must nerve yourself to bear a great grief."

"My God!" exclaimed the girl. "Tell me what has happened. It surely cannot be that there is no pie?"

"No, my darling," replied the earl. "It is not so bad as that. Your aunt is dead."

"Ah!" said Constance, "how you frightened me. I thought surely it was the pie.'—Detroit Sun

Society News of the Future.

Here is a dream a society young woman had the other night after registering and then attending a swell military wedding She dreamed she had been at a wedding and picked up a paper and read this account, which was dated May 20, 1920:

"The bride looked well in the conventional wedding-gown of the usual white satin, but all eyes were centered on the groom. His suit of dark cloth fitted perfectly the manly form, a large boutonniere ornamented his coat lapel and in his daintily-gloved hand he carried a bunch of flowers. His hair was cut in the very latest style, and the delicately scented oil, which plastered it in place, left a dainty perfume in the air as he passed. The girls all envied the bride for carrying off such a prize, and he will be sadly missed now that he is married. He is most popular in society, his many accomplishments, his tender graces and winning ways having won him many friends. He has done well in his marriage, as the bride is mayor of a western town, before which time she drew a good salary as a brewer's agent. He will therefore miss none of the luxuries to which he is accustomed. A crowd of pretty and attractive young men showered the couple with rose petals as they drove away."—Chicago Evening Post.

VANITY AMONG FEMALE CONVICTS.

The Ruling Passion Sometimes Shows Itself Even Behind Prison Bars.

A writer in an English paper, quoted by The New York Times, says that our hapless countrywoman, Mrs. Maybrick, set the fashion in Woking prison of wearing the skirt long, that is, with a train, as she was wearing such when she entered the prison. The dresses served out to the convicts are constant sources of annoyance to them, and many an hour is spent touching up and altering. At Millbank, another English prison, some years since, a female convict was discovered to be in possession of three tallow candles, which, if they had not been missed, would no doubt have been utilized as pomade! One woman created quite a sensation among the female convicts in Woking prison by reason of the brilliancy of the color of her cheeks and lips. One day she became quite friendly with a young convict to whom she took a fancy, and during the ten minutes' chat (female convicts are allowed to converse with each other for this allotted time) she confided the secret. It was soon all over the prison, and very soon on most of the cheeks of the women could be found traces of color. The "paint" was obtained in the following ingenious manner: In the aprons that the women were wearing there was, running through the pattern, a bright red stripe, and this was carefully drawn out. When unravelled and chewed in the mouth the color of dye was released, and thus the paint was obtained which decorated their faces and lips.

In the same prison a convict had repeated fainting fits. One day she was attacked in chapel and, upon her removal to the infirmary, she was undressed, when, to their astonishment, the authorities found the fits proceeded from tight lacing and from the effects produced by the pieces of wood and wire which the convict had managed to force into her stays in order to make her waist slender. A convict will spend hours in tearing out bits of wire from the window guard and afterward bending them into the required shape for use as hairpins. Leaves from the bible are often torn out to make the old-fashioned "carker" curls, but this practice, if found out, involves a very serious punishment. Even the "life" prisoners are not exempt from this desire to make the best possible appearance, and they will scheme, plot and plan for months together in order to become possessed of a piece of broken window pane in order to make a looking-glass. While out in the exercise yard a convict will rapidly scan the ground in the hope of coming across a piece of glass. Once possessed of it, she will run the risk of solitary confinement on a bread-and-water diet in order to get it into her cell. A piece of black cloth at the back of the piece of glass makes an excellent mirror.

A Terrible Experience:

Mr. Geo. Tribe, of Straffordville, Ont. a pretty village near the shores of Lake Erie, went through an experience lately that he will never forget. He tells it in his own words:

"For three years I suffered from skin disease in its worst form. I tried Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura remedies, and doctored one year with the best physicians in the land, but got no benefit; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but failed to remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard, white scales; the itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. I can truly say I owe my good health to B. B. B., and I advise all sufferers to use this splendid medicine.

THE DROVER'S MISTAKE.

How He Made the Acquaintance of "Granny" Harrison.

During the brief administration of President William Henry Harrison—who was familiarly known to the Whigs as the "Cincinnatus of the West,' and to the Democrats as "Granny Harrison"—a plainly dressed man, looking like a solid, honest farmer, appeared one Saturday at the horse market in Washinton, where drovers were used to come in from the country to sell their cattle. Here he purchased a fine Durham from a Montgomery county drover.

"Where shall I drive it?" inquired the drover.

"To the White House. I will show you the way."

"Why, you don't mean to say, friend, that you've bought this 'ere beast for Granny Harrison?" demanded the drover, with dilated eyes.

"Yes, indeed, I have," replied the other.

The drover left his cattle in the care of his son and drove the Durham in the direction indicated, beguiling the tedium of the way with friendly chat. "I am a Democrat myself," he volunteered, "and voted for Van, of course, but the other day at the inauguration, I'll be doggoned if I didn't throw up my hat and hurrah for Granny Harrison with the rest."

"Thank you," said the other.

"Oh, you are a Whig: but I might have known that, for of course you have a situation in the White House."

"Yes."

"Wa-al, now, what be you? Gardner?"

"No."

"Coachman or body servant?"

"Neither. I suppose I may call myself a general servant."

"Oh, yes, I know; run errands, wait on the table and answer the door knocks, eh?"

"Something not very unlike that," responded his interlocutor, with a smile.

"Wa-al, now, do you see much of Granny Harrison?"

"Quite a good deal."

"How do you like the old fellow?"

"That is hard to say; too well, most likely.

By this time they had reached the White House, and the purchaser opened the gate that leads to the stable. Several men servants came forward, touching their hats.

"Take care of this cow and attend to her," said the purchaser, and then, turning to the drover, he asked him to come into the house and take some breakfast.

"Thank you, I don't care if I do. Say, could you get me a sight of old Granny Harrison?"

"Didn't you see him at the inauguration?"

"Law, yes, but not nigh enough to know what he looked like. I would like to get another squint at him, anyway."

"Then come in, friend," and the stranger ushered him into the family breakfast room, where breakfast was standing ready.

Here were more servants, who, with deep bows, placed chairs at the table. The drover began to be alarmed."

"Look a-here," he cried, "ain't you taking on great liberties? Granny Harrison wouldn't like this 'ere, now, would he?"

"Oh, yes, he would."

But still the drover hesitated.

"Now, just look a-here," he said, "ain't you too fresh? Who be you, anyhow?"

"The people call me William Henry Harrison and have made me president of the United States," quietly replied the other.

"Lord a'mighty!" cried the drover, and he bolted from the house and never stopped until he was off the grounds, where he sat down on the curbstone, and, as his wife afterwards described it, cursed himself gray.—Lippincott's.

His Wife Was Troubled.

The lawyer, who had been married for only a year, sent word to his wife that he had been suddenly called to Milwaukee. "I will be back to-morrow," he wrote. "Don't worry. My stenographer goes with me."

But she did worry. When he reached home next evening her eyes were red from weeping, and as soon as she saw him she broke down again. "Oh, how could you?" she sobbed.

"What's the matter?" he demanded.

"Your stenographer—" she begun, and again the sobbed.

"What's the matter with him?"

"Him. Was it a man?"

"Why, yes; I fired that girl a month ago."

"Oh, dearest, I never believed it for a moment, anyway."

My Toothache!

Is an exclamation heard every hour in the day. Toothache is the most common ailment of young and old, and in the aggregate inflicts more suffering than perhaps any other single complaint. A one minute cure is just what every person desires to possess. Nerviline—nerve pain cure—acts almost instantly in relieving the agony, and a sample bottle affords a quantity sufficient for 100 applications. 10 cents foots the bill. Polson's Nerviline is the only positive remedy for toothache and all nerve pains. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THERE'S DEATH IN THE KISS.

Germ Theory Progress Has Added Arguments Against Osculation—Bad Taste and Unhygienic.

It has been a long time now since the doctors and the hygienic people first raised the cry of "stop kissing." But lately the shout has been raised with redoubled vigor, says a writer in The New York World. The progress of the germ theory has added force to the arguments of the opponents of osculation, and the constantly growing dislike of the display of emotion has helped to decrease the number of those who practice the emotional rite.

They are quite right, the alarmists and the decriers of the tender custom. Kissing is a habit to be put down. It is, if one stops to consider the subject, an unpleasant custom. One has to use the mouth for such a variety of purposes purely practical, that to use it also for sentimental ones is putting too much upon it. Besides, there is a distinct lack of harmony between the two uses which ought to be offensive to a well-regulated mind.

Besides the aesthetic view of the affair, there is the conventional one. It is in bad taste to indulge in indiscriminate caressing. Society agrees with common sense in decreeing that. Kissing should be reserved for friends, the nearest and dearest, and for private life. The woman who kisses half a dozen people every time she meets them on the street or in the houses of her friends, writes herself down a hypocrite or a shallow sentimentalist. It is in poor taste to show distinctions in liking in public, and the woman who singles out eight or nine women to kiss out of a room full of people offers more or less of an offence to all the others. She emphasizes the fact that there are degrees in cordiality and hospitality. Therefore she is rude, and therefore kissing is an improper practice.

The hygienic point of view is certainly the most important. There are very few people who can feel that there is absolutely no physical flaw in them, and no woman who has any form of disease is justified in running the risk of communicating it to other people by kissing them—a method of contagion which physicians pronounce unequaled. To put the matter quite brutally, indiscriminate kissing is in bad taste, it is hypocritical and silly and it is unhygienic.

A Legal Levy.

The book peddler had called at the lawyer's office to sell him a book and the lawyer very peremptorily didn't want any book. The peddler insisted and the lawyer continued to decline. At last the lawyer rose in wrath.

"Now, look here," he said emphatically. "I've told you I don't want your book, and I mean what I say. Furthermore, my advice to you is to get out of this, promptly, or I'll throw you out."

The peddler was about to make a remark.

"And," interrupted the lawyer, "let me also say that if you hesitate, I shall charge you for that advice, and levy on your books to satisfy judgment. Now git," and the suppressed peddler got.

A Wise Precaution.

A Detroit man, who goes hunting occasionally without any great detriment to the live stock of the forests, though perhaps some to the live stock of the fields, concluded not long ago that he would organize an expedition of two and make a foray. So he consulted his office boy.

"I say, Tommy," he said, "how would you like to go out on a little hunt with me?"

"I don't know, sir," responded the boy in some doubt. "I'd have to see mother first."

"All right; ask your mother and let me know in the morning.

"The next morning the boy saw the gentleman.

"Well," he inquired, "what did your mother say?"

"She said," replied the boy very innocently, "that I might go if you would take somebody else along with us to do the shootin'."

It Was Safe.

"I suppose," said the would-be contributor to the editor, "that you are bothered a good deal by being offered jokes that have been printed already?"

"Yes, that is true."

"Well," said the caller, as he produced a manuscript from his inside pocket, "here is one that I will guarantee is original. It has never been in print."

The editor read it, and replied:

"I'll tell you something else about this joke."

"Well, sir."

"Not only has it never been in print, but it never will be."—Town Topics.

Y.P.S.C.E. NOTES.

PETERBOROUGH COUNTY UNION.

Norwood, Ont., Nov. 25th, 1894.

DEAR FRIENDS,—Christian Endeavour is not a standstill in Peterborough county—if we can judge by outward signs. Let us pray that our prosperity may be something more than mere appearance. That it may be real spiritual prosperity. Since our last county convention, several new societies have been organized; rallies have been held at many points; our two delegates have delivered their very encouraging and helpful reports of the Cleveland convention, and now the Executive have made arrangements for holding a series of rallies, at which are to be discussed those topics so strongly emphasized at all recent C. E. conventions, viz., "Christian Citizenship," "Missions and Systematic Giving" and "Junior Work." Bridgenorth, Springville, Coldsprings and Peterborough have already had rallies, and others will be held as soon as the Vice Presidents make arrangements for the places and dates of meetings, and correspond with the secretary of the central committee (Miss M. E. Frise, Peterborough) re speakers and final arrangements.

Just one thing more. I want to thank, on behalf of the Executive, those societies which have so generously responded to the call for funds for County Union work. We are now out of debt, but there are four months yet till another convention and more money will be required to carry on the work through the winter. If those societies which have not yet given anything will forward their share to the county work, we shall have money enough for the complete years work. If your society has not yet contributed, will you kindly bring the matter before your young people at their next meeting.

Yours in C. E.,
R. A. WARD,
Sec.-Treas. County Union.

P. S.—Do you or any member of your society ever send any items of C. E. news—a special meeting, a social, election of officers, committee work, etc., to our C. E. Editor, Mr. A. J. Johnston, box 865, Peterborough? If not, why not? He would be glad to receive such communication and publish them in the C. E. column of the local papers.

R. A. W.

C.E. RALLY AT COLD SPRINGS—OTONABEE.

On Friday evening, Nov. 23rd, a very successful rally was held at Cold Springs, Otonabee. A number of C.E. workers from the various Peterborough societies were present and took part in various ways. Mr. Albert Owens, of Cold Springs, occupied the chair. After singing, and prayer by Rev. Mr. Rae, of Peterborough, the juniors conducted a Bible reading, using Psalm xxiii.

Mr. R. A. Ward, of Norwood, County C. E. Secretary, thengave a talk on "Missions." He impressed the thought that lack of interest in missions is usually occasioned by lack of information as to the true state of affairs in heathen lands. He also urged systematic giving. Systematic study of the various mission fields by C.E. societies would also be very beneficial in its results.

"Christian Citizenship was the subject of a masterly and convincing address by Rev. Mr. Rae. He spoke on the qualifications, privileges and responsibilities of being a Christian citizen. We must first and foremost be loyal to the King of heaven, trusting in Him for His promised protection, and upholding and increasing where we can the honour and glory of the Master, by doing personal work for Him, and ever giving a bold and uncompromising confession of our citizenship. Unfortunately lack of space necessarily shortens this account of an address enjoyed by all who heard it.

Miss Quinn, Junior Superintendent for the county, then gave an interesting talk to the juniors who were present. She urged careful study of the Bible, and by some well chosen anecdotes, she showed its value and importance.

Mr. Crowe, Secretary of the Y.M.C.A., conducted the closing part, the consecration service, in a very impressive manner.

The rally was quite successful, and cannot fail to be helpful to all who attended. Cold Springs society belongs to the Peterborough local Union, and organized the first junior society in this county.

Good Advice.

A certain young man who resides in ward No. —, had been keeping company with a very amiable young lady with intentions towards matrimony, called on the evening appointed for their marriage and produced a small parcel. On examination she exclaimed, "Well, I am so thankful you bought the marriage license, gloves, &c., from W. J. Green, Hunter street, as now we are sure of having good luck." Try one—only a single trial solicited.

The Wabash Railway Trains

running every day in the year between Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City are the finest known to the railway service; they are complete and solid vestibuled from end to end, the entire train being a moving palace of connected apartments, all furnished with the most luxurious elegance and perfection of commodation known to the car builders' art. They include free reclining, palace, sleeping and dining cars of the latest and best patterns. Call on or write any railway agent for tickets and all information, or address J. A. RICHARDSON, Canadian passenger agent, north-east corner King and Yonge streets Toronto.

Protect your Horses.

Don't allow your valuable horses to go without a waterproof cover during the cold wet days of the fall. Be good to them, provide them with one of Kingscotte's strictly waterproof covers, costing only a dollar or two. If you are shipping and receiving goods that are liable to damage from wet, Kingscotte's black oiled canvas waterproof covers "fills the bill,"—nothing better or cheaper. They have no tar in their composition, being an oil preparation, which keeps them soft and pliable. Awnings taken down and stored in a careful and agreeable manner. Halls decorated for assemblies, balls and meetings of all kinds. ALF. KINGSCOTTE, tent, sail and awning maker, 314 Water street.

A DICKENS' CHARACTER.

THE "ARTFUL DODGER" LIVES IN GOTHAM.

Some of the Bad Boys of Our Neighbors' Big City Juvenile Pickpockets and Sneak Thieves as They Are Turned Out of an American Crook Academy.

Among our neighbors over the boundary line, where crime is of course more rampant than in peaceful, law abiding Canada, some queer criminals flourish. The "Artful Dodger" of Dickens's "Oliver Twist," has an exact counterpart in New York. An organized gang of juvenile pickpockets, and sneak thieves, as carefully trained and as thoroughly organized as any commanded by the great Fagin of fiction, have been deliberately operating in and around town for the past six months.

In many respects the artful little criminal leader is like the old Cockney's gang.

They all contribute to a common fund which is pooled by the boss. They work in "mobs" of three and four, each one having his special duty.

The "stall-workers," one "dipper" and a "spotter" form a mob. They are bound to secrecy by fear of the power of the "push" or gang. They firmly believe that the life of a "squealer" is not worth a moment's purchase.

Each "mob" of the St. Cry, is represented by one or two burly bullies who live upon the boys' earnings. But the ruling spirit of all this association of sin is controlled by a dandy little head of a four-teen year old boy.

Boy Fagin to Fagin. The Artful Dodger dominates the whole.

Abe Solomon, who is supposed to live at No. — Suffolk street, is the head as Artful Dodger of the wicked young crew.

The mysterious prince of pickpockets first acted in unenviable notoriety in May last. On the thirteenth day of that month two Polish lads, Michael Mendelovitch and Bernard Bagatzky, were arrested for stealing a pocketbook from a Miss Mary Conners, in Central Park. They professed to be perfect strangers to the one boy to the other. This is an essential part of the scheme taught in Solomon's school of thievery. Bagatzky, the elder of the boys, who gave his age as fifteen years, indignantly repudiated the idea of having a thief. He claimed that he worked hard for an iceman called Solomon. The proof of his hard work was found on his person in the shape of Mrs. Conner's pocket book.

Mendelovitch, the younger boy, stoutly stood out for his honesty at first, but when he found himself in the hands of the Gerry society for an indefinite period he expressed his willingness to "give the snap away." His story was received over the left his right hand and made a grab at a pear. At the same time she felt his left hand slip under pocket. She seized him, but was immediately surrounded by a dozen young hoodlums, and he wriggled away, but not before she had recognized him and others of the group as the redoubtable Solomon gang.

That night her son Benny went down to the junction of Essex and Division streets and there found the crew. He mingled with them, and being familiar with crooks' slang he readily picked a story that he had five cents from doing errands and was anxious for work. They told him it was no use "going it alone" down there. Solomon owned the whole show. A woman passed along and wishing to test them, Mendel put them on her as a plant. Quicker than thought they had emptied her pocket. The result was only a handkerchief. This achievement they pooh poohed. One of them bragged he had "lifted a leather" with seventy-three dollars old that very day. Mendel grabbed it and held on. But the gang came in for it, and he had to let go.

Finding Patrolman Ed Housmann, he took him to the boy's home, No. 85 Ludlow street. The boy, Sammy Abrahams, was in bed. His mother told he was thirteen years old, a good boy, and went regularly to school. But the allegation took him along, and the sight of an Eldridge street cell unsettled young Sammy to appeal. He said he was there when the pocketbook was stolen, but he did not do the job. He said the thieving was done by one of Abe Solomon's scholars called Davey Schapiro. He swore he had never attended the school, although he was quite familiar with the methods of poaching, and described the whole process in detail.

Schapiro was taken, and at the hearing was committed for trial at General Sessions, and Sammy Abrahams, against whom there was no direct evidence, was discharged with a caution. He profited by this caution so far as to change his scene of action to Coney Island. There on Sunday, Aug. 9, as a man called Davis, who keeps the camera obscura on Surf avenue, was standing outside his show, he saw two or three tiny young urchins surround a lady, while one slipped his hand into her pocket and withdrew it plus a fat pocketbook. He grabbed the boy and secured the purse just as it was being passed to another.

Five Life Chapters.

Gerhardt Hauptmann's "Die Weber" is said to be one of the most impressive representations of real life ever seen in New York. It takes a strong stomach to digest some of the stupendously strong scenes in the drama.

Yet it is a marvelous work. Play, you cannot call it. It is, rather, five chapters taken out of the book of life. Such a book! It makes one shudder to think that Hauptmann has taken his scenes from nature—that such hunger, such poverty, such soul anguish can possibly exist within the pale of civilization. We have, however, the author's word for it that he has simply transplanted to the stage an all too common sample of the sort of existence led by the Silesian peasants.

Sporting Notes.

Again Miss Rose Mosenthim has defeated Tillie Ashley at St. Louis, and she is now champion female sculler of the United States.

That was an enthusiastic gathering in the Broadway theatre the other night when the Giants were presented with the Temple Cup. Gothams big nine will make a strong bid for the pennant next season.

A sale of horses in training, the property of Messrs. McCafferty & Wishard and P. Lorillard, took place in the paddock at Morris Park the other day. Judge Morrow, a Brooklyn Handicap winner, brought the top price of $1,400, going to S. S. Howland. Kenwood, at one time a stake winner, sold for $5.

Wheeling Time.

And now the Ziegler, the California wonder, holds the mile flying start record, having clipped 3-4 of a second off John S. Johnson's 1.50 3-4 record. With the record at 1.50 flat it is no wonder that some person looks up and asks "What next?"

Norway Pine Syrup cures coughs, colds, hoarseness, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis etc.

TO RESTORE QUEEN LIL.

Evidences of a Formidable Conspiracy in the Hawaiian Islands.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28.—Advices from Honolulu per steamer Oceanic to November 20 are:

The government possesses evidence to prove that the new alleged conspiracy to restore the Queen is somewhat formidable but not enough to justify arrests. No matter of any actual attempt is now apprehended. It is not believed possible that any hostile expedition can or will be produced at San Francisco to aid the royalists. Any such force from abroad would no doubt be summarily dealt with by an American warship in port. What the British man of war Hyacinthe would do is not clear. It is believed she was detained from her intended cruise to the south Pacific by apprehension of trouble here.

The United States steamer Yorktown arrived on the 20th in before than eight days from San Francisco. She was expected to sail for Corea on the 22nd inst. It is hoped that the Bennington may arrive soon to protect American interests should any trouble arise.

President Dole since his return has received the British and French commissioners, who presented the recognitions of Great Britain by their respective governments and received their exequaturs.

WANT THE P. P. A. SUPPRESSED.

The Quebec Legislature to be Petitioned to This Effect.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28.—The Quebec Legislature is to be asked to suppress the Protestant Protective Association and the numerous leagues and alliances of a similar nature in the province of Quebec.

A movement which has the authorization of the high clerical authorities in the Roman Catholic church has been inaugurated in Montreal with this object in view, and a lively agitation is likely to result. Petitions are now being signed here and will be forwarded to the Legislature now in session. The petitions set forth that such societies as the P. P. A. are dangerous to the public peace and demand that the agents to the causes the present agitation in the Legislature and now disclosed and hatred between the different sections of the community. Their suppression is the result sought.

THE WAR IN THE EAST.

No Intimation of Peace Expressed in the Mikado's Message.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The Central News correspondent in Paris telegraphs: "The steamer Lawyne, formerly Chinese, has arrived at Kobe flying the German flag. She belongs among her passengers Mr. Detring and several other Chinese officials. Mr. Detring has already applied through the Governor of Hiogo for an official interview with Count Ito, the Japanese Prime Minister presumably for the purpose of discussing terms of peace. He brings with him a letter from Li Hung Chang."

SHANGHAI, Nov. 28.—A portion of the Japanese force has been withdrawn from Port Arthur, probably to take part in a movement on Tahien Wan. The British warship Daphne has left the fleet at Chee-Foo for Tien Tsin, taking with her a guard of 50 marines. A despatch to the Shanghai Mercury from Tien Tsin says that Li Hung Chang has departed for Pao-Ting Foo, where he will surrender the viceroyship to Lieu Kun Yi. The merchants of New-Chwang, fearing looters, are re-shipping merchandise to Shanghai. Chinese troops are disembarking at New-Chwang from a foreign vessel. It is expected in Chee Foo that Wei Hai Wei will be captured early in December. Refugees from Port Arthur are arriving here.

A despatch to the Morning Post from Yokohama says that the Mikado has sent the following message to Count Oyama's army: "Port Arthur, the gateway of the gulf of Pe Chi Li, was regarded by the enemy as the barrier of the country but you captured it with one effort. I highly approve your success. As the cold is increasing and as the end is still far off keep yourselves in good health that you may continue your exertions." A similar message has been sent to the Japanese naval force at Port Arthur.

It is said that Col. VonHanneken was first designated to assist Port Arthur and that the Chinese plan was altered to enable him to organize the defence of Sham-Hai-Kwan. This is an immensely important position inasmuch as it is the point of departure from the coast to Pekin. It is believed that his labors have made the city impregnable.

A Graduate of Toronto University says:

"My children have been treated with Scott's Emulsion from their earliest years. Our physician first recommended it and now whenever a child takes cold my wife immediately resorts to this remedy, which always effects a cure."

Western Grain Dealers Boycott the East

WINNIPEG, Nov. 28.—As a result of the recent controversy between the western and eastern grain dealers regarding the mixing of wheat in transit the western dealers have decided to boycott the eastern men altogether. Several orders received yesterday from Toronto and Montreal buyers were ignored. Henceforth all grain shipped from here will go to New York direct instead of via Toronto or Montreal. A member of the Winnipeg grain exchange states that hitherto western shippers have been fleeced unmercifully by eastern buyers in various ways. Consignments of grain would be refused for trivial reasons or no reasons at all.

Cholera in Brazil.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—The Herald's special from Buenos Ayres says: Rio Janeiro advices state that cholera has appeared among Chinese Coolies in various parts of the state of Rio Janeiro and Santos. The disease causes death in a few hours, and doctors are undecided whether it is cholera or a new type of yellow fever. Gen. Conrad Neimeyer, the defender of Nictheroy in the recent revolution, has been appointed chief of the Presidents' military staff. Final accounts of the expenses of the army during the revolution show a deficit of $12,000,000 in gold.

Robbed the Hotel Guests.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28. Detective Silas H. Carpenter, of the Canadian Secret Service Bureau, who arrested two young men at Auburndale, Ont., has arrived in town with them. Their names are Albert Thorne and David E. Brown, employes in the Turkish Baths Hotel and the charge against them is that of having robbed guests in the hotel. Detective Carpenter succeeded in recovering $300 worth of stolen property, when brought before Judge Desnoyers the prisoners pleaded not guilty and were remanded for eight days.

The Epidemics in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28. Diphtheria and scarlet fever are still on the increase. The civic authorities will open the contagious disease hospital today. Anti-toxine serum will be used on diphtheria patients, and if results are satisfactory an institution for the preparation of the serum will be opened.

The Use of Glasses.

Speaking from over twenty years' experience, I can sum up in a few words some of the results of indiscriminate use of glasses. In the case of odd eyes—gradual weakening of the good eye and making it much more susceptible to disease such as glaucoma, iritis, etc. In cases of astigmatism unsuitable glasses will cause neuralgic pains in the eyes, frontal headache, nausea, paralysis of the accommodation, resulting in permanently impaired vision which no skill can restore. The time will come, and I hope soon, when sight-testing opticians will be placed on the same footing as dentists and chemists, and have to pass an examination before being allowed to practice. Very truly,

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Clara Ford Confessed to the Murder of Frank Westwood

BECAUSE HE ASSAULTED HER

Evidence at the Preliminary Investigation—The Damaging Testimony of Detective Reburn—Her Supposed Daughter Takes the Stand.

TORONTO, Nov. 29.—The preliminary examination of Clara Ford, charged with the murder of Frank Westwood, was held yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Westwood, Dr. Lynd, Stephen Leslie and Miss Ellen Watson, all witnesses at the inquest, testified to the shooting of Young Westwood, giving practically the same evidence as given at the inquest. The latter thought she saw the prisoner on Jameson avenue the night of the tragedy.

Flora McKay's Evidence.

Florence McKay, who is reported to be the daughter of the prisoner, was then called. The witness said she had known the prisoner ever since she was born. She remembered Saturday, the 6th of October. She saw the prisoner on York street, where she was working on the 5th, or the evening previous, about 8 o'clock. She sat in the store with her, where she made an appointment to meet at Bay and Richmond streets at 7.30 o'clock on the following evening. At that time she was working at a Miss Watson's on Richmond street. She went to meet her on Saturday evening to the theatre, but did not see her all evening.

Witness had engaged to go to work at 223 Jarvis street that day, at Mrs. Phyals. The prisoner knew that. The following Saturday (the 13th) witness again saw the prisoner.

On Friday night Clara told me to tell the missus, if see asked, that we were at the theatre on Saturday night. On Saturday, the 13th, Clara asked if I had heard about the murder and I said I had seen it in the paper. Clara told me since her arrest that she had already told me that she was at Parkdale on Saturday night, the 6th, and not to say anything about it. She said I had got mixed up about it. She also said she had told the detectives everything.

Witness recognized a cloak produced as belonging to the prisoner, but did not recognize several other articles of clothing. Saw Clara once in a suit of man's clothing. Never saw Clara with a revolver.

To Mr. Murdoch—Lived on Richmond street about a month with Miss Watson. Clara had been there once with witness. Left on October 10. Know Detective Slemin. Saw him at Mrs. Phyals on Tuesday of last week. Detective Porter was with him. Was alone with the two in the parlor. They asked me if I had been to the theatre with Clara and I said I had. Did not know they were detectives. Am 14 years old. The two men did not frighten me, but I thought it was at first. That was the only conversation. Witness was brought to the police station. I said it was Saturday night I had been to the theatre. Cannot remember what Saturday, but some time ago. Saw Inspector Stark in the detectives' office Read the newspapers about Clara since her arrest. Stayed one night at police headquarters in the matron's room. Left after breakfast and went back to Mrs. Phyals'. Mr. Reburn and Inspector Stark spoke to me in the matron's room. Slemin and Reburn took me in to see Clara.

To Mr. Curry—Had been with Clara to the Academy of Music. The detectives asked me if I had been to the Toronto Opera House and I said I had not at first, but afterwards changed my answer to "Yes." They asked if there was any stabbing or shooting done at the theatre, and I said "No." That was the night Mr. Westwood was shot, and the "Black Crook" was being played. On the second occasion they said they knew I was not at the theatre, and I said I was not. The reason I said I was at the theatre that Saturday was because I thought they would think that Clara shot Frank Westwood. I knew Clara dressed up in men's clothes, and I thought right away the detectives might suspect Clara. Witness knew Frank Westwood, but did not know whether Clara did or not. Had not seen Frank since she left Parkdale, where her mother lived.

To Mr. Murdoch witness said she had only seen Clara in boy's clothing on one occasion.

Mrs. Phyal, who keeps the boarding house at 223 Jarvis, where Flora McKay works, gave her evidence in a simple, direct manner. She said: I know the previous witness, who came there the Wednesday after the murder. She came there on Saturday, the 6th, about 8 o'clock. Saw the prisoner at the house once, asking about Florence, whether she went out at night. Clara also said it was strange Westwood should be shot the night little Percy Clarke died, and Priestman the night he was born.

To Mr. Murdoch—Knew Clara Ford five or six years. Lived near where old Mrs. Mackay lived. Never saw anything wrong with Clara. Heard of her dressing in male attire but never saw her

Mrs. Mary Crozier, 34 Camden street, was the next to testify. She said: I knew the prisoner and lived in the house with her. Prisoner left in March last. Witness did her laundry work. Never saw anything but ladies' wear about Clara, but she had a revolver in her room. Clara was at my house on October 6 with the rest of the children. She left about 9 o'clock. We were talking, and Clara said she was going to Parkdale for little Flora to take her to the opera. She said if she didn't hurry up it would be too late to meet Flora. It was then about 9 o'clock, and Clara said she was afraid it was too late. She got up, buttoned her coat and left the house. Saw the end of a revolver sticking out of a breast pocket. Clara had been drinking a little. Never saw the men's clothes produced before.

On Monday witness called the attention of Clara to the Westwood tragedy, and Clara said, "Oh, ain't I glad I wasn't there or I might be blamed for it." Afterwards she said that whoever did it must have known the place well; a person not acquainted could not get around very well in that neighborhood. She also said it was strange Westwood was shot on the day little Clark died, and Pristman on the day he was born.

The cross-examination of Mrs. Crozier was continued by Mr. Murdoch. She went to live on Camden street in October, 1893. Had known the prisoner for three years. Heard about the shooting on October 8th where she was working. Clara came in on Monday about 8 o'clock. Detectives Slemin and Porter saw witness on Tuesday week. The children were kept out because she did want a scandal published about Clara or herself. Witness gave them a hat that Clara had given her a few days after the shooting. I did not call in response to Mr. Murdoch's request. Went down to the station with the officers and saw Clara. Never saw Clara in male attire. I pointed out the article in the paper to the prisoner. Clara was always an honest, hard-working girl so far as witness knew. Never knew Clara to drink but once before. Clara only laughed when told she had a revolver in her pocket.

Maggie and Sarah Crozier corroborated the evidence given by their mother.

The next witness was William Mc Knight, a boy about 14 years of age, who lives at 133 Tecumseh street. Mr. Crozier and he, he said, were talking to Clara and at the last of the conversation the murder of Frank Westwood came up. Clara ventured the opinion that the case would be as much of a mystery as the Handcock murder. She did not think it would ever be found out. She also said that she knew the Westwood premises and surroundings.

George Crozier, one of the Crozier family, said he lived at the same address as the previous witness. On the 10th of October Clara Ford was at his house. She talked over the shooting affair with him and in the course of the conversation she said that whoever did commit the deed must have got away by the water or by a bush fence to Hawthorne avenue.

Temple Cooper, one of the chums of the deceased lad, told of the last night young Westwood was able to be out and around the streets.

The Arrest.

Detective Slemin was then put in the box and testified to the arrest of the prisoner. He found in her bedroom the suit of male clothes, a 38-calibre revolver and four cartridges. As she was handing him the weapon she said: "Oh, it's the Westwood case. I can prove where I was that night. I was at the Toronto Opera House and the play was 'The Black Crook.'" This statement was voluntary on her part.

Her Confession to Reburn.

Sergt. Reburn then took the stand. He said: "The prisoner was brought into the station about 4 o'clock in the afternoon of last Tuesday. In the detective office on the desk were the clothes and revolver. She was brought in and sat opposite me. I told her she was suspected of a very serious offence—the shooting of Frank Westwood. I cautioned her. She said she was at the theatre on the night in question with Flora McKay. I told her not to say anything that was untrue. She said that after she left the theatre she went up Yonge street. It was then ten minutes past 11. She said she did not know Frank Westwood at all.

"Florence McKay was then brought down and taken into the detective's bedroom and interviewed. Then I returned to Clara Ford. The stories of Clara and Flora did not agree, so I resolved to keep Clara in custody. With regard to the clothes she said they belonged to her. She said she gave Mrs. Crozier the fedora, and that is where Mrs. Crozier first came into the case.

"I had still another interview with Clara Ford. There was nobody else present. I said, 'Clara, I've got information that you weren't at the theatre; that you were at Mrs. Crozier's on that night.' She denied this, so I sent for Mrs. Crozier and Flora McKay. Then she commenced to abuse Mrs. Crozier for putting 'the lie' on her. I had another conversation with the little girl and as a result went back to Clara Ford. But before, in Clara's presence, the little girl said that they were not at the theatre, and that Clara had told her to say she was if anybody had asked her. Then Clara turned on the little girl, but I stopped her and told her to say nothing or it would be used against her."

"Subsequently when the Croziers had left I took her into the commissioners' room and she remarked: 'There's no use my deading you any longer in the matter.' She was warned again not to say anything.

"Then she said, 'I shot Frank Westwood.'

"What was your reason?" asked Reburn.

"About last July he tried to knock me down at the foot of Jameson avenue and assault me. He often teased me because I was colored. I went along King street to Dufferin and then down into a street, where I took off this skirt and this jacket. I put them under the crossing. I had the male clothes on underneath my dress.

"I could not tell what time it was. I saw Frank Westwood, and two more on Jameson avenue. I went down to the foot of Jameson avenue and stood in the dark on the east side. I saw Frank come down and go in the house. I went through the picket fence and into Mr. Westwood's premises. I got behind a tree and stood there for fifteen or twenty minutes. Then I went up and rang the door bell. There was a dim light in the hall. Frank Westwood came to the door and leaned out. Then I shot at him, but I never dreamed I was going to kill him. I only fired one shot, then ran down to the boat house and went back and got the clothes. Then at the foot of Dufferin street I went underneath the wharf and along the waterfront to the foot of Bathurst street. From Bathurst street I went to King street and from there to my house on York street. When I used to live up there I was teased and tantalized by the boys. I think it was all right to wear men's clothes. I had six cartridges. I shot Frank Westwood with one and at ducks with the other."

Here Clara asked to see Florence and when the little girl came told her that she had told the detectives all and she had better tell the truth. Flora told her that she had told the truth and that she was not at the theatre.

Clara also told the witness that she did not believe Frank Westwood recognized her when she shot him. She thought she was perfectly justified in shooting him, although she was sorry she had done it. Inspector Stark was then called in, and she repeated the story to him.

The next morning Reburn saw her again, when she remarked: "I guess my time's short."

Reburn suggested that she should get a lawyer, but she said that she did not want any. She said she was going to plead guilty and tell the whole story to the magistrate. Then she sent for Mr. Murdoch and he came.

While Reburn was relating this most damning evidence the prisoner sat motionless in the dock with her gaze fixed squarely on the magistrate. Her attitude seemed to be that of an injured woman rather than anything else. Her lawyer objected to the evidence as being irrelevant to the inquiry. His objection was noted.

In an interview at the jail the prisoner told Sergt. Reburn that he had got the wrong person and that she was not guilty of the crime. Reburn traversed the distance by the way Clara Ford described from Mrs. Crozier's on Camden street. It took him an hour and 55 minutes.

Defendant was then committed for trial.

During the entire hearing the prisoner sat in the corner of the commodious dock and to all appearances took very little interest in the proceedings.

THE DEEP WATER ASSOCIATION.

Draft of a Bill to be Presented to the United States Congress.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—A circle of secrecy surrounded the proceedings of the executive committee of the deep water convention yesterday. All the morning the question of whether the United States shall be at liberty to use Canada's ship canals was discussed behind locked doors. There were present two high public officials, one representing the United States and one Canada, whose names were not given out.

The most imprrtant thing done by the committee was the adoption of a draft of a bill to be presented to Congress for prompt action. The bill embodies all the concessions and privileges for which the convention has been fighting since its foundation. The morning's meeting completed the present session of the executive committee, which adjourned to meet in Nashville, Tenn., subject to the call of the chairman.

It was decided to hold the next annual convention in Cleveland in September next. The essential features of the bill adopted are as follows:

"That the United States shall enter into negotiations with Canada with a view to obtaining free use of the monster canals of the latter country, for which privilege the United States is to agree to keep them in repair.

"That certain restrictions as to the use of the canals by naval vessels will be imposed as a necessity, owing to the terms of the treaty between the two nations on this subject."

THE FRENCH TREATY.

Debate in the Chamber of Deputies Previous to Its Adoption.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Previous to the vote on the French treaty in the Chamber of Deputies a lively debate was precipitated when the item was reached on the order paper. Opposition developed through the members from Normandy and Brittany, who protested in the interest of the apple trade, while others said the timber industry and the lobster fisheries would be sacrificed. M. Hemon and Comte de Pontbriand were among the objectors. M. Berger and M. Meline, however, (the latter a rabid protectionist) insisted that France would regain in the sale of wines what she would lose on the score of the articles enumerated.

The debate was concluded by a statement from M. Honataux, minister of foreign affairs, who carried the house with him in an eloquent speech, saying that Canada had showed its feeling toward France by concluding its first treaty with the country from which so many "Canadiens" had originally sprung. He added, too, that this feeling was shared by all the leading people of Canada. The terms of the treaty, M. Honataux said, were mutually advantageous to France and Canada; neither desired nor had they secured an advantage. The motion to ratify the treaty was carried by acclamation.

Trolley Collides With a Waggon.

KINGSTON, Nov. 29.—An electric car collided with a horse and waggon driven by Ald. G. W. Robinson. Mr. Robinson was driving down Clarence street at a good speed and the waggon rattling considerably on the hard road, making it difficult to hear any approaching vehicles. As the rig turned the corner the car was seen coming in a westerly direction. Mr. Robinson endeavored to rein his horse but the animal shied and reared until the cars were almost on top of him, making a plunge forward. Just as the collision came Ald. Robinson was thrown heavily to the ground, striking on his head and shoulders. A boy named Albert Wood, who was with him, was also severely injured. Both patients are reported to be doing well. Young Woods' father was killed about a year ago in a railway collision at Havelock.

A Fatal Runaway.

NEW DUNDEE, Nov. 29.—Mr. Moses Hunsberger, aged 50, a highly-respected farmer of this neighborhood, who had been in New Dundee on business, was driving home, westward, when an axle of his buggy broke when near Poth's crossing. The wheel came off and the broken axle struck the horse, causing it to kick and dash off furiously. When the maddened animal reached the crossing it turned sharply on to the bank at Chipman's hill and partly overturned the rig, causing Mr. Hunsberger to be thrown out on his head, causing such injuries that he died in an hour and a half.

A CONSERVATIVE OPINION.

Mr. Marter, the leader of the Opposition in the Local Legislature, has by this time found Mr. Meredith's shoes several sizes too large. He has not achieved, so far, very much success. His management of the London election was, as the unwashed might say, a "bad break," and no one is more severe upon his fiasco than his own political friends, some by ominous silence and some by outspoken and hostile criticism. The most outspoken and bitter condemnation of the new Conservative leader is made by Mr. E. King Dodds, whose Conservatism is of the most pronounced and undoubted azure brand. In his paper, the "Canadian Sportsman," Mr. Dodds refers to Mr. Marter, in such criticism and in such virulence of language, that it would properly be considered reprehensible coming from the most out and out Liberal or Opposition journal. Mr. Dodds says:

"Heavy though the load was that the Conservative party of London had to carry in such a candidate (Mr. Essery) the burden was increased when they imported Mr. Marter, the Opposition leader, into the campaign. The torch of religious intolerance had been held aloft by the candidate and his leader appeared equally willing to assist in keeping it blazing. The two speeches he made in London were the sorriest political deliverance that ever issued from the mouth of a member of the Legislature, much less from one, who, for the time being at any rate, poses as a political leader. It was the veriest twaddle ever heard outside the circle of a country debating club, and no wonder that those, who listened to it, marvelled that such a man should pose as a leader of anything more pretentious than a tea party. * * * Had he remained away from London it might have been possible for the Conservatives up there to claim that an able man had been selected to fill Mr. Meredith's position, but it was not possible to make them believe any such story after they had listened to his small talk. The descent from William Ralph Meredith to Marter is too unfathomable for the common mind to grapple with, and those electors of London, who heard his speeches in favour of Mr. Essery, must have been paralyzed with astonishment at such a man being chosen successor to so able a predecessor.

"The editor of this paper (The Sportsman) is known as a staunch Conservative all over Canada, but he considers it cause for general congratulation in view of the bigoted appeals made in his behalf that the party candidate was not only defeated in London, but defeated largely through the influence of the Conservative support given to his opponent. Mr. Marter may in the strength of his own conceit imagine himself a sounder Protestant than those who proclaim their faith in less public places than in the market squares and on the house tops, but the severe rebuke administered to him by this London election ought to convince him that the intelligence of the Canadian electorate condemns all such appeals as he indulged in. Mr. Marter's personal opinions on any public question are not of any moment, but what he says in his official capacity as leader of the Conservative party in the Ontario Legislature attracts some public attention, and we once more express our intense satisfaction that the electors of London administered to him such a scathing rebuke. The parish politics of Muskoka, in which school he was educated, won't do in the broader arena of provincial legislation, and we much fear Mr. Marter wasn't caught young enough to make him a broad and liberal-minded citizen."

It is said in Scripture that all that a man hath will he give for his life. In these days of struggle for existence the spirit of this saying is reversed. There are instances where men have given their lives for a mere pittance of a few dollars a week. At Gananoque within a week, two men have died of "grinder's consumption," and another is at the point of death with the same disease. They were employed to grind the carriage springs in the spring factory, and the particles of grindstone and steel, being inhaled, caused irritation of the lungs and death.

Since the London election, the Empire has not been clamouring much for a special and immediate session of the Legislature.

Killed in a Quarry.

St. John, N.B., Nov. 29.—While working in the quarry at Piaster Rock, on the Tobique Valley railway, Van Hutchinson lost his life. He was excavating a heavy piece of rock which weighed three tons when it unexpectedly fell, striking the unfortunate man on the head, and crushing him in a terrible manner. He died almost instantly. Deceased was 22 years of age, unmarried and resided at Andover

Mrs. Plater Suicided.

Hamilton, Nov. 29.—Mrs. Plater, the woman who took the poison compound, has died from the effects. A note was found written by deceased in which she said she was tired of life and wanted to die. Dr. Philp says Mrs. Plater suffered from melancholia due to ill health. No inquest will be held. Mrs. Plater leaves a husband and eight young children.

Daniel Shea Still Missing.

Hamilton, Nov. 29.—Nothing has been seen or heard of Daniel Shea, the missing volunteer, who mysteriously disappeared after the sham battle in Toronto on Thanksgiving Day, Thursday last. Mrs. Shea is nearly distracted on account of her husband's absence, and friends of Shea are inclined to believe he has met with an accident and lost his life.

A Passenger Association Defunct.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—To-day the western passenger association passes out of existence. Yesterday its chairman, H. D. Caldwell, resigned. In case a new association is formed comprising the Western and trans-continental lines Chairman Caldwell will undoubtedly be chosen to conduct its affairs.

Earthquake in Quebec.

Montreal, Nov. 29.—A despatch from Huntingdon says two severe shocks of earthquake were felt there yesterday. The windows in the Court House rattled violently. The shock was also felt at Athelstan and Crimatown.

The Gas Wells at Dunnville.

Dunnville, Ont., Nov. 29.—The Central Gas Co., which is the fourth company operating here, struck a powerful flow of natural gas in their first well yesterday. Twelve gas wells have been drilled here by the different companies within the past two or three years, all proving to be producers without a single failure. Messrs. Rolson & Co., one of the other firms operating in this natural fuel, will begin their second well at once.

TORONTO BOODLING INQUIRY.

Ex-Alderman J. E. Verral Was Promised $5,000 for His Vote.

Toronto, Nov. 28.—The inquiry into municipal contracts was resumed yesterday before County Judge McDougall. The most important evidence elicited was that from ex-Ald. J. E. Verral, who, it will be remembered, was declared by Contractor Guelich, of Detroit, to have approached him in Headquarters saloon a few hours before the council was going to vote on the paving contract for which Guelich was tendering, and told Guelich that his contract could only go through if Guelich paid over $15,000.

Mr. Verral absolutely denied the truth of this statement, but declared, on the contrary, that on the day of the vote ex-Ald. Harry Piper met him in Evans' saloon, near the city hall, and showed him a letter signed by Gen. Robertson, a partner of Guelich in Detroit, which virtually promised him $5,000 for his vote in the council. The words of the letter, so far as he could recollect, on the subject were: "Ald. Verral has been our friend throughout, and if the contract passes the council all right he is to receive $5,000."

Ex-Ald. Stewart, who resigned his seat in the council a week or two ago on account of statements in Judge McDougall's interim report, announces his intention of running for the council again at the impending municipal elections.

Regarding An Impropriety.

A young woman was arrested in Berlin for kissing such men as came her way, both publicly and privately. Kissing of this kind has generally gone to the other sex, and it is frequently a bad rule that works both ways; but it is most surprising than any woman should have so little refinement as to make an open display of her susceptibilities when it is so easy to exercise them without publicity and far more satisfactorily. Think of the annoyance to the person hugged.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

Toronto, Nov. 29, 1894.

Canadian barley in Oswego is quoted at 60 to 63c.

On the street here 900 bushels of wheat brought 60 1-2c for white and 59 1-2 for red. Some 3,000 bushels of barley sold at 40 to 45 1-2c; one load of peas at 55c, and 800 oats at 30 to 31 1-2.

At Buffalo the demand for barley is improving and Canada is strong, while western No. 2 is a shade easier; 10,000 bushels No. 2 sold at 61c.

Wheat was dull in Chicago with a tendency to advance, May closing 5-8c higher Corn was affected by reduced receipts and the rise and gained 3-8 and 1-2 on the day Oats were dull and steady.

At East Buffalo sheep and lambs offerings were 30 cars all told, including the hold-overs, mostly all Canada lambs. The market ruled dull and weak, though some of the best Canadas were sold as high as $4.

For once the New York stock market was substantially what had been expected When Wall street has no single future incident on which to pin its hope and fear the market is apt to reflect with greatest truth the facts of the situation. The weakness in the market was not uniform Some of the Granger stocks were relatively firm, Northwestern especially reflecting early efforts to cover by a short interest whose judgment of results had proved mistaken. The industrial stocks, however, were special marks for selling and their decline was in some cases heavy.

HOUSE'S EVIDENCE.

Important Testimony About an Absolute Cure for Bright's Disease of the Kidneys.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 29th. — There are hundreds of citizens in this place who to-day cheerfully and gratefully join with your Pennsylvania correspondent in giving testimony to the full success of Dodd's Kidney Pills in the treatment of Bright's disease of the kidneys. Any one writing Mr. J. M. House can easily verify my statement. As you value your health, as you desire long life, free from sickness and suffering, give your kidneys attention. Keep them in good condition by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and thus prevent the insidious Bright's Disease from gaining a foothold.

FULL OF ENCOURAGEMENT
FOR ALL WOMEN.

In Bed 5 Months—Had Given Up All Hope of Getting Well—A Remedy Found at Last to which "I Owe My Life."

Science has fully established the fact that all the nervous energy of our bodies is generated by nerve centres located near the base of the brain. When the supply of nerve force has been diminished either by excessive physical or mental labours, or owing to a derangement of the nerve centres, we are first conscious of a languor or tired and worn-out feeling, then of a mild form of nervousness, headache, or stomach trouble, which is perhaps succeeded by nervous prostration, chronic indigestion, and dyspepsia, and a general sinking of the whole system. In this day of hurry, fret and worry, there are very few who enjoy perfect health; nearly everyone has some trouble, an ache, or pain, a weakness, a nerve trouble, something wrong with the stomach and bowels, poor blood, heart disease, or sick headache; all of which are brought on by a lack of nervous energy to enable the different organs of the body to perform their respective work.

South American Nervine Tonic, the marvellous nerve food and health giver, is a satisfying success, a wondrous boon to tired, sick, and overworked men and women, who have suffered years of discouragement and tried all manner of remedies without benefit. It is a modern, a scientific remedy, and in its wake follows abounding health.

It is unlike all other remedies in that it is not designed to act on the different organs affected, but by its direct action on the nerve centres, which are nature's little batteries, it causes an increased supply of nervous energy to be generated, which in its turn thoroughly oils, as it were, the machinery of the body, thereby enabling it to perform perfectly its different functions, and without the slightest friction.

If you have been reading of the remarkable cures wrought by South American Nervine, accounts of which we publish from week to week, and are still sceptical, we ask you to investigate them by correspondence, and become convinced that they are true to the letter. Such a course may save you months, perhaps years, of suffering and anxiety.

The words that follow are strong, but they emanate from the heart, and speak the sentiments of thousands of women in the United States and Canada who know, through experience, of the healing virtues of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, a prominent and much respected lady, writes as follows:—

"I owe my life to the great South American Nervine Tonic. I have been in bed for five months with a scrofulous tumour in my right side, and suffered with indigestion and nervous prostration. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I cannot recommend it too highly."

Tired women, can you do better than become acquainted with this truly great remedy?

FRASERVILLE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

The annual closing meeting of Frazerville cheese factory took place in the factory on Friday the 23rd. There was a large attendance of the Patrons. Mr. John Mouncey, the chairman, called the meeting to order, and called for the auditors report. Mr. T. M. Hunter rose and read a lengthy report, which gave a detailed account of the business, and dealt at some length on the business methods of the officers of the factory, The report was very satisfactory to the Patrons, showing that the secretary had performed his work very accurately the auditors only discovering but two slight mistakes in a business of over $9,000 for the season. The cheese makers and president's books were reported correct. After an animated discussion the report was adopted. The secretary gave a summarized report of the entire seasons business, showing it to be entirely satisfactory. The average quantity of milk for a pound of cheese was 10 7-10, and the average price obtained 9¾c, and the total quantity of milk delivered at the factory was 1,250,000 lbs. The president made a few remarks commenting severely on some of the inspectors sent out by buyers on the board, who apparently only understood part of their business, and at times caused much dissatisfaction to to those who had dealings with them. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:

President and Salesman—J. W. Fisher, Esq.

Secretary—Jos. Madill.

Directors—Jas. Clarke, jr., Jno Mouncey, Alex. Hunter, David McIlmoyle, Mr. Howson, John Lightfood, Thos. Donaldson.

Auditors—Robt. Waterman and T. M. Hunter.

The five year term which the patrons agreed with Mr. Pue for, expired this year and was promptly renewed, the most particular part of which Mr. Pue guaranteed to manufacture a first class article and pay all expenses worth mentioning for 2 cents per lb. of cheese, which is entirely satisfactory to the patrons. Mr. Pue during the past term has been very painstaking, sparing no expense with a view to build up a prosperous business in this district, for which he deserves much credit. Mr. E. E. Kline, of Pine Grove, who has been cheesemaker there for the past number of years, and was successful in having his cheese sell in first selections at almost every sale during the past two years on the board, was present, and gave a short address on the difficulties cheesemakers had to cope with at times. Mr. Kline, with his usual frankness of manner and his district reputation as a first class cheesemaker, impressed the patrons and Mr. Pue, which resulted in the latter engaging Mr. Kline for the coming season at a high salary. With such a pleasing record for the past and guaranteed success for the future Frazerville cheese factory will no doubt double its already large business within the next few years, under such management as Mr. Pue is giving it. It was decided to hold the annual oyster supper as soon as the committee of management can arrange with some of the agricultural professors, possibly Prof. Dean, of Guelph. These meetings have afforded the patrons great pleasure in the past and the Committee of Management propose making this one surpass any ever held.

It was reported by some of the patrons present that the proprietor and cheese maker of Ida cheese factory had been around through the district soliciting patronage for his factory for the coming season, even coming within a few miles of this factory, offering as a special inducement that he would deliver to them by his milk drawers their whey in their milk cans next day.

This is a slim piece of business—not becoming in any public business, exhibiting a disposition to resort to desperate means to keep himself afloat. It is well known that Ida cheese factory patrons were called upon to vote Mr. Gillespie a special concession in order to allow him to come out with this season's business without loss.

Mr. Gillespie's action was emphatically denounced by the patrons present. Judging from their expressions of opinion as to his sour little bait which he held out, that of delivering the whey in the milk cans next day, he is not likely to have much success in his attempt to win patronage for his cheese factory. It is to be hoped that none of our patrons will be decoyed into a trap with a little whey, that they will be called upon at the end of the season to recoupe the employed to let him and them out.

MILLBROOK.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mr. Hamilton Kennedy died at his residence one mile south of here, at 6 o'clock Tuesday morning. Less than a week ago Mr. Kennedy was apparently in the best of health, but when he was getting out of bed on Wednesday morning he was stricken with paralysis, and fell to the floor. For nearly a week he lingered, and it was though he would recover, but on Tuesday morning the sad intelligence of his death spread rapidly through the town and country. Mr. Kennedy was the only son of Mr. Hugh Kennedy, a wealthy retired farmer of Cavan. He was a most successful farmer, and a devoted member of the Methodist church. Eleven years ago he married the second daughter of the late Wm. Whitfield, who, together with four small children survives him.

Among those that spent Thanksgiving in town were Dr. Norman Allen, Albert Chambers, Fred Clary and Master Frank Blakely, of Toronto, A. T. Elliott of Beaverton, and W. Buchanan of Peterborough.

Rev. Mr. Cattenach, of Centreville, preached in the Methodist church morning and evening last Sunday.

Miss Robinson of Peterborough, spent Thanksgiving in town, the guest of Miss Kate Carveth.

Miss Barker of Port Hope is visiting at the residence of Mr. Wm. Coombe.

Miss Cochrane, of Peterborough, is visiting her uncle, Mr. Jas. Cochrane.

The Royal Templars will give the first of their monthly entertainments in their hall on Friday evening. A good programme will be rendered.

The concert given last Thursday evening under the auspices of the Mechanics' Institute was a success in every particular. The proceeds amounted to fifty dollars.

The new post office was opened for business on Monday morning. It is a decided improvement on the old one.

E. J. Guy, grain merchant, spent Sunday at his home in Oshawa.

A. M. Orr, who recently sold out his blacksmith business to W. Langton, has purchased a shop in Welcome, and will remove their shortly.

NORWOOD NEWS NOTES.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mr. F. W. Wilkins and family have removed to Ottawa.

The Model School term will end on Friday, Dec. 7th. The examinations will open on the Monday following, and will last about four days.

The new blocks of stores which are being built by Messrs P. W. Reynolds and Ira N. Ackerman, respectively, are almost ready for roofing.

Thanksgiving services were held in the Methodist and Presbyterian churches on Thanksgiving morning.

The concert given by the Knox College Glee Club was very successful, so far as the programme was concerned, but might have been better financially. Those present were well pleased with the fine programme which was presented.

On Tuesday evening, an "at home" was was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. David Fraser for the members of the Epworth League. During the evening, Mrs. Fraser was presented with a beautiful present in recognition of her services as organist at the meetings of the society.

The Norwood High School football club won a great victory on Saturday. The Knox College football team is one of the best in Ontario and has seldom been defeated, but they were overmatched by the Norwood team. At the beginning of the game the weather was fine and the wind in favour of the visitors. The play was very even and it was hard to say which did the better work, though the home team was decidedly superior in quick and close passing. During second half time the play was in favour of the Norwood team. There were two goals scored, the first by Bert Hendren by a very clever shot, the second by Ritchie. The second goal, however, was disallowed by the referee, on account of a foul which he had not seen.

A MOTHER'S STORY.

She Tells How her Daughter Regained Health After Doctors had Given Her Up—Hope for Others Similarly Suffering.

Mrs. Walker, of Verona, Ont., writes as follows: "I believe it to be my duty to let the public know what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for my daughter Emma, in the hope that her experience may be the means of pointing out the way to renewed health on the part of some other sufferer. My daughter had been troubled with pains in the head and shoulders for over two years. She was very pale in colour, easily tired and capable of but very little exertion. Every month she would bleed at the nose, sometimes for two or three days at a time. The doctor who attended her said that she was in a decline, and he had but little hopes of her living any length of time. We tried many remedies but with no good results. Sometimes she would rally for a few days, but always sunk back to a weaker condition than before. She had to discontinue going to school, and as the winter advanced her cough became so bad that our friends thought she would not live long. I had read much about your Pink Pills and we determined to give them a trial. Before she had finished the second box there was a decided improvement in her condition and, after taking the pills for about two months, she was as well and hearty as one could wish to see. She constantly gained in flesh, her colour returned, and although a considerable period has now elapsed since she discontinued taking the pills, there has been no sign of a relapse, and she is stronger than ever she was before. We are satisfied that when our daughter began the use of Pink Pills she was in consumption, and the same opinion was held by our neighbours, who can testify as to what great wonders Pink Pills have worked in her case.

MR. BOWELL DENIES

That There is Friction Between He and His Colleagues—Ottawa Notes.

OTTAWA, Nov. 29.—Hon. Mackenzie Bowell, who is acting Premier, denies in the most emphatic way that there is any truth in a statement telegraphed from Ottawa that some of the ministers refuse to recognize his authority and that he is getting on badly as acting Premier in the absence of Sir John Thompson. He states that he has not had any cablegram from Sir John Thompson stating that he will leave on Monday next for home. He has not heard from the Premier and does not know when he starts for Canada.

Sir Charles H. Tupper leaves on Saturday for the Pacific coast. Among the matters which will receive the attention of the Minister of Marine is that of the outstanding claim of the Victoria sealers for compensation under the Paris award.

The non-appearance of the militia general orders announcing certain changes as recommended by General Herbert is causing considerable talk here. The cause is attributed to friction between the Major-General and the Minister of Militia. There is no need of denying the fact that the relations between Hon. J. C. Patterson and Major-General Herbert are at present somewhat strained.

Andrew Onderdonk, of Chicago, is here seeing about his contract on the Trent Valley canal. So far he has not signed the contract, and if he does do so the chances are that he will sublet it as he has been awarded a couple of large contracts in the States.

Fenians Active.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The police and post-office officials of London and Liverpool are closely watching the developments of a revival of Fenian activity of both cities. The movement is attributed to the American section of the Irish party. The police are constantly shadowing Mr. John Morley, Mr. Balfour and others who have been prominent in the affairs of Ireland, in order to shield them from danger.

Bicycle Factory Destroyed.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Nov. 29.—Fire destroyed the Loser Manufactory bicycle plant on Centre avenue, said to be the second largest factory of the kind in the United States. The loss will be not less than half a million and insurance $400,000. Five thousand are thrown out of work. The factory had just begun on 500 wheels for 1895.

City Clothing Store.

Custom Tailoring.

The gratifying activity of our Fall trade in this department is a proof that we have got what's wanted in seasonable and fashionable Cloths, and that in the matter of making we are correct in style, sure in fit, and none better in finish. Remember we guarantee every garment or no sale.

15 to 20 per cent. REDUCTION

will be made on all Clothing made to order from now to New Years. We have too large a stock of Suitings, Pantings and Overcoatings, and offer the above liberal inducements on genuine goods in order to reduce our large stock.

See our window dressed with an exhibition of our fabrics and prices.

Our $3.50 Pants have had a great run and it still continues.

Overcoats and Ulsters

That will wear and give satisfaction, ready-made. If you are a big or small built man, your size Coat is here ready to put on. Keep nothing but the best—this store does'nt do a catch business. Good clothes cost no more than poor clothes, if you go to a reliable clothier.

A large proportion of our stock of Overcoats and Ulsters for men and boys are our own make, cut and trimmed up on our own premises, under the eye of our regular cutter, and are as good as if made to order—but very much lower in price.

UNDERCLOTHING.

Decidedly colder—and it makes you feel the demand for something warmer to wear—whether in Underwear, Hosiery, Gloves or Flannels. Prices so low that no one need go cold.

JUST RECEIVED—a large stock of beautiful Underwear direct from the manufacturers at lower prices than ever.

The programme has been issued of the annual and winter meeting of the Fruit-Growers' Association, which will be held in Shaftesbury hall, in Orillia, on December 5th, 6th and 7th next. There will also be a public session on Tuesday evening, Dec. 4th, when an interesting lecture will be delivered by Professor J. Hoyes Panton, of the O. A. C., Guelph, to be followed by an address by Professor John Craig, of the Central Experimental Farm, at Ottawa. All sessions will be open to the public, and will be full of interest, the evening sessions particularly so.

Missionary Meeting in Ashburnham.

The Women's Missionary Society and Missionary Band, of Mark street Methodist church, held a public meeting in the church, last evening. Rev. W. C. NEWS NUGGETS

Paragraphs Picked Up and Pencilled for Public Perusal.

—No arrests.

—The Good Templars hold a basket social to night.

—There was no session of the police court this morning.

At present the coporation is not employing any labour.

—The Street and Bridge Committee meets to-night.

—A meeting of the Court of Revision is called for this evening.

—The Finance Committee of the town council meets to morrow night.

The Ashburnham town council is called together for Monday next.

—Sheriff Hope, of Hastings County, died at his residence in Belleville yesterday.

—The Board of Education meets in regular monthly session next Tuesday evening.

—The regular monthly meeting of the town council will be held on Monday evening next.

—A special meeting of the joint committee of the town council is called for Saturday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock.

—It is not good form, young man, to wear a big chrysanthemum in your buttonhole. A little bunch of violets is en regle.

—The merry chime of the bells on the many cutters out to-day, was strongly impressive of the fact that winter is upon us.

—The curling and skating rinks were flooded yesterday, and the more enthusiastic patrons of the "roarin' game" think that curling will begin next week if the weather keeps cold.

—"I say, Fred, can you tell me where Stratton's profit comes in on those dandy sleighs he sells every day." Tom—"No, and I don't care. We ought to stand in as long as he can, chummy."

—Thomas, the crook, who was sentenced to a couple of years in the Central Prison, is still confined in the county gaol, as the provincial institution is too crowded to admit of the accommodating of any more prisoners.

Plan of hall for the Yunck concert is now open at Salisbury's Book Store, where tickets can be obtained. General admission 50c, reserved seats 75c. Doors open at 7:30; concert begins at 8. The public will kindly, if possible, be seated before that hour.

—The Sons of Canada met last night and made final arrangements for holding a series of carnivals during the coming winter. A committee was appointed to prepare a prize list, and to report at the next regular meeting. It is altogether likely that it will be held about the second Friday in January.

—The ladies of St. Thomas' Anglican church, Belleville, have undertaken to raise $1,000 to complete the church tower. Belleville's magnificent Hospital and Home for the Friendless was erected through the efforts of the ladies of that city, so the present undertaking does not seem such a responsibility to them as to others.

—The most triumphant reception of the evening, by the audience, was that accorded to Mrs. Martin-Murphy. "La Moral in tutto questo," a racy spirited song, from Don Pasquale, received full justice from this lady's musical skill. She was encored and responded with the stirring "Laughing Song,' performed with such decided skill that a second encore was loudly solicited. The audience would not be put off with a simple obeisance tendered by the lady and remained unsatisfied until she gave another morceau of laughter set to music. Yunck concert, Dec. 4th. Plan of hall now open at Salisbury's Bookstore. Admission 50c, reserved seats 75c.

—A high tea and concert in aid of the funds of St. John's South Ward Mission was held last evening in the mission building. The tea which was arranged under the superintence of Mrs. Lundy and Mrs. Bamford was a great success. The good things provided were most appetizing and ample. At the conclusion of the high tea a social or concert was held upstairs, the proceedings being conducted under the charge of Mrs. Joseph Buller and Mrs. Stapleton. A most interesting programme was rendered, those assisting being Mr. Walter, Mr. Taylor, Mrs. Hibbard and Miss Barlee. The total realized was the neat sum of forty-five dollars.

Good Advice.

A certain young man who resides in ward No. ——, had been keeping company with a very amiable young lady with intentions towards matrimony, called on the evening appointed for their marriage and produced a small parcel. On examination she exclaimed, "Well, I am so thankful you bought the marriage license, gloves, &c., from W. J. Green, Hunter street, as now we are sure of having good luck." Try one—only a single trial solicited.

IT IS HERE!

The Peterborough Hardware Company have to-day opened out a Magnificent Stock of the finest Silver-Plated Ware ever offered for sale in Peterborough. Inspection of quality and prices invited. You will be very much pleased by calling and looking over this beautiful line of goods, which is a marvel of beauty, and of the cheapness with which these wares can be produced.

Raw Furs.

The continued downward tendency of prices in the past season's London fur sales, of which a synopsis has already been given, should be a guide to buyers, at least until such time as a reaction for the better has taken place. Dealers are advised to make immediate shipment, to meet, in a measure, the dissatisfaction existing through the depressed state of the market.

We quote prices as follows: Beaver, $1.50 to $3.50 per lb.; bear, per skin, large, $15 to $25, small, $8 to $10; bear cub, $2 to $9; fisher, $5 to $8; red fox $1 to $1.90; mink, $1 to $2; muskrat, 7c. to 12c.: otter, $6 to $11; racoon, $1.25 to $3; skunk, 50c. to $1.90; lynx, $1 to $3.—Montreal Trade Bulletin.

Sons of Temperance.

The forty-fifth annual session of the Grand Division of Ontario of the Sons of Temperance will be held at Prescott, Tuesday, Dec. 4th, commencing at 3 p. m. A public reception will be held in the evening, and addresses of welcome presented to the Grand Division. Friends of the order in Prescott and Grenville counties are arranging a hearty reception for the delegates. Special arrangements for low rates have been made with the railways. Bro. F. M. Bardley, Washington, D. C., P. M. W. P., National Division, Superintendent of "Loyal Crusaders," and General Secretary of the Sons of Temperance Relief Society, and Bro. Rob't Craig, P. G. W. P. of the G. D. of Quebec, have intimated their intention of being present. Bro. M. M. Eavenson, Philadelphia, Penn., M. W. P.; Bro. B. B. Jewell, Boston, Mass., M. W. S., and others have been invited, some of whom will, doubtless, be present. Much important business is expected to come before the meeting.

PERSONAL.

Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., is in Toronto on business to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Smith, of Port Hope, are visiting friends in town.

Chief Engineer Hannaford of the G.T.R., passed through yesterday, and gave the local officials a call.

Mr. M. Haggarty, of Bay City, an uncle of Mr. J. P. Hurley, is in town for a short visit with his relatives.

Mrs. R. Maitland Roy left yesterday for a trip to Montreal. Mrs. Roy will visit relatives in Belleville on her way east.

—The general meeting of the Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, will be held on Saturday evening in Toronto.

Miss Jessie Brignall, who has been the guest of Miss Bessie Cumming, Charlotte street, for the past week, returned to her home in Belleville to-day.

Messrs. Rod. Gwynn and Fred Jones were amongst those from Peterborough who patronized the assembly given by the young bachelors of Campbellford last night.

Mr. J. J. Grafton, of the well known firm of Grafton & Co., clothing manufacturers, has been with us the last few days. Mr. Grafton is taking a look at their business here before leaving for England, where this firm goes twice every year to purchase cloths, etc. Mr. Grafton reports that business is good with them generally, and that their branch here is doing a wonful trade for the time they have been here. The people appreciate good, well made clothing and a straightforward way of doing business.

Trent Valley Canal.

A CHANCE FOR THE PUBLIC AS WELL AS THE CONTRACTORS TO MAKE MONEY.

A SUIT OF CLOTHES AND A NEW DRESS

THE PRIZES.

In order to stimulate public interest in the Trent Valley Canal, and also to get at some idea of the public feeling in reference to the date of completion of this important local public work, which has been hung up before the eyes of the public for the past half century; and which to the eyes of the Government seems to assume a vastly increased importance just previous to an election, the EXAMINER offers the following prizes as an inducement to some of our expert mathematical and logarithmic specialists to exercise their estimating powers.

Any person sending in to the EXAMINER five of the following coupons, containing their estimate of the time when they think the sections will be completed, will have a chance to compete for the following valuable prizes:

To the lady making the nearest average estimate, A NEW DRESS.

To the gentleman making the nearest average estimate, A NEW SUIT OF CLOTHES.

No estimate considered unless accompanied with five of the following coupons, which will be printed in the DAILY EXAMINER, every day this week.

SANTA CLAUS' DEMANDS

To C. B. ROUTLEY:

SIR,—"I call on you to hustle. I can't be hindered in my projects by your keeping on hand that big lot of China Sets, Dinner Sets and Chamber Sets. You haven't had them long, but, man, look alive. Clear 'em out. I must have room in your store to spread out my goods this time of year. Thousands of my friends like to visit your store. Been doing it for the last ten years. They always get what they want for young, middle and old people."

We realize the importance of doing as the old men say, and will sell, for the next two weeks, China, Crockery and Lamp Goods at lower prices than ever before. Fancy Goods reduced also to keep in line.

THE CORPORATION BRINGS WITNESSES.

EXPERTS SAID TO BE PRESENT FROM BOSTON.

The Bill of Costs Running up into Big Figures — The Town Will Now Take its Innings, and the Councillors are Confident of Coming out on Top.

At the afternoon session of the sewer arbitration, yesterday, Prof. Dean, of the Guelph Agricultural College, was the first witness whose evidence was taken. His testimony mainly went to show that cows which ate impure food or drank impure water would give impure milk, and become diseased.

Mr. Edwards cross-examined the professor closely and succeeded in obtaining from him the information that numbers of farmers watered their cows from wells sunk in the barnyards, and into which foul matter necessarily drained. No apparent ill result followed, but it was against practising such methods that he was constantly warning the farmers.

Dr. Speers, of Ashburnham, testified that in his opinion, founded on a study and experience, the pollution of the river by sewage discharged from the new outfall sewer, would be, to a great extent, absorbed by a growth of vegetation, which it would render poisonous to an extent to vitiate the air. A man of good constitution would breath the air and its effect upon him would probably not be noticeable but his children would without doubt be affected by it. The water would be highly dangerous to bathers in the river. When questioned by Mr. Edwards as to whether the whole question of pollution did not depend entirely upon how much sewage was discharged into the water, but Dr. Speers held that the very appearance of evil should be shunned. The sewer by emptying into the Little Lake would not work so much damage to the property holders along the river as if it emptied into the Otonabee below the locks, as the locks, by draining back the water, and thus prevented a large amount of sewage from proceeding any great distance from the point of discharge.

COMBINATION OF COMMON SENSE,

CAUSED SEDIMENTATION,

Mr. Innis, of the firm of Ranney & Innis, civil engineers, town, was called. He had measured the flow of the river, yesterday, and estimated it to be 56,520 cubic feet per minute. As the rain fall during the past two months averaged 2.71 inches per month and it was only 2.21 inches in June, he judged that the flow in the latter month would only be 46,001 cubic feet per minute. As all the computations used up to this point of the examination were that the flow was about 62,000 feet, a very material difference would naturally result from the change.

Mr. William Ayres owns property along the river and judged that the pollution of the water would work him considerable damage as about a mile and a half of his property lay along the Otonabee and he could therefore not prevent his cattle from drinking the river water. As it was always noticeable in the taste of milk when cattle had been fed turnips, he judged that polluted water would have on the quality of the milk.

Mr. George Bennett, a North Monaghan farmer, stated that the banks of the river between Peterborough and Rice Lake, a distance of twenty miles, were annually overflowed in the spring by the high water, with the exception of a strip of high land about two and a half miles in length. There were a number of shallow spots along the river, which in times of low water were exposed to the action of the sun. Sawdust beds and wild rice to a considerable extent. At times of low water eight or ten feet of the river bed would be exposed to the air on either side. North Monaghan farmers used the river for watering cattle and got their ice supply from it. The water was used on the steamboats for drinking purposes. In the summer it was used for bathing purposes by the residents along the bank. The ice was used for domestic purposes by farmers living as far as 5 or 6 miles from the river. He himself would cease to use the ice from the river if it was once polluted by sewage. He considered that human excrement would certainly pollute the river.

EXISTED ALONG THE RIVER

Mr. Bennett's evidence closed the township's case.

When the town opened its case, this morning, the taking of evidence was preluded by a

SOMEWHAT LENGTHY ARGUMENT

on the part of Mr. Edwards, who held that it was not necessary for him to bring witnesses in rebuttal of that portion of the evidence, which bore on the point of possible injury to the municipalities of Otonabee and South Monaghan. Mr. Watson didn't at all agree with Mr. Edwards on this point and a half hour was occupied in a wordy warfare between the opposing counsel on the question. Judge Ketchum finally ruled against the contention of the town solicitor and stated that the range of the evidence was not confined to North Monaghan alone.

Mr. Allan Macdougall, civil engineer, of Toronto, was the first witness for the town. In his evidence he that in his opinion the flow of water in the spring, which rose high enough to overflow the banks of the Otonabee was of so great a volume, as to reduce the effect of the sewage contained in it, if the outfall sewer was completed, to such an extent as to render it not appreciable. It would be impossible to even detect the presence of sewage in the water. Even when the river was not up to high water mark, he was sure that sewage would not be discernible a mile below the point of discharge. When a river overflowed in the spring it always left consisting of weeds and other matter from the bottom of the river bed. When the water receded, and this deposit was exposed to the sun's rays, the effect would be that a disagreeable odor would be generated.

TESTIFIED TO THE EFFECT

AN ALLUVIAL DEPOSIT

Anthrax was the only known disease which cattle could acquire by drinking water into which sewage was discharged This disease was derived from the fact that when South American hides were used in tanneries, and the fluid discharged into the sewer which was used for cleansing them, it was permeated with disease germs. The danger, however, could be completely removed if the fluid in question with a germicide which could be done at small expense.

WAS CHEMICALLY TREATED

When cross-examined by Mr. Watson, Mr. Macdougall admitted that he held no diploma or certificate qualifying him for anything further, and beyond that of a civil engineer. He therefore could not pose as an expert in matters of medical science such as the imparting and spread of diseases by germs, etc. In such matters he could not set up his opinion against that of Dr. Oldright or Dr. Sheard, of Toronto. He had never heard of any objections against sewage farms as nuisances. He had planned the proposed system of sewerage for Peterborough, but admitted that he knew of no town so fortunately situated for objects of purification of sewage by filteration. He acknowledged that when the proposed system of sewerage was completed that the hospital sewage would be discharged into the new sewer.

THE LATE DR. VERNON HALLIDAY

One element of consolation to Dr. Halliday and family in their affliction at the loss of their eldest son, is the high respect that has been paid to the departed young man, and the knowledge that he was in every way deserving of it. Considering the very brief notice that was possible, a very large number of citizens met the remains at the G.T.R. station on Tuesday evening, on their arrival from New York, and followed them to the Little Lake cemetery, where the impressively solemn burial service of the English church was read by Rev. J. C. Davidson, in the cemetery chapel. Previous to interment the outer shell was removed from the hermetically sealed metallic casket, and through the glass top those who wished had the melancholy pleasure of looking their last upon the face of one who, in life, was so much beloved and esteemed.

About the same hour a memorial service, announced by the sad tolling of the muffled bell, was conducted by Rev. C. B. Kenrick in St. John's, in presence of a large congregation, although the service had only been announced in the evening papers printed an hour previous.

The high degree of respect shown to the memory of the deceased young man, must be a source of comfort, so far as human sympathy avails in the hour of such bereavement, to the afflicted family.

Young Dr. Halliday was well deserving of the tributes of respect paid to his memory. Personally, socially and professionally he was conspicuously worthy of esteem. After his graduation at McGill University he opened an office for the practice of his profession in New York city; and the fact that in two years where he was a stranger, and in the face of a powerful professional competition worked up a large practice, is a very high tribute to his professional skill, and geniality of manner. He had entered upon a career that promised unusual distinction in his profession, and that he was thus cut off in the beginning of such a life, may be a source of comfort in this, that the Divine Wisdom which sees far into the future beyond where our imperfect and clouded human vision can penetrate, in cutting short a life of so much promise, perhaps mercifully shielded him from much evil, and will bring good out of what, at the moment, seems an almost unbearable bereavement.

RELIGION IN RELATION TO BUSINESS.

Rev. J. C. Davidson has handed to us the following letter which he has received from Mr. P. H. Burton, (of the firm of Caldecott, Burton & Spence), Toronto, whose advice to business men he (Mr. Davidson) quoted on Sunday evening:

TORONTO, Nov. 27th, 1894.

Rev. J. C. Davidson, Peterborough:

DEAR SIR,—I am very much obliged for the paper you sent me with the account of your sermon. * * * * If religion does not make a man's life better it is useless. The great need of this or any age or country is good men. Laws are all right as far as they go, but are useless without good men. The whole system of trade rests upon credit. The transactions of one nation with another could not be carried on without credit. Now credit has no foundation without confidence; confidence cannot exist without at least a certain amount of business integrity and honesty. These must have their foundation in a true sense of right and wrong and a proper recognition of menm and tuum. These principles must be taught and men must be strengthened to keep them. Christianity, properly applied, is the best teacher and strengthener. Remove religion and you have chaos, for there is left no foundation on which to build.

A Child Enjoys

The pleasant flavour, gentle action and soothing effects of Syrup of Figs, when in need of a laxative, and if the father or mother be costive or bilious, the most gratifying results follow its use; so that it is the best family remedy known, and every family should have a bottle on hand.

Beyond Dispute.

There is no better, safer or more pleasant cough remedy made than Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. It cures hoarseness, sore throat, coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles.

WILL BEGIN ON SATURDAY.

On Saturday, Nov. 24th, the sale of the China Hall stock will begin, and continue for two weeks—or until the whole stock has been disposed of. The goods have been reduced from 25 to 50 per cent., and in some cases 75 per cent., so there will be big bargains for everyone. Dinner, Tea and Chamber Sets, Silver Ware, Lamp Goods, Ornaments, etc., at prices that cannot be repeated again. Buy now for Christmas. China Hall and Silver Bazaar, Saturday, Nov. 24th.

JOHN T. WARRINGTON DEAD.

The Well Known Cheese Exporter Gone Over to the Majority.

John T. Warrington, the well-known cheese exporter, died yesterday morning at 11.30. Some weeks ago he was taken ill with peritonitis, and for a time his life was despaired of, but he rallied and was able to be up again, when on Monday he contracted conjestion of the lungs to which, in his weakened condition, he succumbed yesterday morning.

Mr. Warrington was one of Belleville's business men and one of the heaviest cheese dealers in Canada. He was an Englishman, 44 years of age, and he went to Belleville to reside eight years ago, though for as many years before that he carried on a branch business there from his head office in Montreal. His father still resides in Liverpool. The deceased leaves a wife and three children, a daughter and two sons. Mr. Warrington was the best known cheese buyer in this section and had hosts of friends in the Peterborough district.

A FALSE STATEMENT CONTRADICTED.

The rumour having been circulated by interested parties that Ostrom's were not receiving Chicago meats, the following letter is published in contradiction of such an unfounded statement:

MESSRS. OSTROM BROS., Peterborough, Ont.

GENTLEMEN,—In accordance with instructions received through our representative, Mr. Clerihew, we have entered for shipment tomorrow 1,000 lbs. of tenderloins, which will go forward on the 3 o'clock train as desired. We are very much pleased to send these meats, and hope you will find it to your advantage to use them regularly. We are confident the grade of the meats will please you in every respect and will certainly give any orders entrusted to us our most careful attention.

With thanks for the favour, and hoping to hear from you soon again, we remain,

Yours truly,

Musicians, Attention!

The piano to be used at the Herr Yunck concert on Dec. 4th, is a cabinet, grand specially selected and loaned by Whaley, Royce & Co., Toronto, and is manufactured by the Reimer Piano Co., and contains one of Wessel, Nichol & Gross' best American actions. The touch is light and elastic—the very acme of perfection. It has great power and volume of tone, combined with a rich quality that delights and captivates. A Tone Liberator, a Patent Muffler, which, when put into operation, produces the softest tone possible, and enables the performer to practice at any hour of the day or night, without disturbing any one in the house or neighbourhood and a Metallic Key-board Support, are special features of these instruments. If this instrument is not sold within a few days after the concert, it will be returned to the show rooms on Yonge street, Toronto.

Principal of the Optical Institute of Canada,

(Representing the B. Laurance Co.,)

WILL VISIT PETERBOROUGH

Dec. 5th, 6th and 7th.

MR. JOHN McKEE, Druggist, Peterborough, has made arrangements with the above celebrated optician to make a special visit to Peterborough on the dates mentioned.

Mr. Laurance is acknowledged, by the leading eye specialists as being the best qualified and most successful optician of the Dominion.

His specialty—and it is a most important one—is the proper fitting of lenses to the condition of the eyes that are defective, whether for age or organic imperfection.

Sir James Grant, of Ottawa, gives this highly flattering commendation:—

150 ELGIN STREET, OTTAWA, ONT.

B. LAURANCE, ESQ.:

DEAR SIR,—Your glasses could not possibly be improved upon. I have experienced great comfort from their use. Thanking you most kindly, I remain truly yours,

J. A. GRANT.

If you find reading difficult or accompanied with pain in the head over the eye, if you are near sighted, or have any other difficulty, you should not omit calling on Mr. Laurance on his coming visit.

Call and see him and have your eyes scientifically tested and the proper lenses fitted Free of Charge.

After twelve years handling of Mr. Laurance's Spectacles and Glasses, I can confidently assert that they have, in all cases, given the best of satisfaction, and I can heartily recommend them to persons needing to use glasses of any kind.

Be sure and call on Mr. Laurance, at my drug store, on Dec. 5th, 6th and 7th.

JOHN McKEE,

Druggist, 384 George Street.

A GREAT MANY CHILDREN

—have been cured of scrofula and other skin diseases—as well as thousands of grown people, by taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Every disorder that can be reached through the blood, yields to its purifying qualities. Besides, it builds up wholesome flesh and strength; not merely fat like Cod liver oils. A scrofulous condition of the blood invites Catarrh, Bronchitis and Consumption. We're all exposed to the germs of consumption, grip, or malaria—yet only the weak ones suffer. When you're weak, tired out, and debilitated, or when pimples and blotches appear—heed the warning in time. The "Discovery" sets all the organs into healthy action—especially the liver, for that's the point of entrance for these germs, then if the blood is pure, they'll be thrown off. There's no risk. If it fails to benefit or cure in all cases of impure blood or inactive liver, your money is returned.

The key to the situation—if you suffer from Catarrh, you'll find in Dr. Sage's Remedy. No matter how bad your case may be, the proprietors of the medicine promise to pay $500 if they can't cure you. You're cured, or you're paid.

NEEDED DIETING.

An Attenuated Horse That Excited an Officer's Unnecessary Sympathy.

A South Chicago ponceman came across an attenuated sorrel horse tied to a hitching-post the other day. He waited a few minutes until the owner arrived, and then said:

"Why don't you feed your horse something? I'd wager that he hasn't seen an oat since he was a colt. Do you feed him on the photograph of a bale of hay?"

"Mr. Officer, you don't know that horse, or you wouldn't talk that way."

"I don't know the horse, but I know that you ought to be run in for working a starved beast like that; it's a case for the S.P.C.A. Do you weigh out his food to him on an apothecary's scales?"

"Officer, before you say any more do me a favor; get in that buggy and drive around a block, and when you come back here tell me what to feed him; I'll do whatever you say."

The policeman got into the buggy and started off. He thought he was in a merry-go-round driven by cyclone power, he braced his feet against the dashboard and hung on to the reins until his wrists cracked and there was a shower of heels all over the road; the buggy slewed around corners on one wheel, and when the horse finally landed up against the hitching post with its front legs over the shafts, the officer was so dazed that he couldn't speak for a minute.

"Well," queried the owner, "what do you think I'd better feed the horse?"

"If I owned him," answered the policeman sternly, "I'd feed him on some good reliable anæsthetic."—Chicago Tribune.

A Rattling Time.

The Fruit Calendar.

A little calendar of California fruits states that cherries are the first to come east, arriving about May 15. Then follow in order apricots, peaches, pears, plums, prunes, nectarines, and grapes, the season of each so overlapping that of the others that now we are getting all of these except cherries and apricots. The later kind of grapes will continue to come in large quantities until November 1, and some even as late as December 1. Each fruit comes in his own peculiar package, and the making of these has become a great business in the fruit country of California. Cherries come in ten pound boxes, apricots in twenty-pound crates, peaches in twenty-pound packages, pears in fifty-pound boxes, plums in twenty-pound boxes, and grapes in twenty and forty pound boxes. A car load of cherries contains about 2,250 packages, and 450 of the fifty-pound boxes make a load. The freight and the charges for icing and care are, as one may easily imagine, an important part of the cost of the fruit. These charges amount, in round figures, to $500 a car load. Every box of pears cost, therefore, to get it here $1.10, and even the little boxes of cherries cost for freight alone about twenty-two cents.—Detroit Free Press.

The Conditioning House.

There is in Bradford, England, a peculiar establishment in the interests of manufacturers, known as the conditioning house, the only one of its kind in the kingdom: it is here that the true weight, length and condition of articles of trade and industry are determined scientifically—yarns, wools, pieces, &c. Samples are taken from various parts of lots, so as to insure a fair average, and, the weight of the samples when absolutely dry having been ascertained the standard per cent. of moisture is added to it to give the correct invoice weight. The counts of yarns are ascertained by the correct measurement of the yards contained in one pound avoirdupois of yarn in standard condition, as ascertained from separate hanks or hobbies, and the scales upon which the yarn is weighted are adjusted to one milligram. The strength of yarns is determined by the average of at least five separate tests of eighty yards in one lea on a fifty-four inch reel, that is, one-seventh of a hank, worsted; the twist is determined by the average of ten separate tests of ten inches each to form one test, and the lengths of hanks are calculated by measuring, without overlapping, on a reel, the exact length and with the tension regulated for each count.

A Terrible Experience:

Mr. Geo. Tribe, of Straffordville, Ont. a pretty village near the shores of Lake Erie, went through an experience lately that he will never forget. He tells it in his own words:

"For three years I suffered from skin disease in its worst form. I tried Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura remedies, and doctored one year with the best physicians in the land, but got no benefit; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but failed to remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard, white scales; the itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. I can truly say I owe my good health to B. B. B., and I advise all sufferers to use this splendid medicine.

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, and have no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose topay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times

HE FELT GRATEFUL.

Though He Wasn't Wealthy He Gave Freely of What He Had.

For five or six minutes the other afternoon a patrolman stood at the foot of Woodward avenue, alongside of a young man who had a satchel in his hand, and was waiting for a ferry-boat. At length, as the officer started to saunter away, the young man handed him a cigar, and said

"Thanks, I'll always remember your kindness."

"What is it?" queried the bluecoat, as he hesitated over the cigar.

"Take it—take two of 'em! I'm a man who can appreciate a favor."

"But, I—I"—

"That's all right—take three of 'em! I've traveled over most of this country, and know a man when I see him."

"Will you explain yourself?" asked the officer, as he closely regarded the stranger to see if he was drunk or crazy.

"Certainly. Here I am, a perfect stranger to you. You have the right to walk up and crack me with your club, and ask who in thunder I am, and what I am hanging about here for. You could take my satchel and fling it into the river and you could drag me to a dungeon cell and keep me immured for years and years. Have you done anything of the sort?"

"As to that"—began the officer, but the young man brought out two more cigars and said:

"Take the whole five! I haven't much wealth, but I want to show my gratitude as best I can. You sir, are one of nature's noblemen, and though I live for the next fifty years I shall never forget you. Instead of cracking me over the head and then jumping on my unconscious body with both feet and dragging me to the station over the cobblestones, you have acted the part of a gentleman, and a man who respects the rights of others. Sir, let me again assure you that I shall never forget this consideration on your part. Officer, farewell!"

He made a break for the boat and was lost to view, and after thinking it over for five minutes the officer pocketed the cigars and growled:

"Something wrong there somewhere. If I ever see him again I'll run him in for his gratitude."—Detroit Free Press.

HUNTING THE SEA LION.

Herds of Them Driven for Miles to the Slaughtering Grounds.

At the close of the fur seal-killing season, the natives proceed to lay in their winter's supply of meat. A number of picked men go to Northeast Point, steal down to the shore in the dead of night, and crawl along at the water's edge until a line of men is disposed between the sleeping herd and the water At a given signal the men all spring to their feet, yell, discharge pistols, and terribly frighten the sleeping sea lions. Those that lie with their heads toward the water plunge forward and quickly disappear, but those headed landward naturally enough start forward away from the uproar. Being continually urged on they soon find themselves fairly inland, with all chance of escape cut off.

The groups of from twenty to fifty caught thus each night are driven up on to the level ground, and held until from three to five hundred have been taken, when the grand drive begins. Then the whole herd is actually driven ten miles overland to the village. According to the condition of the weather, the drive requires from six days to three weeks, but in the end every sea lion who does not die of heat or exhaustion on the road actually carries his own carcass to market.

This animal yields about the same class of products as does the walrus, and its flesh forms the principal food of all the natives of the fur-seal islands. The skin is thickly covered with coarse stiff hair of a brownish-yellow color, but it is destitute of "fur," and hence is of no value in our market.

Steller's sea lion is about twice the size of the fur seal, the old male being from ten to eleven feet in total length, from eight to nine feet in girth, and it weighs on an average about 1,200 pounds. The females are not quite half as large, in actual bulk, as the males. Although cowardly in their disposition toward man, the males are among themselves the fiercest fighters in the world. It is hard to obtain an old specimen whose neck is not criss-crossed all over by long, deep gashes, or old scars, made by the powerful teeth of jealous rivals.—St. Nicholas for October.

Some Fall Millinery.

You will want to know about the millinery. They are using a great deal of pleated chenille and tulle, especially in petunia shades, and the jam pot crown has reappeared; but is now encircled with a sort of bracelet of diamonds, and is the foundation whence springs a high aigrette. These crowns seem to rise from the center of a broad brim, on which violets, pink roses, and terra cotta silk rosettes all commingle.

Deep emerald-green bonnets, with liberal trimmings of jet and sable, are the height of the fashion. Fascinating osprey aigrettes set in velvet make pretty headdresses; but I expect you do not know how to wear them. I did not; they are put in slanting sideways to give the inevitable width to the head, without which no one can now be smart.

The newest headdress of all, however, is a velvet bow, fashioned on the Alsatian idea, but, instead of standing out, it is intended to be placed quite flat on the head, attached to wire, which encircles a coil of hair. The more crushed its appearance, the more a la mode. A bright and beautiful cerise color is most used.

Then there are some headdresses made of velvet, with tiny ostrich feathers at each point, supposed to fall down behind the ears, and these are also adapted to the throat by people who have thin necks. —Paris Letter in "The Queen."

A Resemblance.

Experts in handwriting say that all the people of a single generation write alike, and it is well known that most French handwriting has a strong family likeness to the eyes of others than Frenchmen. Nearly all Chinamen of the washhouse class look alike to superficial observers, and persons unaccustomed to colored persons find difficulty in distinguishing one from another. It needs, however, a comparison of two or three family photograph albums of twenty or thirty years ago to convince men and women of to-day that there are striking superficial likenesses running through Americans of a given generation. All these old albums show curious resemblances, chiefly, perhaps of dress and face, but sufficiently striking for one family album at first glance to be taken for another. As page after page of each is turned over, there is the same succession of men' women and children in full figure, sitting, standing, posed in groups of two or three, with hats, without hats, draped in shawls, and manifestly dressed in their best for the occasion. The photographers of those days chose, for reason of their own, to make full length pictures, and, as they were usually small, costume counted for a great deal and helped to intensify the general likeness running the whole generation.

Considerate Monopties.

"It is very kind in the railroad company to put up those signs: 'Beware of Pickpockets!' If it wasn't for them signs we pickpockets would have to go out of the business," said a pickpocket to the officer who arrested him.

"Those signs are put up to spoil your trade," replied the officer.

"But they don't," said the pickpocket. "They help us. As soon as a country jay reads the sign if he has any money he puts his hand on it. We know then he has money and where he keeps it. We follow him up, and as soon as he takes his hand out of his pocket we put ours in. See? Great thing for the perfesh' those signs. Don't tell me after this that corporations have no consideration."—Texas Siftings.

BRITAIN AND MOSQUITO

Nicaragua Must Come Down Handsomely for Recent Outrages.

WARSHIPS TAKING IN STORES

The New Government Will Have to Pay Dearly for the Insult to Mr. Hatch—Clarence, the Mosquito Chief, May be Reinstated by England.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Nov. 29.—The Mosquito incident and the rumor that obtained currency here that Great Britain demands substantial damage from Nicaragua for the violation of the treaty of Nicaragua, 1889, has taken on new importance. H. M. S. Mohawk, stationed at Port Limon, Costa Rica, 120 miles from Greytown and 240 from Bluefields, has been fully reprovisioned from this naval station. stores and supplies have been specially sent to her by an English steamer. Chief or Prince Clarence is here as a guest and protege of Great Britain. Upon his arrival he was a guest on H. M. S. Urgent, the guard ship at the dock yard. Recently he has moved up to the residence of Mr. Edwin S. Hatch. Mr. Hatch was H. M. consul at Bluefield's up to the time of his arrest and expulsion from Nicaragua.

The distinguished attention paid Prince Clarence has a significance. Prince Clarence left Bluefields on a British man-of-war at the time when his life was threatened. Mrs. Hatch and family were taken to Port Limon on the Mohawk. Mr. Hatch, while the recognized agent of her Britannic Majesty's government, was arrested and with many others, British and American, taken to Managua, there imprisoned, and without trial were expelled from the country.

Great Britain's claim for this outrage adds to the many millions of dollars claimed by her subjects for previous outrages. The total is said to exceed $40,000,000. Germany has a large claim. The American claims are said to amount to fully $10,000,000. For over two centuries Great Britain claimed sovereignty over that part of the coast of Central America. The Mosquitos ever have been a free and unconquered race and an active ally of Great Britain. About a century ago a Mosquito contingent arrived in this island and assisted England in restoring peace.

The many vexatious questions between the government of the Mosquito nation and the government of Nicaragua led to a long and tedious arbitration. The arbitrator named by Great Britain was his Majesty the Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria. The decision was in favor of Mosquito. On all questions concerning their independence and territory they were free factors under the sovereignty of Nicaragua.

Two direct insults have been offered Great Britain. Her Majesty's consul at Greytown, Mr. Herbert Bingham, for nearly sixteen years consul there, had his exequater withdrawn and Mr. Hatch was arrested. Nicaragua will be disciplined for it as Guatemala was by the English and Nicaragua by the Germans.

Many believe that Chief Clarence will be reinstated by England in rights that are clearly his.

Owing to the present distribution of the West Indian fleet a number of powerful vessels can be concentrated at Bluefields at short notice.

The belief obtains that Great Britain has had ample time to study the claims of her subjects and that Nicaragua must make the amende honorable.

Spanish Parliament Dissolved.

LISBON, Nov. 29.—An attempt to reform the rules of the Chamber of Deputies led to such turbulent scenes that the king has dissolved parliament.

Mr. Sutherland Nominated.

WOODSTOCK, Nov. 29.—At the meeting of the North Oxford Reform Association held here yesterday, Mr. Jas. Sutherland, M.P., was the unanimous choice of the convention.

Entombed in a Colliery.

SCRANTON, Nov. 29.—Frederick Ryan, a miner of middle age and a Hungary laborer known by number, were caught by a fall of rock in the north-west colliery, four miles above Carbondale, and shut off from all hope of affecting their escape. A rescuing party is making strenuous efforts to reach the entombed men. This is the same colliery in which four men were entombed in September.

Three Miners Killed.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 29.—J. T. Jones, miner, and Edward Eagan, labor, were employed in a chamber in the Pine Brook shaft. At 2.30 o'clock Patrick Cawley, a laborer in another chamber, went in to speak with them. While they were talking a heavy mass of "bell" rock, weighing at least fifteen tons, fell upon them, killing all three.

Confessed to Incendiarism.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 29.—A special to the Globe-Democrat from Sylvania, Ga., says: A wholesale plot of incendiaries has been unearthed in this county and several negro culprits, self-confessed, are in the county jail. The community is so enraged that a strong guard has been placed about the jail to prevent lynching.

A Graduate of Toronto University says: "My children have been treated with Scott's Emulsion from their earliest years! Our physician first recommended it and now whenever a child takes cold my wife immediately resorts to this remedy, which always effects a cure."

HUSTLING HAVELOCK.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Before school closed for Thanksgiving vacation, a very pleasant and profitable afternoon was spent in Miss Howson's room of our school, when the following programme was rendered entirely by the pupils:—

PROGRAMME.

Chairman's address
Chorus	The School

The chair was occupied by Mr. Almore Haig, a boy of twelve years, who won the praise of all present by the manly way in which he conducted himself. The selections were all short and to the point. The room was filled, many of the parents and friends of the pupils being present.

At the end of the programme Miss Howson was made the recipient of a very handsome present, accompanied by the following address:—

DEAR TEACHER:—

We the pupils of this room wish to express our love to you for the patience and kindness which you have always shown when teaching us.

We, as pupils, have not tried to do as well as we might have done, but as you are still with us we hope to do much better in the future. As a token of our regard we ask you to accept this water set.

Signed on behalf of the pupils,

ALMORE HAIG,
STANLEY BARLOW,

Miss Howson made a suitable reply.

FARM NOTES.

Grasshoppers make good egg food.

As a rule spinach is a very profitable crop.

In butter color and flavor have no relation to each other.

The ashes of the corn cob contain a large amount of potash.

Overfeeding is the most fruitful cause of a failure to lay.

It is said that fowls that lay white eggs are more prolific than those which lay dark eggs.

An eight-frame hive for bees is now preferred to the ten-frame hive which has been so long in use.

A great deal of wet land along the banks of streams and ponds can be used for growing the basket willow.

A solution of silicate of soda is said to be a perfect preservative of eggs, and does not injure them in any way.

There is no better grain for poultry any time of the year than wheat, except when fattening. When ready to fatten corn should be used.

ODDS AND ENDS.

The habit that merchants have of fixing prices at $4.99, $3.49, 99 cents, etc., has called attention to the need of a 9-cent piece as a convenience and to save time lost in waiting for change.

An original certificate of membership in the Order of Cincinnati, issued to a signer of the declaration of Independence and signed by George Washington, was recently sold at Wilmington, Del., for $32.

A plant in Sumatra called the Rafflesia Arnoldi is said to bear the largest flower in the world. Some of the largest are thirty-six inches in diameter, and the central cup will hold six quarts of water.

Most of the so called marble houses of the Rome of Augustus were not such in reality. The plasterer's art had then reached a high state of perfection, and gave a stucco the appearance of the finest marble.

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

In New York city it takes people from twelve to sixteen seconds to get into and out of cars. In London it requires thirty seconds.

In the sixteenth century no lady was considered in full dress unless she had a mirror at her breast. It was oval in shape, about four by six inches in size.

The catacombs of Rome contain the remains of about six million human beings, and those of Paris about three million. The latter were formerly stone quarries.

London bridge is nine hundred and twenty feet long, fifty-six feet wide and fifty-five feet in height. It has five semi-elliptical arches, the centre one being one hundred and fifty feet.

MISSING LINKS.

The best bricks in the world are made by the tribes of Central Asia.

New York city has thirty-four thousand miles of underground wires.

Every Yankee warship has an outfit of over one hundred and fifty flags.

In England householders have to pay a tax on each male servant in their employ.

Street bands are not permitted in Germany unless they accompany processions.

In 1850 the foreign-born population formed 9.68 per cent of the whole; now it is 14.77.

Catarrh—Use Nasal Balm. Quick, positive cure. Soothing, cleansing, healing.

Norway Pine Syrup cures coughs, colds, hoarseness, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis etc.

The Wabash Railway Trains

running every day in the year between Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City are the finest known to the railway service; they are complete and solid vestibuled from end to end, the entire train being a moving palace of connected apartments, all furnished with the most luxurious elegance and perfection of commodation known to the car builders' art. They include free reclining, palace, sleeping and dining cars of the latest and best patterns. Call on or write any railway agent for tickets and all information, or address J. A. JAPS GAVE NO QUARTER

An Indiscriminate Massacre Followed the Capture of Port Arthur.

LI HUNG CHANG IS ALL RIGHT

The Old Viceroy Is Still in the Confidence of the Throne—Kirin Troops Repulsed at Mo-Tien-Ling—The Japs Find a Valuable Chart.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The Tokio correspondent of the Central News telegraphs: The Japanese have found at Port Arthur a chart which has enabled them to locate exactly and control all the mines in the harbor. On November 20, previous to the storming of the forts, the Japanese placed 100 siege and field guns in well chosen positions, and rained shot and shell upon the Chinese entrenchments. This bombardment made possible the rapid success of the assault. In accordance with a telegram from Hiroshima Dr. Hart, the principal surgeon at Chiu Lien, will be released to report to the directors of the Hiroshima hospitals.

There was an engagement near Mo-Tien-Ling on the 25th. The Kirin troops tried to break the Japanese right flank, but were repulsed. The Japanese loss was 48 killed and wounded.

From Tien-Tsin the Central News hears: "Li Hung Chang has gone to Pao-Ling-Foo, his usual winter residence, and the seat of the provincial government. His departure has given rise to many false rumors to the effect that he had been degraded again. The Viceroy's friends say that the time is near when he will be summoned to Pekin to save the country by his statesmanship."

The Times correspondent in Chee-Foo says: "Admiral Freemantle and 50 British officers landed at Port Arthur on the 25th. Kung Taotai, of Port Arthur, a brother of the Chinese Minister to England, has gone to Tien-Tsin. The reports of atrocities on both sides are confirmed. The Japanese after finding the mutilated bodies of several comrades gave no quarter, there being an indiscriminate massacre. Several Chinese soldiers and some tradesmen who tried to escape by sea were followed by torpedo boats and shot."

A Shanghai despatch says that the Japanese torpedo boats sank more than twenty junks loaded with fugitives from Port Arthur.

Mr. Langtry Wants Divorce.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—A suit of rooms has been engaged at the Fifth Avenue Hotel for Edward T. Langtry and valet, who will arrive in a few days from North Wales. Mr. Langtry is the husband of the Jersey Lily, at present on a tour through the country, and it is said that he is coming to America with a view to divorce proceedings. Mr. Langtry rarely sees his wife, and then it is only a formal meeting. It is said that Mrs. Langtry has offered to supply her husband with certain information that would precipitate divorce proceedings, but so far he has delined. Now, however, it is understood that he will seek a separation in this country on the single charge of desertion. In England an evidence of collusion would cause the interference of the Queen's proctor.

Town Failures.

Why should people be foolish enough to pay $4 to $5 for all-wool pants when W. J. Green, Hunter street, would give them for $3.00, made to order and guaranteed to fit.

Catarrhal Deafness.

Deafness or dull hearing follows catarrh, colds, etc. Hagyard's Yellow Oil cures even the worst cases in a few applications.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease),
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair,
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want;
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age,
They then went home, but stop, I miss,

They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life!
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

Our 60 Day's Sale

A Pronounced Success

Nothing succeeds like success, and nothing succeeds thats lack the element of Real Worth. If a thing have worth in it and if it supplies a need, it will make its way.

It is because our 60 Days' Sale possesses this element that it to-day enjoys such extensive patronage and popularity.

During November

Up to the present date, sales have been the largest we have ever had; and if this is to be the index, this Clearance Sale of the lines we have advertised, will be ranked as the most remarkable of our record.

Thanksgiving Week

Prices will continue every day much below even Clearance Prices and your experience every day will prove that our VALUES are THE BEST in the trade—that you get more for your money here—that "the Ribbon is Ours."

"It's Fair's Way." We're all enthusiasm—

Now for the Proof

FOR INSTANCE—

TAKE MANTLES!—There is no dormant energy in this department. Fair's is the people's Mantle House—

—200 High-Class German Tailor-Made Mantles, ranging in price from $8 $15 each, can be purchased now for $3.50, $5 and $8 each.

—200 yards Tweed Ulsterings, reduced from $1.50 to 75c.

TAKE SEALETTES!—30 per cent. reduction on Lister's celebrated Sealettes ought to convince skeptical readers that we have reduced in earnest. Here are the figures to prove it:—

$13 00 per yard Sealette for $9 00
11 00 per yard Sealette for 8 00
8 50 per yard Sealette for 6 00
6 50 per yard Sealette for 4 50
5 00 per yard Sealette for 3 00

TAKE FLANNELS!—Surely these are things you need. What are the facts:—

—40 pieces All Wool Grey Flannels, worth 20 and 25c., sale price 15c per yard.

—30 piece Flannelettes, worth 8c., for 6c. per yard.

TAKE UNDERWEAR!—There will be urgent need of heavier Underwear from this on. We have all the wanted kinds for men and women, but the whole secret lies in selling first-class quality at a second rate price. Look here for value:—

—Men's Knights of Labour All Wool Shirts and Drawers, worth 85c., sale price 65c.

—10 dozen Men's Natural Wool Shirts and Pants, worth $2.00, the garments clearing at $1.25 each.

—20 dozen Ladies' Undervests, worth $1.10 each, sale price 85c.

—15 doz. All Wool Vests, former price 75c., sale price 65c.

TAKE DRESS GOODS!—We want to "shame" the other fellows out who are crying Bargains under the ordinary conditions:—

—50 pieces Black and Coloured High-class Dress Goods, imported to sell at 75c. to $1.25 per yard, your choice for 50c.

—500 yards 54-inch Dress Tweed Suitings, worth $1.00, sale price 50 to 60c. per yard.

—300 yards All Wool Black and Coloured Dress Goods, worth 50 to 60c., sale price 35c.

—500 yards Double-Fold Costume Cloths, your choice for 25c. per yard.

—$1.00 B & C Corsets really selling at 65c., and Fair's Half dollar Corsets at 35c.

And so on all over the store. If you are paying "regular" prices elsewhere, you are not doing yourself justice, that's all.

The Use of Glasses.

Speaking from over twenty years' experience, I can sum up in a few words some of the results of indiscriminate use of glasses. In the case of odd eyes gradual weakening of the good eye and making it much more susceptible to disease such as glaucoma, iritis, etc. In cases of astigmatism unsuitable glasses will cause neuralgic pains in the eyes, frontal headache, nausea, paralysis of the accommodation, resulting in permanently impaired vision which no skill can restore. The time will come, and I hope soon, when sight-testing opticians will be placed on the same footing as dentists and chemists, and have to pass an examination before being allowed to practice. Very truly,

Eye Specialist.

SIGNS OF AN ELECTION

The Stir in the Ministerial Circles is Considered Significant.

VOTERS' LISTS IN THE WAY

The Revision Now Going On Will Not be Completed Before May—The Session May be an Early One—Canadian Contractors Up in Arms.

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.—The announcement that the Conservative Union has called a series of political meetings to be addressed by Ministers of the Crown and others has again given rise to the rumor that there is to be a general election before a session of the House. The signs are certainly not wanting that such is to be the case, although it is difficult to see how this can be done with the voters' lists under revision. It will take until the month of May before the lists are finally prepared and placed in the hands of the returning officers for the conduct of an election.

On the other hand, there is Hon. G. E. Foster in his present poor state of health straightening out political matters in St. John and Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper preparing to go to British Columbia on Saturday.

Sir John Thompson is in England, and the opinion is that he is conferring with Sir Charles the elder as to the coming campaign. The Ministerial tour in the Maritime Province is over. Besides all this, there is the fact that public contracts are being let all over the Dominion. George Taylor, the chief Conservative whip, has been here for the past few days. Asked as to an early session, he replied that if a session was to take place before an election it would be an early one.

Despite all these facts it is almost impossible to believe that a general election will be held before a session. With the present condition of the voters' lists, owing to revision, it is difficult to see how an election could be held before the revision is completed. If an election takes place on the new lists it could not come off much earlier than next May. It will take until then before the lists are all printed and placed in the hands of the returning officers. As has already been pointed out in the journal, the members of Parliament are favorable to a session before a general election.

Since Andrew Onderdonk, of Chicago, was awarded the contract for the construction of a portion of the Trent Canal at the price of about half a million dollars, there had been mutterings of dissatisfaction among Canadian contractors. The discontent is no confined, either, to those who figured on the contract themselves. Within the past week contractors from all over the country have congregated at Ottawa. The general opinion among them seemed to be that some statutory provision should be made to confine Canadian public contracts to Canadian conarctors. Major McLennan, M. P., has taken up the matter. He says that in the event of the Government not taking up the matter next session he will himself introduce a bill providing against the letting of contracts for public works to bidders other than British subjects. Canadian contractors are not eligible for tendering for Government work in the United States.

RIPON OFFENDED THE AUTHORS.

He Said His Sympathies Are With Canada on the Copyright Question.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Arnold Foster, M.P., has written to the Times to direct its attention to important omissions from its report of Lord Ripon's exchange of views with the copyright deputation on Tuesday. Lord Ripon, he says, expressed his willingness to submit to Sir John Thompson the deputation's argument. Lord Ripon added: "My departmental sympathies are naturally in this question with those colonies I especially represent."

Arnold Foster comments: "This is a remarkable declaration and it startled other delegates besides myself. If a secretary of state appear in the cabinet as an avowed advocate, prejudiced in behalf of his Canadian clients, it seems high time that British authors and publishers find some other channels to convey their views, inasmuch as if Canadian views be accepted the property of British authors will be in jeopardy in Canada and still more so in Australia and the United States."

Lord Aberdeen in New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Lord Aberdeen, the Governor General of Canada, arrived at the Waldorf last night. He is accompanied by Mr. Hewitt, his private secretary, and by H. Marjoribanks. Lord Aberdeen comes to attend the dinner of the St. Andrews Society, which will to-day celebrate St. Andrew's day. He said it was the intention of Lady Aberdeen to come with him. The object of the trip was to dispose of some goods produced through the Irish society with which she is connected, but the illness of Mrs. Peter White of Chicago, who is associated with her in the work, prevented her carrying out her plans. Lord Aberdeen will remain here until Monday next. On Tuesday he will make a visit to Yale college and then return to his home at Ottawa.

A Young Woman's Mysterious Death.

HALIFAX, Nov. 30.—A young woman named Mary Pitford was found dead in the house in which she was employed. An inquest will be held. Deceased was 28 years of age and belonged to Newfoundland. She took some medicine or drug given her by a woman last night to procure an abortion, the girl being about to become a mother.

ON THE RIGHT TRACK

Crooked Practices of Toronto Aldermen Brought to Light.

OTHERS WHO WERE BRIBED

One of Them, Was to Receive a Sum of Money as Payment of a Bet—A Draft for $7,000 for Which No Acknowledgment Was Asked.

TORONTO, Nov. 30.—At the municipal contract inquiry yesterday the first evidence was given by B. Mahler, the Cleveland man who acted for the Kiely-Everett syndicate, at the time of the street railway award, and who became known as the "clean skater." He swore positively that during all his transactions in Toronto he never directly or indirectly made any corrupt offer to any alderman on behalf of the syndicate named.

J. J. Franklyn, superintendent of the old street railway, was then called. He swore he met the late George Kiely at the time of the street railway award, that he had no knowledge of any corrupt promise or offer to any alderman, but that Kiely had said to him something about some deals with aldermen. He spoke especially of a real estate deal with Alderman Pape. Mr. Franklyn was not on very good terms with Kiely at the time and did not pay any attention to what he said.

J. F. Coleman, secretary of the Trinidad Asphalt Company, was then called. The first damaging evidence he gave was that at the time the permanent pavement question was up in July, 1894, while he had no business dealings with H. A. Everett, of the street railway company, which it will be remembered tried to form a paying syndicate, he (Coleman) made a draft on Everett through the Traders' Bank for $7,000. He did not say what he wanted it for. He got the money in cash, and at the time gave no acknowledgment for it nor was it asked. He subsequently accounted to Mr. Everett for the money. He admitted that his business relations with Mr. Everett was not such as would have warranted his making such a draft.

After he had got the cash he paid over $5,000 of it to John Leys, ex-M.P.P.

Mr. Nesbitt, counsel for the corporation, promised to pursue this branch of the enquiry later.

Leys gave him no acknowledgment at the time, but subsequently he got a note from him. At that time Ald. Bailey was loaned $990. He got no acknowledgment. Bailey did not promise to pay it back, although he (Coleman) understood he might get it back in sand, in which Bailey deals.

Mr. Nesbitt here asked witness if he had ever given a man gold sleeve links. He admitted he had given a man diamond gold sleeve links. That man was Thomas McIlroy, who at one time was a depository for $700 or $750, to be paid to Ald. Gowanlock if the Kiely-Everett syndicate got the franchise. It was to be paid over in the form of a bet, the alderman having wagered McIlroy it would go through.

Simon H. Janes was the next witness. He said he was one of the tenders for the street railway franchise, but had no interest in the Kiely-Everett syndicate. He was present at the discussion of the matter in the City Council. On one occasion he had an interview with one person on the subject. He was told his company could get the contract if he put up $40,000 to corrupt the aldermen. It was to be put in the hands of some person to be delivered. He had been visited in his office by Ald. Hall, and from conversation with him he formed the impression that the alderman was there to find what he was prepared to do. Mr. Coleman had told him that if he would put up $40,000 he would get the contract.

Coleman then took the stand again and replied to Janes' charges as follows: "I say that Mr. Janes is the most contemptible man I ever met. He is a liar and a scoundrel. His story is a pure fiction. He is a perjurer and a liar, and I have the satisfaction of knowing that he knows it. My language fails me and I can't do justice to the circumstance." The witness denied ever threatening Mayor Fleming with any consequences if he did not vote a certain way.

Mr. Nesbitt then read over a list of aldermen, but witness said he had no knowledge of any corrupt influence being brought to bear on them.

Ex-Ald. Hall said he had been in support of the Kiely-Everett tender after its adoption in committee, but no conversation had taken place between he and Kiely tending to his personal profit.

The witness was asked if he ever had any business dealing with Edward Hewitt. He denied ever having business dealings with Hewitt or with any one in Hewitt's behalf. Mr. Nesbitt then showed him a signature and asked Mr. Hall if he recognized it. Witness acknowledged it to be his, Mr. Nesbitt then read a letter signed by Hall and Hewitt, in which they agreed for $4,000 to secure the contract for electrical apparatus for the Edison Company, and to get for Mr. Barr the figures of rival tenderers after the tenders were opened and before they were awarded, and if they did not get the contract for the Edison Company the money was to be returned. Witness afterwards admitted receiving about $1,800 or $2,000 as his share in the transaction, and that he had drawn up the Hewitt-Hall agreement himself in his office.

Mr. Nesbitt reviewed the evidence in the Inglis-Johnston case and asked whether the witness knew the force of Hewitt's evidence in that case. The witness maintained that the $4,000 deal mentioned in that case was different to the $4,000 transaction before him.

Ald. Gowanlock took the stand and said he knew Thomas McIlroy but did not receive any money from him on a bet. He said he had not received any money in this connection nor in connection with the waterworks. Mr. Nesbitt asked the alderman if he had had any financial dealings with a foreign engine company or with any local company that has done work for the city waterworks. The witness denied having any such dealings.

A Montreal Man Disappears.

MONTREAL, Nov. 30.—J. S. Mayo, a prominent oil merchant of this city and well known to the trade throughout the Dominion, has mysteriously disappeared and no trace of him can be found. Mayo had been in financial difficulties and it is feared by his friends that he has committed suicide.

2,000 CHINESE KILLED

What the Engagement at Port Arthur Cost the Celestials.

JAPS ADVISED TO SHEER OFF

European Powers Consider She Has Had All the Satisfaction the Issue Warrants—Count Ito Refuses to Receive Commissioner Dietring.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The correspondent of the Central News at Tokio telegraphs as follows:

Details of the fall of Port Arthur are now beginning to arrive. The number of Chinese killed in the engagement was about 2,000, most of whom were slain during the cannonading of the place on November 20. The statement that there was a further excessive slaughter of Chinese, although it would have been excusable in consequence of mutilation and torture of Japanese soldiers are absolutely denied by the Japanese officers in command.

During the attack upon Port Arthur a large force of Chinese from Foo-Chow and beyond Kinchow attacked the latter place, but the Japanese garrison repulsed them after severe fighting with a heavy loss to the Chinese. The Japanese loss was 20 killed and 60 wounded including several officers.

Another despatch to the Central News says that the Japanese army under Field Marshal Yamagata has passed through Mo-Tien passes and is believed to have taken possession of the city of Liao-Yang, 40 miles from Moukden.

A despatch to the Central News from Tien-Tsin says that Viceroy Li-Hung-Chang has postponed his trip to Pao-Ting-Foo and has gone to Taku to inspect the forts there.

The Standard says: "China must take their misfortunes seriously. She cannot afford to patter with a triumphant enemy. If the United States succeeds in the praiseworthy efforts towards negotiation of peace it will deserve the thanks of humanity. We advise Japan to stay her hand. She can retire from the contest with unstained laurels and with the maximum amount of advantage that external forces will permit her to reap. The idea of a gigantic line outside of the war indemnity is a mere infatuation."

The Daily News reproaches Japan again for continuing the war, saying there is no clear, openly avowed issue between the Chinese and the power which revels in the luxury of hitting them when they are down. No war within our recollection has been on such terms.

The Central News correspondent in Tokio telegraphs that Commissioner Dietring and his suite has sailed for Tien-Tsin. The Japanese premier, Count Ito, declined to receive Commissioner Dietring, saying that he would only receive an envoy who had received his appointment direct from the government of Pekin, and would hold no communication with the Viceroy's messenger. The commissioner desired to discuss with Count Ito terms for the establishment of peace between China and Japan, but owing to the stand taken by the premier this was impossible.

The Novoe Vremya, of St. Petersburg, to-day says the irreconcilable position assumed by Japan renders it incumbent upon the European powers to demand from her an explanation.

It is announced that as a sop to the foreign residents in China, Nankin and one of the ports of the Island of Hainan will be opened to trade.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 30.—The Mercury says that British and other naval officers who visited Port Arthur assert that it must have been captured without much difficulty as only the eastern forts resisted. No Japanese except the gunners fired a shot. The whole place was intact. The officers confirm the report that the Japanese commander ordered his men to give no quarter since in marching from Talien-Wan he found eleven bodies of Japanese soldiers horribly mutilated.

Assaulted and Murdered.

MORGANFIELD, Ky., Nov. 30.—John William Allen went to the home of Mrs. Mary Hicks, about seven miles from Providence, in Webster county, and, finding her alone, Allen criminally assaulted her and beat her over the head. He then cut her across the abomen with his pocket knife and left. Mrs. Hicks was a widow, 63 years old, and resided with her two sons, Jack and Jim. Upon their return home the sons found their mother lying on the floor in a pool of blood. She muttered the name of John William Allen and then died. Early next morning the citizens of the vicinity offered a reward of $500 for Allen's capture and a posse of 100 men on horses began scouring the woods for him.

Tragedy in a Hotel.

WATKINS, N. Y., Nov. 30.—Yesterday Miss Kate Quirk, a domestic employed in the Kendall house, and Charles N. Richards, a saloon keeper, were found in the Quirk woman's rooms with their throats cut. Miss Quirk was dead and Richards cannot recover. The latter is 26 years of age and has a family. It is said that he and Miss Quirk have been intimate for some time and that jealousy prompted Richards to commit the deed. The coroner thinks that Richards killed Miss Quirk and then attempted his own destruction.

Met Death in the Flames.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 30.—Mrs. Mary MacFarland, half-sister of Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, the noted temperance orator, was burned to death yesterday at her rooms, No. 30 Clarence street, Roxbury. She had evidently tried to light the fire with kerosene, and when the other occupants of the house were attracted by the smoke Mrs. MacFarland was dead. Her body was horribly burned. Mrs. MacFarland was 68 years old. She owned considerable property.

A Barge Struck by a Train.

SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 30.—The 9.30 o'clock passenger train on the New York and New England road struck a barge containing the Southbridge Purples, as it was crossing the tracks at Centre street, on the way to the football grounds to play Worcester Polytechnic Institute eleven, and as a result of the disaster two of the young men are dead, five others will probably die and nine received serious injuries.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1894.

EVEN if Quebec has a debt of thirty millions and cannot pay running expenses, its Government has some lucid intervals. Attorney-General Casgrain has introduced into the Quebec Legislature an important measure affecting the law of libel. He proposes to make those who bring these suits, so often merely vexatious, put up the cost before proceeding. Furthermore, the promoter of the suit must give the offending newspaper five days' notice, in order that it may apologize, retract or explain. He proposes to amend the law so that a newspaper, in the event of the suit being pressed after apologizing would only be mulcted in actual damages and not vindictive damages. In cases where one individual sues five or six journals for the same offence, the damages, if any, are to be equitably divided between the newspapers having to pay. There seems to be some sense in these proposed amendments of the law of libel.

THE popularity of Nicholas, the new Czar, is increasing daily. Nothing has done so much to popularize him as his unaffected manners, and the fact that he is dispensing with the military-police body guards of the palace. If, as he is reported to contemplate, he gives parliamentary institutions to his people, and devotes his attention to developing the existing Russian empire, and gives over his poaching attempts upon the empires of his neighbours, he will secure immunity from the bomb fiend and the Nihilist ghosts that haunt the royal haunts in such tangible shapes.

THERE is intemperance in more ways than one—in the undue use of strong drink, and in the undue use of strong language. An Ottawa minister has asserted that all who participate in the proposed carnival are on the toboggan slide to the lower regions. One fails to see that sliding on a toboggan, or masquerading on skates as "Sitting Bull" or Pocahontas is any greater moral slide than the lack of charity indicated by the intemperate utterance of the minister referred to.

"THE New York Herald," it is reputed, "is taking a vote of its readers as to whether they are in favour of opening the saloons for a stated number of hours on Sunday or for closing them tight on that day." Naturally its readers who wish to get tight themselves will express by their vote great consideration for the saloons, which it would grieve their souls to see "tight" on Sunday.

PRINCE BISMARK, the builder of the German nation in his old age and neglected condition, has learned the force of the injunction, not to put one's trust in princes. Though he does not now bask in the sunshine of royal favour, posterity will do ample justice to his remarkable achievements in unifying the German nation, extending its influence and intensifying its prestige.

MR. GEO. MONCRIEF, the sitting member, has been nominated the Common's candidate in the interests of the Conservative party of West Lambton. The P.P.A. had no hand in the nomination, though it will be remembered that they were very active in the Conservative interests in the West at the last general Ontario elections. Such a state of things was foreseen.

MR. MOODY, the Evangelist, seems to select fields for his exertions that supply abundance of material. He has gone from the city of boodling aldermen, Toronto, to the city of boodling policemen, Montreal. He will probably pay his next visit to Ottawa, where it is wickedly proposed to hold a winter carnival.

FOR the fifty million dollar issue of ten year 5 per cent. bonds, the United States has received offers of $154,000,000 and will place the whole amount at 117.07. This will make the rate of interest 2.578 per cent. for the ten years, or but the merest trifle better than Canada's recent loan was got for.

TO LENGTHEN LIFE.

Keep the Kidneys in Good Working Order by Using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

TORONTO, Nov. 30.—It is an established fact that Dodd's Kidney Pills are to-day doing more to increase the average duration of life than any other medicine known. It is true that many people are cured who do not implicity follow the diet rules given on the directions sent out with each box, but it is also true that many more recover more rapidly by strict observance of the instructions given. Hundreds of testimonials have been received by the firm, here, as to the cures effected, by these pills, and not in one instance have they failed.

Burdock Pills do not gripe or sicken. They cure Constipation and Sick Head-ache.

EPIDEMIC OF DIPHTHERIA.

Fitzroy Township Alarmed at the Spread of the Disease.

OTTAWA, Nov 30.—Diphtheria is raging in the vicinity of Kinburn and throughout the township of Fitzroy. So alarming is the spread of the disease that the Board of Health of the township have been called to prompt action.

Mr. Charles Mohr, reeve of Fitzroy, and a member of the township Board of Health, who was here yesterday, said that the board has given full instructions to the medical health officer, Dr. Kyle, to do everything that will prevent the spread of the disease. Dr. Kyle has been given power to procure a building to be used as an hospital where persons suffering from the disease may be cared for. Two trained nurses are to be engaged if required. One trained nurse has already gone from Ottawa to Kinburn, and it is understood another may be required.

There were ten persons down with diphtheria at Kinburn and vicinity yesterday. Several deaths have occurred, the Fraser family, in which three deaths took place, being the greatest sufferers. The death of Mrs. Fraser has cast a gloom over the whole neighborhood. The Kilburn public school has been closed and the Board of Health has authorized the health officer to close every school in the township if necessary.

Skipped With the Benefit Funds.

HAMILTON, Nov. 30.—Herbert Wilson, a local musician and teacher of voice culture, and James Smith, who jointly managed the production of the opera "Billee Taylor," in the Grand Opera house last week by local talent, have left the city with the receipts of the performances. The opera was a great success financially and otherwise, and it was believed St. Peter's Home for Incurables, in aid of which the opera was given, would be at least $200 richer as a result, but the full receipts, exclusive of rent of the Opera house, have gone with Wilson and Smith, and several of the former's friends have been victimized to the extent of about $20 each, which they had loaned to the tenor singer. Mr. McKenna, the costumer, of Toronto, also loses $150 on the transaction. It is estimated the receipts from the three performances amounted to about $760, and Wilson and Smith, besides taking this money with them, have neglected to pay incidental expenses connected with the production of "Billee Taylor."

Case to be Tried for Manslaughter.

GUELPH, Ont., Nov. 30.—The coroner's jury who has been sitting on the Johnson alleged murder case every night since last Saturday, has brought in a verdict of manslaughter against Cass, and Keating is held as an accessory. It will be remembered that Johnson, who was under the influence of liquor, struck Cass twice in the face at Borsche's hotel, when the latter clinched with him and they fell heavily to the floor, Cass on top. In the evidence it was shown that Cass struck the deceased several times while the latter was down, and that some onlookers who tried to pull Cass off were stopped by Keating. The affray lasted only about half a minute, but Johnson was dying when picked up. Drs. Caven of Toronto and Cormack of Guelph held a post mortem. Death, they said, was caused by a rupture of a blood vessel in the brain, caused by violence.

The stars don't twinkle near so keen at night,
The church bell Sunday mornin' an't the cheer
It had when she was here,
Since Hanner died.

The very chickens misses Hanner's care,
And go 'round with a sorfer lonesome air,
There ain't no kind of joy about the place
Without her smilin' face,
Since Hanner died.

The garden tools hang in the apple trees,
The hosseeds are a-killin' off the peas;
There's no one here to hoe the taters now,
Er feed the hogs an' cow,
Since Hanner died.

I s'pose, of course, I'd orter be resigned,
But when I go out in the shed and find
The ax she chopped the wood with all them years,
I wet it with my tears,
Since Hanner died.

"I am thinking," replied Fantine, catching his enthusiasm, "thinking what lovely embroidery patterns it would make."

SANK INTO THE WATER.

A Water Front Disaster at Tacoma, Wash. —Two Lives Lost.

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 30.—On Wednesday night 45 feet of the south end of the Puget Sound warehouse of the Northern Pacific Railroad on the water front, including the office of the road, the cattle sheds and the pump house for filling in tide lands, sank into the bay. Just what caused the disaster is a mystery which no one has as yet explained. John Hansen, a watchman, was in the pump house and has not been seen since. He is believed to have been drowned. Close by was the boat house of H. H. Alger, built partly on made land and partly on piles. A family of six persons were asleep in the boat house at the time. All were rescued except a 15-year-old girl named Emma, who is missing. Yesterday the land seemed to be still slowly slipping into the bay. Whether it was caused by some convulsion of nature remains to be seen. What appeared to be a tidal wave was observed by Sergeant Harris at Old Town, more than a mile away. Several ships parted their cables, but were secured before sustaining any damage. The strip of land which slid into the bay was from 250 to 300 yards long and from 60 to 70 feet wide.

WANT A DAY OF REST.

A Crusade in Buffalo Against the Continental Sunday.

BUFFALO, Nov. 30.—Moved by the agitation of the Sunday opening question and encouraged by the raid recently made by the police on disorderly houses, the Methodist ministers of Buffalo have undertaken to compel the saloons of Buffalo to remain closed on Sunday.

They are preaching it from their pulpits and petitioning the Excise Board as well. One minister has formed a club whose sole purpose is to accomplish this reform, and he and the members of the club spend their Sundays examining into the extent of the Sunday trade.

Buffalo has winked for some years at this violation of the law. A crusade of this kind was begun about five years ago, and it resulted in the front doors being kept closed, but business was conducted quietly by other entrances. Recently there has been little stricture put upon the Sunday traffic.

The ministerial crusade is against the "Continental Sunday," by which the young are brought up to believe that Sunday is a day for dissipation and revelry instead of rest and worship.

Princess Bismarck's Funeral.

VARZIN, Nov. 30.—Pastor Schumann yesterday conducted services in the castle over the body of the dead Princess, to which none but members of the family were admitted. At the conclusion of the services the remains were removed to the pavilion, in which the final rites will be held. The funeral of Princess Bismarck, it is now announced, will take place on Friday. A garden house in the castle park is being fitted up as a vault for the reception of the body, but the Princess' remains will be deposited there only temporarily. Upon the ex-Chancellor's death the body of the Princess will be removed and be interred by the side of her husband. None but the members of the immediate family will be allowed to attend the services on Friday.

The Young Czar's Popularity.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 30.—The popularity of the Czar increases daily. Nothing has done so much to popularize him as his unaffected manners and the fact that he is dispensing with the military and police bodyguards of the palace. His order withdrawing the troops from the line of route upon his wedding day has produced an extra good effect. The crowd were unable to believe that they would be allowed to stand and witness the procession without the invariable hedge of soldiers, and when they saw that this was a fact the populace was frantic with delight and expressed its satisfaction in a thousand ways. There is no doubt that a marked change has taken place everywhere in St. Petersburg life in consequence of the Czar's admirable policy.

The Hova-French Dispute.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—The Malagassy government in its reply to the French ultimatum agrees that the French resident in the island shall become the mediary between Madagascar and the powers, and also agrees that France shall effect such public works in the island as the Malagassy authorities shall deem necessary. The reply also proposes that the Hova-French disputes shall be tried by a mixed court and that the boundaries of the French territory around Diego Suariez shall be definitely settled. The government retains to itself the right to import arms and munitions of war.

The Other Murphy in Jail.

HAMILTON, Nov. 30.—Fred Murphy, brother of Cornelius Murphy now in jail here awaiting the result of extradition proceedings, was arrested in Chicago on Monday last, and is now in jail there awaiting trial. The two brothers were partners in the commission business in Chicago and it is alleged they defrauded several banks there to the extent of about $3,500. Each brother puts the blame on the other. Counsel for Cornelius Murphy applies to the Divisional Court for his discharge, and if the judge's decision be unfavorable the case will be carried to the Court of Appeal, and every effort will be made to thwart extradition to Chicago.

Railways Subsidized in Quebec.

QUEBEC, Nov. 30.—The following is the list of the railways subsidized this year by the Provincial Government with their respective amounts: Quebec and Lake St. John, $380,258; Bay des Chaleurs, $169,180; Montreal and Western, $85,000; Ottawa and Gatineau Valley, $72,800; Canada Atlantic, $7,000; Montfort Colonization, $34,250; Orford Mountain, $215.20; Lotbiniere and Megantic, $37,983.25; United Counties, $37,042.50; Phillipsburg Quarries Junction, $25,720; Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental, $46,977.60.

It's a Queer Woman

who can't have confidence in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Here is a tonic for tired-out womanhood, a remedy for all its peculiar ills and ailments—and if it doesn't help you, there's nothing to pay.

What more can you ask for, in a medicine?

The "Prescription" will build up, strengthen and invigorate the entire female system. It regulates and promotes all the proper functions, improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and vigor. In "female complaints" of every kind and in all chronic weaknesses and derangements, it's the only guaranteed remedy. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in the case of every tired-out or suffering woman, she'll have her money back.

Nothing urged in its place by a dealer, though it may be better for him to sell, can be "just as good" for you to buy.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation, piles, biliousness, indigestion and headaches.

Coughs, colds, sore throat, asthma bronchitis, and all lung troubles are quickly cured by Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam.

Gay Waltz Music.

Johann Strauss, king of the realms of waltz music, celebrated, in Vienna, the other day, his jubilee or his fiftieth year as the most popular orchestra leader or composer. The celebration was a public function and all Vienna was in festive garb, while the strains of Strauss waltzes sounded from every concert room, cafe and dance hall. The waltz king, who is in his 69th year, began life with a name that sounded well in the ears of music-loving people. Johann Strauss, the father, had borne the title of "waltz king" for many years when his son's great talent asserted itself. He looked upon it with ill-favor. He was not to be deposed by his own flesh and blood if he could help it. So he put the boy into a mercantile business and admonished him not to regard himself in any way as a budding genius. But Johann, junior, feared his parent only as long as he was in his immediate presence. He gathered a number of talented fiddlers around him with whom to study and practice, and before he knew it was leader of a full-fledged orchestra. That was in the year 1844. Strauss took his orchestra on a journey through the east, Hungary, Servia, and Roumania. From that time forward the musical world knows his life history. Fortune gave early to him the laurel wreath of success, and well has he worn it.

GOSPEL HYMNS.

"Drooping souls, no longer mourn," was the work of Thomas Hastings, the author of more than six hundred sacred lyrics, and even better known as a composer of church music for use in popular religious assemblies.

"Come, O Thou All Victorious Lord," is by Charles Wesley. It was written for the quarrymen of Portland, and contained several allusions to their business, which were readily recognized and heartily appreciated.

"O Love divine that stooped to share," was by Oliver Wendell Holmes, and first appeared in one of the series of papers entitled "The Professor at the Breakfast Table," published in the Atlantic Monthly for November, 1859.

"I'll praise my Maker while I've breath" came from the pen of Watts. It was a favorite hymn with John Wesley. The day before he died he sang it through, and the night of his death he vainly attempted several times to repeat its words.

M. Schneider, the head of the great Creusot foundries, was married the other day in Paris. Creusot has grown in sixty years from a village of five hundred inhabitants to a town of thirty thousand people—larger than Krupp's town of Essen.

Henry W. Cramp, secretary of the great Cramp Ship-building company, is an enthusiastic botanist, and is particularly interested in ferns and palms. His father, Charles H. Cramp, is said to be one of the best posted men in the country on the commercial and utilitarian value of the various woods of the United States.

FULL OF ENCOURAGEMENT FOR ALL WOMEN.

In Bed 5 Months—Had Given Up All Hope of Getting Well—A Remedy Found at Last to which "I Owe My Life."

Science has fully established the fact that all the nervous energy of our bodies is generated by nerve centres located near the base of the brain. When the supply of nerve force has been diminished either by excessive physical or mental labours, or owing to a derangement of the nerve centres, we are first conscious of a languor or tired and worn-out feeling, then of a mild form of nervousness, headache, or stomach trouble, which is perhaps succeeded by nervous prostration, chronic indigestion, and dyspepsia, and a general sinking of the whole system. In this day of hurry, fret and worry, there are very few who enjoy perfect health; nearly everyone has some trouble, an ache, or pain, a weakness, a nerve trouble, something wrong with the stomach and bowels, poor blood, heart disease, or sick headache; all of which are brought on by a lack of nervous energy to enable the different organs of the body to perform their respective work.

South American Nervine Tonic, the marvellous nerve food and health giver, is a satisfying success, a wondrous boon to tired, sick, and overworked men and women, who have suffered years of discouragement and tried all manner of remedies without benefit. It is a modern, a scientific remedy, and in its wake follows abounding health.

It is unlike all other remedies in that it is not designed to act on the different organs affected, but by its direct action on the nerve centres, which are nature's little batteries, it causes an increased supply of nervous energy to be generated, which in its turn thoroughly oils, as it were, the machinery of the body, thereby enabling it to perform perfectly its different functions, and without the slightest friction.

If you have been reading of the remarkable cures wrought by South American Nervine, accounts of which we publish from week to week, and are still sceptical, we ask you to investigate them by correspondence, and become convinced that they are true to the letter. Such a course may save you months, perhaps years, of suffering and anxiety.

The words that follow are strong, but they emanate from the heart, and speak the sentiments of thousands of women in the United States and Canada who know, through experience, of the healing virtues of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, a prominent and much respected lady, writes as follows:—

"I owe my life to the great South American Nervine Tonic. I have been in bed for five months with a scrofulous tumour in my right side, and suffered with indigestion and nervous prostration. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I cannot recommend it too highly."

Tired women, can you do better than become acquainted with this truly great remedy?

—The Property Holders' Association meets to-night in Mr. Bradburn's office.

—A member received the first degree in Peterborough Lodge, I.O.O.F. last night.

—St. Andrew's Society annual supper takes place this evening at the Morgan House.

—There were plenty of skaters of both sexes out on the ice at on Spaulding's Bay last night.

—Charles Conway, of Norwood, grocer, is reported as having assigned to W. A. F. Campbell.

—The members of the Street and Bridge Committee and the Court of Revision met last evening and transacted some routine business.

—Mr. James May, of Burke's Falls, is spending a few days as the guest of his mother, Mrs. Michael May, Douro street, Ashburnham.

—More than one hundred carloads of grain, slabs, apples etc., have passed over the Harwood branch of the G. T. R. to Cobourg, this fall.

—Corporate communion was administered to the members of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew this morning in St. John's church at 6.30 o'clock.

—A special sermon will be delivered in honour of the day to the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, and others interested, in St. John's church to-night.

—Only for a short time have the roads been smooth this November, as the alternate seasons of frost and thaw following each other so quickly have made them either rough or muddy. The frost does not hold long enough to make good wheeling.

Plan of hall for the Yunck concert is now open at Salisbury's Book Store, where tickets can be obtained. General admission 50c, reserved seats 75c. Doors open at 7:30; concert begins at 8. The public will kindly, if possible, be seated before that hour.

—The net earnings of the C. P. R., for the month of October, were $1,010,247, an increase over the corresponding month of last year of $83,821. These are the largest net earnings of the road, with the exception of October, 1892, when the net figures were $1,024,902.

—An appeal against a magistrates decision imposing a $20 fine upon a person for offering to sell tickets for a horse raffle was entered before Judge Macdougall, Toronto, but the court ruled that the conviction was correct and regular. Geese and turkey rafflers had better take warning.

—In honour of St. Andrew's Day, the window of Miss Rudkins store on George street is most appropriately hung with different designs in the tartan of "Auld Scotia." In the centre of the window is a gay little Scotch laddie clad in the kilts of his native country. Not a few stopped during the day to pause and admire this most attractive display of tartans which is so charmingly arranged.

—Mr. James Clark, of Seymour west, proprietor of the Campbellford and Havelock stage, is just now nursing a dislocated shoulder, the result of falling from a straw stack, while he was at work with other men threshing. He also received a slight injury to his head, but is recovering from both, and with care will be able to move about with his usual activity in a short time.

—A circular has been issued by Mr. T. H. Preston, of Brantford, president, and Mr. J. B. McLean, secretary-treasurer, of the Canadian Press Association, calling attention to the next meeting of this body in February next. This meeting will be of special interest, as about one hundred ex-journalists of this province have been invited to be present and take part in the proceedings. The association should have the active assistance of all newspaper men.

—"Herr Yunck, solo violinist and leader of the Philharmonic Club, won golden opinions as leader of the Quartette, and in his solo, which was enthusiastically redemanded. In response he played a lovely andante by Schubert. He is a artist of undoubted ability, and the club are to be congratulated upon having such a finished artist as leader."—Toronto Globe. Opera House, Dec. 4th. Plan of Hall now open at Sallsbury's. General admission; 50c.; reserved seats, 75c. Doors open at 7:30.

—A grand literary entertainment will be given in the Opera House on Friday, Dec. 7th, in connection with the annual Commencement exercises of the Collegiate Institute. Grenville P. Kleiser, the distinguished reader and personator, will give a number of readings from David Copperfield, and his unique impersonations of the leading caracters of that celebrated novel. Mr. Kleiser is without doubt one of the foremost reciters of the Dominion, and all lovers of the elocutionary art will have a treat in store for themselves Friday, Dec. 7th.

The December Marriage Market.

There are more marriages in December than any other month. There may be no profit in discovering the reason of this fact but there is profit in remembering that Mr. W. J. Green, merchant tailor, has a fresh supply of marriage licenses, and can furnish along with the license a wedding suit and ties, so that you can be mated, tied and suited, a combination that will insure a happy wedded life.

Musicians, Attention!

The piano to be used at the Herr Yunck concert on Dec. 4th, is a cabinet, grand specially selected and loaned by Whaley, Royce & Co., Toronto, and is manufactured by the Reimer Piano Co., and contains one of Wessel, Nichol & Gross' best American actions. The touch is light and elastic—the very acme of perfection. It has great power and volume of tone, combined with a rich quality that delights and captivates. A Tone Liberator, a Patent Muffler, which, when put into operation, produces the softest tone possible, and enables the performer to practice at any hour of the day or night, without disturbing any one in the house or neighbourhood and a Metallic Key-board Support, are special features of these instruments. If this instrument is not sold within a few days after the concert, it will be returned to the show rooms on Yonge street, Toronto.

MR. THOS. REHILL'S STABLES GO UP IN SMOKE.

A Spark from a Pipe Probably Caused the Conflagration.

The fire alarm rang out its shrill summons last night at nine o'clock, and a bright blaze in the south end of the town immediately apprized the citizens of the location of the destructive element. At first sight it appeared as though the C.P.R. was being victimized, and that the freight sheds would be sacrificed, but on arriving at the spot it was found that the blaze was caused by the stables and outbuildings of Mr. Thos. Rehill, directly in the rear of the C.P.R. sheds. In an incredibly short space of time the fire completely enveloped the doomed buildings, and the brigade were unable to battle the flames on their own ground so directed their attention to saving the house, the roof of which was already ablaze in several places. By hard work the fire was prevented from spreading beyond the outbuildings, but these it completely destroyed at a loss of about seven or eight hundred dollars. The horses were safely removed from the barn, but several sets of harness were consumed as was a quantity of food.

Unfortunately Mr. Rehill is experiencing some difficulty regarding the adjustment of his insurance. It appears that he placed the usual three years policy on his property, but in some way an error was made in the writing of the document, and instead of being insured for three years Mr. Rehill finds that he was only insured for one and that the policy lapsed last spring.

The cause of the fire is thought to have been a spark from a pipe, as a number of the neigbours drew their supply of water from his well and came into the yard from behind the barn.

DIPHTHERIA ANTI-TOXINE RECEIVED.

A Patient at the Nicholl's Hospital Treated With it—Results Will be Known To-morrow.

This morning, Dr. Clarke, Medical Health Officer, took out of bond at the customs office, two bottles of diphtheria anti-toxine serum from the Pasteur Biological and Vaccini Institute, New York. The cerum is for use at Nicholl's Hospital. The two small vials containing a small quantity of the pale amber fluid cost $5.00, and the duty charged at the office here is $2.50. However it is not probable that the Government will not insist on this sum being collected, but will, as it was done in Toronto, remit the duty on the signing of a paper, undertaking to pay the duty if it should hereafter be demanded.

Accompanying the fluid are specific directions for its use, and one bottle is required for one case of diphtheria of a virulent type. Experience has shown that the anti-toxine in the great majority of cases so moderates the effects of the specific diphtheritic poison that the patient recovers.

About noon to-day Dr. Clarke and Dr. Pigeon treated a little girl afflicted with diphtheria at the hospital. About two drachms of the fluid were injected into the abdominal region. The result will not be apparent until to-morrow. Meantime the profession in town is watching the progressive effects of the new remedy with great interest.

THE TOWN'S EXPERTS NOW IN THE BOX.

THE ASSISTANT ENGINEER OF MASSACHUSETTS S. B. OF H.

J. Harry Jones, Brantford's City Engineer, in the Witness Box. The Council Chamber Crowded With Citizens Interested in the Arbitration.

The council chamber was filled with citizens yesterday who were anxious to hear what evidence in rebuttal the town would bring forth to knock away the supports from that adduced in favour of the township's case.

Mr. F. X. Goodenough, Assistant Engineer of the Massachusetts State Board of Health, was among the first witnesses examined. His duties were such as to lead him to examine the workings of the different sewerage system of the State by which he was employed, and he was thus possessed of a wide scope for observation as to the effectuality with which the work of the various systems was performed. With the

and after having viewed the Otonobee river, observed its volume, flow and general formation, he was lead to believe that the emptying of the town sewage into the river would be a safe system and an expedient one, and in his opinion would not be attended with any injurious effect either to cattle or the residents along the river.

On being cross-examined by Mr. Watson, the witness acknowledged that he had never studied medicine and therefore had no expert knowledge of the effect of germs on the human system. There was a considerable amount of fencing on the part of the witness before an answer to this effect was DRAWN FROM HIM.

At first he thought he was an expert regarding the component parts of sewage, but Mr. Watson soon had him out of his depth when he closely catechised him regarding the description of a diphtheretic germ. The witness was also unable to classify the poisonous portions of sewerage. Mr. Goodenough stated that he believed in the theory of self-purification of streams, but he went back on the statement, when confronted with the report of the State Board of Health of Massachusetts, which stated clearly that experiments conducted there, recently, completely

DISPROVED SUCH THEORY.

He was not willing to set up his opinion against that of his employers.

City Engineer Jones of Brantford, was then called by the town. He stated that Brantford had recently put in a system of sewerage. The sewer ran through the township of Brantford and emptied into the Grand river, being about one-third the size of the Otonabee. No odour was perceptible in the vicinity of the point of discharge, and nothing existed to denote the presence of the sewer. The shores of the Grand river did not indicate that the sewer emptied into the river. He did not think that under the conditions the Peterborough sewer would work the volume of water being too large to be perceptibly affected. The cattle, in his opinion, could not possibly be harmed by drinking the water. No complaints had been made to him in his position of City Engineer of Brantford, regarding objections to the Brantford sewage emptying into the Grand, although prior to its being laid the farmers were much afraid of being damaged. He did not think any harm could possibly result to a river from the discharge of a sewer into it if it was not used for drinking purposes.

HARM TO THE OTONABEE—

In his cross-examination Mr. Jones stated that he did not pose as a sanitary expert regarding the proportion of injurious matter found in sewage. When he stated that harm could not result from the pollution of the Otonabee by the sewage he from the fact that the proportion of the sewage was so small as compared to the flow of the stream. While he would not care to drink such water himself, he would allow his horse or cow to drink it, and would be willing to drink the milk from the cow afterwards. The ice from such a river could not be used safely, except probably for packing purposes. It could not be used for domestic purposes. The stream would be capable of partially purifying itself again.

Mr. Goodenough was recalled by Mr. Edwards, and stated that in cases the had failed during the winter owing to the beds becoming frozen. The sewage consequently ran over, and was discharged directly into the river. Once frozen over the beds frequently remained so until the spring.

Mr. Willis Chipman, civil and sanitary engineer, of Toronto, was the first witness called by the town, this morning. In his evidence he stated that as cattle were fed off the growth of sewage farms, which were and no harm resulted, that therefore, in his opinion, no harm could result to the cattle from drinking polluted water from the river. He considered the Otonabee polluted now as, of necessity, the town drained into it. A sewerage system discharging into it from Peterborough could not increase the pollution to any great extent. In the formation of ice the bacteria were excluded to a degree of from 60 to 90 per cent. being thrown out in the course of congealation. Still the ice in the river would be too impure, he thought, even now to be used for drinking water. For cooling purposes it would be all right.

ON BEING CROSS-EXAMINED

by Mr. Watson, Mr. Chipman stated that he was not an expert in medicine, chemistry, biology or bacteriology. He could not distinguish between the germs which were passed from the human body in the way of excrement, nor could he name the germs which communicated disease from animals to mankind, or vice versa. He, of his own knowledge, could not say whether or not certain diseases could, or could not, pass from one to the other. He could not judge regarding the extent down the Otonabee river to which the water would be affected by the discharge of the sewage into it.

HE DID NOT AGREE with the report of the "Rivers Pollution Commission" of England, which stated that "there was no river in England long enough to purify itself from a discharge of sewage, even if the point of discharge was at its source." He had derived his information from the works of German experts whom he considered references of a higher character. He considered that if Peterborough had a population of 10,000 using the sewer that forty cubic feet of human excrement, or what sanitary engineers assumed to be poison, would be discharged. Still he held that the volume of water was so large that the pollution would not be increased to any great extent, and if there were no typhoid patients in the town he would not be afraid to drink the water himself three or four miles below the point of discharge. Mr. Chipman's examination occupied about three hours and a half, when the arbitration adjourned at 1.30 o'clock for lunch.

AN OPENING IN FANCY-WORK

Some Exquisite Designs in Needle-work and Hand Painting

Miss E. Melville's ante-Christmas opening sale of fancy goods has come to be recognized as a regular institution and in consequence is always looked forward to and depended upon. Last evening, therefore, her prettily decorated salesroom was well filled with patrons and the many new designs in fancy work excited no little amount of admiration and Miss Melville was the recipient of congratulations on the success of the opening from all sides. Some very dainty designs in veil and tie cases, decorated with appropriate mottoes, were greatly admired as were also some exceedingly pretty designs in photo holders. A few exquisitely worked table covers were coveted by all who beheld them and the photo baskets adorned with "cute" little Brownies also provoked many expressions of delighted surprise. The opening serves two purposes—first, it gives ideas to ladies wishing to give presents to gentlemen at Christmas, and who are undecided just what to make, and then again those can buy who like to give needlework, and who know how it is always prized, but who are unable to execute it. Every imaginable device in fancy work was on exhibition, from the dainty lace doylie to the handsome tea cosy and gorgeous table scarf.

THE GOOD TEMPLARS SPEND A MERRY EVENING.

A Basket Social Engenders Lots of Fun—An Excellent Programme.

A most enjoyable evening was spent by the Good Templars of the town and their friends, in their hall, last night.

An excellent programme was rendered as follows:

Quartette.....Misses Coveney and Spenceley [and Messrs. Freeburn and Gates.
Address.....Mr. Geo. W. Powell
Duet....Mouth organ and autoharp....Miss M. [Kitchred and Mr. T. J. T. Bagley
Reading.....Miss M. Emmerson
Song.....Mr. T. J. T. Bagley
Instrumental trio....Miss and Messrs. Simpson
Reading.....G. W. K. Munro

The chair was occupied by Mr. Geo. W. Powell, and the meeting was opened by the singing of that well known hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers."

At the close of the literary part of the programme a number of baskets containing good things were auctioned off amidst a great deal of merriment caused by the spirited bidding which ensued. The social was closed after the baskets had been bereft of the appetizing eatables with which they were packed.

NEW STEAMBOAT LINE TO ROCHESTER.

Connection Will be Made Straight Through to the Back Lakes.

The citizens of Cobourg are agitating for a new steamboat line from Cobourg to Rochester, which will run in conjunction with the proposed electric railway via Port Hope to Bewdley, (head of Rice Lake) and the Peterborough Steamboat and Navigation Company, town. It is the intention to build two steamers at once on the latest modern principles, and with a capacity of four hundred each, and to have them in ship shape for the opening of next season's navigation. The electric line will be pushed on to completion without delay, as the new company are hustlers, and have sufficient material to back them up in the venture. The proposed route cannot help but become most popular, as it will open up navigation in the northern lakes, as well as the Otonabee, Rice Lake and River Trent, thus affording a most delightful trip across Lake Ontario to the Garden City of America. The initiatory work on the new route is looked forward to begin at an early date.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

Notice to Creditors.

In the Matter of JAMES FROUD and ROBERT F. McGREGOR, of the Town of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough, Builders, Trading Under the Firm Name of Froud & McGregor and as Individuals, Insolvents.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE above named James Froud and Robert F. McGregor have made an assignment to me under the provisions of R. S. O. 1887, Chapter 124, of all their estate and effects, in trust for the general benefit of their creditors.

A meeting of the creditors will be held at my office, No. 137 George street, Peterborough, on Monday, the 10th day of December, 1894, at the hour of TWO o'clock in the afternoon, for the appointment of inspectors and the giving of directions with reference to the disposal of the estate.

All creditors are hereby required to file their claims with the undersigned, with proofs and particulars thereof, as required by said Act, on or before the First day of January, 1895, after which date I will proceed to distribute the estate, having regard to those claims only of which I shall then have had notice.

A GREAT MANY CHILDREN

—have been cured of scrofula and other skin diseases—as well as thousands of grown people, by taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Every disorder that can be reached through the blood, yields to its purifying qualities. Besides, it builds up wholesome flesh and strength; not merely fat like Cod liver oils. A scrofulous condition of the blood invites Catarrh, Bronchitis and Consumption. We're all exposed to the germs of consumption, grip, or malaria—yet only the weak ones suffer. When you're weak, tired out, and debilitated, or when pimples and blotches appear—heed the warning in time. The "Discovery" sets all the organs into healthy action—especially the liver, for that's the point of entrance for these germs, then if the blood is pure, they'll be thrown off. There's no risk. If it fails to benefit or cure in all cases of impure blood or inactive liver, your money is returned.

The key to the situation—if you suffer from Catarrh, you'll find in Dr. Sage's Remedy. No matter how bad your case may be, the proprietors of the medicine promise to pay $500 if they can't cure you. You're cured, or you're paid.

Beyond Belief.

The drummer was telling a story on the train, or rather, was beginning to tell one.

"Some time ago," he was saying, "I was at a hotel in an Illinois town, where I met a remarkable and almost terrible adventure. There was stopping at the some hotel a very unassuming and refined man from Chicago, who—— "

"I beg your pardon," interrupted a quiet person on the drummer's left.

"I said," repeated the drummer, "that at this hotel was a very unassuming and refined man from Chicago, who——"

"I thought that was what you said," interrupted the person again, "and I hope you will excuse me if I decline to listen further to your story. From what I have heard, it has an atmosphere of improbability. I may say impossibility, which promises a strain on the imagination I am sure I cannot submit myself to without having brain fever."

"Certainly, sir, certainly," replied the drummer; "I didn't know you were from St. Louis," and the entente cordiale was suspended.

Dusty Rhodes—Fitzey an' I was partners for years, but I had to scare him away. Weary Walker—Did he do wrong? Dusty Rhodes—Yep; he got so he'd sit by the roadside for hours, takin' what he called a "sun-bath."—New York World.

"We don't," shouted the impassioned orator, "we don't want nothing else but the English language spoke in this country, and don't you forget it!" And the hearers promised themselves to remember what he had spoken.—Indianapolis Journal.

Married man—Not married yet? Old chum—No, I'm not. Married man—Now, see here, old boy; times are changing mighty fast. You take my advice and marry before women get any more emancipated than they are already.—New York Weekly.

A Gentle Hint.

"I think," said the student to the tailor as he was trying on the new coat, "there's too much fullness over the upper pocket."

"Oh, I beg your pardon," hurriedly replied the knight of the sheers, "I had put the bill there."—Fliegende Blaetter.

Patient's Husband—Doctor, won't you please give strict orders that she must not read the newspapers?

Billi Had a Bully Time.

Mme. de Billi, wife of the Danish ambassador to the court of St. James, is an American by birth. Her father was Chancellor Zabriskie, of New Jersey, and before her marriage she was noted, not only for her beauty, but for her vivacity and wit. Many stories illustrating her love of fun are told of her. One of them relates to her first meeting with her husband. It was at a great reception, at the close of which Mr. de Billi, who had been in the country only a short time, came up to her and asked her what was the conventionally proper thing for him to say to his hostess on bidding her adieu. With a perfectly sober face, though her eyes sparkled with merriment, she replied that in this democratic land the only proper thing to say was "Madame, by golly, I have had a bully time." Believing that this was a straight tip," he thus delivered himself. The old chronicles of Jersey City say that when he first discovered the joke he was furious, but his fury was short lived, and he married the beautiful belle.—New York Tribune.

A Beautiful Object.

Miss Dudely—"There is no object so beautiful to me as a conscientious young man. I watch him as I do a star in heaven."

Miss Snobberly—"That's my view, exactly. In fact, I think there is nothing so beautiful as a young man, even if he isn't conscientious."

Dyspepsia seldom causes death, but permits its victims to live on in misery. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures dyspepsia and all stomach troubles.

EXILED FROM HOME.

It is said that at this time there are twenty-one ex-sovereigns residing in different parts of Europe, none of them in the countries they once ruled.

Pius IX., the late pontiff, was driven from Rome during the stormy days of 1848. He fled in disguise to Gaeta, and remained there until restored by foreign aid.

Emperor Charles V. lived in voluntary exile during the last years of his life. His chief occupation in his retirement was devising new viands to tempt His gluttonous appetite.

A great many of the popes have been forced into exile, generally by emeutes among the turbulent Roman populace. A few were restored, but most of them died in exile.

Marie de Medici, the mother of three queens, was driven into exile by the influence and address of Cardinal Richelieu. She lived in great poverty, often wanting the necessaries of life.

Jerome Bonaparte remained in exile from 1815 to the revolution of 1848, when he was restored to his military rank and made governor of the Invalides. He died in Paris in 1860.

Whole families have sometimes been exiled at one time. The Stuart family was twice driven from England, and at different times the Bourbons and the Bonapartes have been expelled from France.

One View of Horseracing.

Horse racing in New York state is in danger of extinction, and men like Keene, Galway, Belmont, Morris and the Dywers are opposing bitterly the proposed constitutional amendment. Horsemen interested in racing and the breeding of the thoroughbred asserts that the proposed amendment to the Constitution prohibiting pool-selling and book-making will ruin the value of their properties and seriously affect the general agricultural interests.

Royal Tastes.

Queen Victoria has a great dislike to the present mode of colored underclothing, even of the most dainty tints, and always prefers a pure white. Her Majesty has also a well known antipathy even to colored borders to handkerchiefs.

A Terrible Experience:

Mr. Geo. Tribe, of Straffordville, Ont. a pretty village near the shores of Lake Erie, went through an experience lately that he will never forget. He tells it in his own words:

"For three years I suffered from skin disease in its worst form. I tried Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura remedies, and doctored one year with the best physicians in the land, but got no benefit; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but failed to remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard, white scales; the itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. I can truly say I owe my good health to B. B. B., and I advise all sufferers to use this splendid medicine.

GEO. TRIBE, Straffordville, Ont.

FRATERNAL ASSESSMENT LIABILITY.

"Can't I get out when I please, and have no liability?"

Most people expect "yes" for an answer to this question, when they say they are members of an assessment insurance society, and begin to think of their responsibilities as such. It is important for them to know that they cannot escape liability; because every member, no matter when he drops out, is liable for any deficiencies that may arise in future, if they were developed during his membership. Here is an instance:

The United Masonic Benefit Association of Missouri was some years ago an active and apparently prosperous assessment concern. It provided no reserve, but offered low rates, cheap insurance, and seemingly hoped that new blood would make up for increasing mortality resulting from increasing age. By and bye its forces began to fall off, not enough "new blood" came in, and the cost of membership ran up in a very uncomfortable way. Presently the healthier lives began to feel their burden pressing heavily and steadily left the ranks, until so few were left in the association that the assessments amounted to $140—one hundred and forty dollars—on each certificate. The remaining members refused to pay such a sum, and the concern failed. But there were unpaid death claims for a large amount due, and the State Superintendent of Insurance thought they ought to be paid. So he began suits at law against individual members to enforce payment of the assessments against them; the court has decided that they must pay. The feelings of those who are thus compelled to pay what they never expected have undergone a change with respect to assessment insurance.

Replying to some enquiries which had been made upon this point of liability, and citing this case illustration of what may be expected in any similiar case which might be pressed to suit, the Insurance Monitor says: "The decision referred to answers our question which has been debated whether the member's liability is limited to sums which he may choose to pay; in, other words, whether he can get out when he pleases without further harm. This he cannot do. Every member, no matter when he may drop out, is liable for any deficiencies which may crop up in future, resulting during his membership. The only safe course for parties that apprehend breakers ahead is to drop their membership before the breakers are reached; and the misfortune of this course is that the faster they drop, the faster the association drives towards the breakers."

There seems to be only one course open for the prudent man who may be determined to avoid possible liability; that is to keep out of such associations entirely and buy his insurance of the regular companies.—Monetary Times

The Blavatsky Nonsense.

If there were a single barnacle goose left in the Orchades, i.e., the Orkney Islands, tourists would by this time have given a good account of it. There are few countries left now beyond the reach of steamers or railways, and if there is a spot never trodden by a European foot that is the very spot which is sure to be fixed upon by some adventurous members of the Alpine club for their next expedition. Even Central Asia and Central Africa are no longer safe, and hence no doubt the great charm which attaches to a country like Thibet, now almost the only country some parts of which are still closed against European explorers.

It was in Thibet therefore that Mme, Blavatsky met her Mahatmas, who initiated her in the mysteries of Esoteric Buddhism. Mr. Sinnet claims to have followed in her footsteps, but has never described his or her route. Of course, if Mme. Blavatsky and Mr. Sinnet had only told us by what passes they entered Thibet from India, at what stations they halted, and in what language they communicated with the Mahatmas, it would not be courteous to ask any further questions. That there are Mahatmas in India and Thibet no one would venture to deny. The only doubt is whether these real Mahatmas know, or profess to know, anything beyond what they can, and what we can, learn from their sacred literature. If so, they have only to give the authorities to which they appeal for their esoteric knowledge, and we shall know at once whether they are right or wrong.

Their Sacred Canon is as accessible to us as it is to them, and we could therefore very easily come to an understanding with them as to what they mean by Esoteric Buddhism. Their Sacred Canon exists in Sanskrit, in Chinese, and in Thibetan, and no Sacred Canon is so large and has at the same time been so minutely catalogued as that of the Buddhists in India, China and Thibet.—The Nineteenth Century

Phrases From Scott and Others.

In spite of Scott's continued popularity, few people remember that from "Old Mortality" we have "a sea of upturned faces," and Byron is never thanked for "flesh and blood can't bear it." The "most humorous and least exemplary of British parsons" is known to have thought "they order things better in France," and "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," but we seldom credit him with "I saw the iron enter into his soul." Yet that keen image of grief, so often on our lips, may also be found in the "sentimental journey."

Cowper is comparatively little read—the immortal "John Gilpin" always excepted—therefore we may be forgiven if the source of "hand and glove" or "Her dear five hundred friends," has slipped our memories. The same may be said of Rogers' "To known her was to love her," Congreve's "Married in haste and regent at leisure," Farquhar's "Over the hill and far away," and Southey's "March of intellect." Sir Philip Sidney, who was poet, philosopher, and, best of all, hero, should share a better fate. How many can tell that it was he who first said in English, "God helps those who help themselves"?—The Cornhill Magazine.

Naughty Mrs. Vanderbilt.

Although Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt is a haughty person, she is not without friends among the poor. It has yet to be made known that this aristocratic lady, in spite of her pleasure-seeking instincts has a good deal of the blue stocking in her, says The New York Press. She was at one time an honorary member of the Mobile Historical society, and had a decided taste for botany. To this day she takes a great interest in astronomy, and is a subscriber to the publications of the Royal Astronomical Society. She has always been interested in astronomy, and possesses a wonderful collection of telescopes, and has more than once been twitted by the few whom she allows to be her warm friends on her penchant for star gazing. The rumor, therefore, that she will immure herself at Newport may not mean that she will be deprived of all amusement. She is as fond of retirement and of books as any society woman can well be. One of the finest private libraries in existence is the property of Mrs. Vanderbilt. She can perhaps find some consolation in them, and should they fail there are her old friends the stars, which she can gaze upon, and if there be any faith in astrology in her the information they impart may relieve some of her suspense in regard to the future.

ITCHING PILES AND PIN WORMS.

No More Misery. Gives Instant Relief.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—blood and matter form, excessive moisture is caused. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and anguish. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause than Itching Piles, yet its effects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

POOR MODERN TOOTH.

HOW WE ABUSE OUR VERY SERVICEABLE MOLARS

One Authority Says Vegetable Eaters Have Worse Teeth Than Meat Eaters—The Teeth of Egyptians, Anglo-Saxons and Others Compared.

A correspondent sends this interesting letter to Nature on the subject of teeth: "In a letter to Nature for May 17, on 'The Teeth and Civilization,' the writer advances a theory to account for the great prevalence of decay of the teeth at the present day, and concludes that Dr. Wilberforce Smith's investigations show that 'the ancients enjoyed a perfect set of teeth till advanced years, and modern savages enjoy the same blessing.'

"I have not had the opportunity of seeing Dr. Wilberforce Smith's communication, but the number of cases examined in this particular instance (ten Sioux Indians) would hardly be sufficient to draw any conclusions from; and even in these ten cases all the teeth were not examined. I think, however, it has been sufficiently proved by several careful investigations that caries of the tooth is not a purely modern disease, and is not entirely confined to civilized races. My father, in a communication to the Odontological Society in 1870, brought together the results of an inquiry extending over more than ten years, in which he examined over 2,000 skulls, including all the available collections in Great Britain, and his conclusions as to the prevalence of dental caries differ very considerably from those of the writer of this letter.

"Among thirty-six skulls of ancient Egyptians he found caries in fifteen (41.66 per cent.); in seventy-six Anglo-Saxon skulls he found twelve cases (15.67 per cent.), while among 44 miscellaneous skulls of ancient Britons 20.45 per cent. showed carious teeth. Several other collections gave similar results.

"Again, with regard to savage races—among the Tasmanians 27.7 per cent. of caries was found, among native Australians 20.45 per cent., among East African skulls 24.24 per cent., and among those of West African natives 27.96. Similar results were obtained on the examination of skulls of many other races, but I think I have quoted figures sufficient to prove that caries is not confined to civilized races or to modern times.

"It is quite comprehensible that excessive nerve strain, especially by affecting vascular supply, may lead to imperfect nutrition during the development of the teeth, and we know that the diseases of early childhood have a very marked effect upon tooth structure, indicated by the ridged and defective teeth so frequently seen, and it seems quite possible that too early stimulus of the brain in childhood may have a similar effect on forming teeth. It is very difficult, however, to understand how nerve strain can have any direct effect upon fully formed teeth, and we should, I think, look for the explanation of the cases referred to in some vitiated condition of the fluids of the mouth, caused by the depressed condition of health so common among hospital nurses.

"There is little doubt that an open-air life and healthy surroundings encourage the formation of sound teeth in a sound body; but I cannot but think that the principal cause of caries must be looked for in the food. It is plainly shown by many investigators, and in the paper above referred to, that caries is rare among peoples who subsist principally upon animal food; the Esquimaux showed, among sixty-nine skulls, only two cases of caries, and the largest amount of disease was found among those races who lived upon a mixed or exclusively vegetable diet. These results are, of course, easily understood under the more accurate knowledge which we now possess of the immediate cause of dental caries.

"As to the relative frequency with which different teeth are effected, I think statistics plainly show that it is the first molar tooth of the lower jaw which is most prone to decay of any tooth in the series, and most authorities consider the second lower molar as the next in order; with these two exceptions, the upper are more frequently diseased than the lower teeth. This would, however, not affect the argument, as the lower molars are of course also supplied by the fifth nerve.

"Structural defects, due to inherited weakness or imperfect nutrition during the development of the teeth, combined with the use of soft cooked food, which is long retained in contact with them, and is of a nature eminently suitable for fermentation, give us, I think, the principal factors of decay among civilized races.

"While allowing the influence of nerve strain in early childhood, and as a factor in hereditary transmission of defective structure, I fail to see how it can influence teeth already formed."

SHORT CONFEBENCE OF S. S. TEACHERS.

THE SUNDAY AFTERNOON WORKERS IN SESSION.

Rev. J. J. Rae and Rev. Mr. Trotter Conduct Talks on Subjects of Interest to the Sunday School Teachers—A Large Attendance at the Murray Street Baptist Church.

There was a large assemblage in the Murray street Baptist church last night of those interested in the Sunday school work of the town. The occasion was a convention of Sunday school teachers for the purpose of listening to addresses on different departments of the work, and of informal discussion thereon.

The proceedings were formally opened by the singing of the hymn "Crown Him Lord of All," Inspector Garvin taking the chair.

Rev. A. MacWilliams led in prayer, after which the Misses Belleghem rendered a most pleasing vocal duet, entitled "The Billows Swell."

"Teacher Training," was the subject upon which Rev. J. J. Rae of the Charlotte street church, addressed the conference. His remarks were the teacher, text book, and scholar. Taking up the subject of the teacher he asked for the fundamental principles upon which to choose a teacher. A voice from the audience remarked that he thought spiritualism in a teacher should be looked for, but another was of the opinion that moral and intellectual ability was an essential. Mental training was also spoken of as something needful in a teacher, but it was thought that other things being equal, a person possessing simply a general education was preferable as of a nature more easily adapted to the work.

CLASSED UNDER THREE HEADS—

The "text book" was then taken up—its purpose, its scope and its adaptation were

ALL THOROUGHLY DISCUSSED.

It was thought that the scope should be sufficient to enable the teacher to trace back the different books to their authors. This was considered more necessary in teachers of older classes than those who taught the infant departments. It was thought by Mr. Rae that it was most essential that the teacher should know the history of the Bible, as well as the history in the Bible. Concerning its adaptability, he expressed the opinion that it should be so arranged as to reach all who should come in contact with it.

The scholars, the speaker explained, were not to be considered simply as the children. He thought no parent, no matter how old, could afford to lounge at home and to the Sunday School. Such action put the wish into the heads of the children that when they were old enough, they too would lounge at home.

The thoughts of the scholar should be drawn out. The teacher should not do all the talking. The scholar should be recognized as a worker and as a redeemed one. It would be well, Mr. Rae thought, if all the classes could have a few minutes of private prayer amongst themselves on Sunday.

Regarding the practicability of the question the essentials of the teachers' training were a school and teachers' meetings. In the teachers meeting regular methods

SHOULD BE FOLLOWED.

A good idea was to give a question at one teacher's meeting to be discussed at the next. For instance, when the roll was called each teacher present would be expected to give an answer to such a question as "What is the greatest difficulty I experience with my class." Every teacher should thoroughly study out the meaning of every word in the lesson. A teacher should never go to his class unless he could put into simple language all the hard words in the lesson. Normal classes were considered a necessity and a possibility in every Sunday school. The difficulties pertaining to the formation of normal departments were fully discussed.

In closing his most interesting talk, in which many had joined, Mr. Rae impressed on those present the fact that oratorical work in the Sunday school was and now practical work was the order of the day.

The hymn "Stand up, stand up for Jesus" was sung, and preluded "a birds eye view of the life of Christ" by Rev. Mr. Trotter. Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, he stated, had all written on the life and death of the Saviour, but all did not speak of the same things. One spoke of certain occasions to which the others contained no reference. Biblical scholars had endeavoured to straighten out the chronology of Christ, but the work was a difficult one. Some spoke of His ministrations extending over the period of a year, while others to three and four. The divisions of the life of Christ were brought under six principles heads, viz., the private years, the opening events of his career, probably eight months; the Judean ministry embracing about eight months; the Galilean ministry, embracing about sixteen months, and the Berean ministry.

STRETCHED IT OUT

A map was drawn on the blackboard by Mr. Trotter and upon it were chalked out the principal portions of country traversed by Christ during his sojourn upon earth. Then followed a condensed, but remarkably interesting succession of remarks, by the speaker, clearly portraying an intimate knowledge of the subject with which he was dealing. The singing of a hymn and a short prayer by Rev. J. J. Rae brought the conference to a close.

Beyond Dispute.

There is no better, safer or more pleasant cough remedy made than Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. It cures hoarseness, sore throat, coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles.

"Ask your stove or hardware dealer for F. L. Madden's Enamel. It is the only Stove Pipe Varnish that does not smell, smoke or burn off."

DUMMER.

On Wednesday evening, Nov. 28th, a very pleasant and interesting event took place at the residence of Mr. W.J. Little, Dummer, when Miss Patience Singleton was united in marriage to Mr. Thos. Wilson, the popular blacksmith at Hall's Glen. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Robson, of Warsaw, in the presence of a number of invited guests and friends of the contracting parties. The bride, who was dressed in a very becoming wedding costume, was assisted by Miss E. Doidge, of Lakefield, while Mr. David Crowe supported the groom. After the ceremony had been performed the assembled guests sat down to a sumptuous wedding supper, after which the evening was spent in social enjoyment. The bride was the recipient of many handsome and useful presents. The happy couple will take up their residence at Hall's Glen, and have the best wishes of a large number of friends for their future prosperity.

NORWOOD.

A very pretty wedding took place on the 26th inst, at the R. C. church, Norwood, when Jas. Henry, engineer, of Havelock, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony, to Mrs. E. Taylor, of Norwood. The bride was richly attired in bluette blue satin finish goods, trimmed with velvet, and hat to match, and was supported by Miss Kate McGuire, who was becomingly dressed in brown. The groom was supported by D. Flynn, of Havelock. After the ceremony the party returned to the home of the bride where a wedding breakfast was served. The bride received many handsome and costly presents, which marked the high esteem in which she was held. The happy couple left on the evening train for Detroit and other points, followed by the good wishes of all. When they return they will take up their residence in Havelock the home of the groom.

ANOTHER DULL INDUSTRY.

Campbellford Herald.

Among the many industries which are being knocked to pieces by active competition is that of frog catching, the market for which is about as dull as for anything else. There is now little or no profit in the business, and the catchers have abandoned their busy work till prices take a jump. The latest quotations given by American dealers are 20 to 30 cents per dozen, and as there are about two pounds in this number, it simply means 10 to 15 cents per pound. Take from this the cost of shipping, including express charges, duty and commission, amounting to eight cents per pound, and there is a very small margin left for the labour of capturing and skinning the "croaker," and the consequence is there are no shipments being made. Contrast the difference with the market a few years ago, when there was a brisk demand for frogs' legs at 50 cents, and even as high as 60 cents per pound. These prices are figures of the past that will never be reached again.

A SUIT OF CLOTHES AND A NEW DRESS

THE PRIZES.

In order to stimulate public interest in the Trent Valley Canal, and also to get at some idea of the public feeling in reference to the date of completion of this important local public work, which has been hung up before the eyes of the public for the past half century; and which to the eyes of the Government seems to assume a vastly increased importance just previous to an election, the EXAMINER offers the following prizes as an inducement to some of our expert mathematical and logarithmic specialists to exercise their estimating powers.

Any person sending in to the EXAMINER five of the following coupons, containing their estimate of the time when they think the sections will be completed, will have a chance to compete for the following valuable prizes:

To the lady making the nearest average estimate, A NEW DRESS.

To the gentleman making the nearest average estimate, A NEW SUIT OF CLOTHES.

No estimate considered unless accompanied with five of the following coupons, which will be printed in the DAILY EXAMINER, every day this week.

Acadia Sugar Refinery.

HALIFAX, N.S., Nov. 29.—The semi-annual meeting of the Acadia Sugar Refinery Company, which controls Moncton, Nova Scotia, and Woodside (Dartmouth) refineries, was held here yesterday. The statement showed a profit of $7,603, without allowing for depreciation. No dividend was declared for the last 14 months on the $2,000,000 capital. The old directors were re-elected, T. E. Kenny, M.P., being elected president in place of J. I. Stairs, M.P., who retired.

Found Daniel Shea's Cap.

HAMILTON, Nov. 30.—The Glengarry regimental cap, worn by Dan. Shea, the missing volunteer, when he was last seen, was found in the bay yesterday near the Grand Trunk freight sheds. It is probable Shea wandered over to the dock on Thursday last after returning from Toronto and fell into the bay and was drowned. A grappling party will search for the body to-day.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees.
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease),
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want;
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I miss,
They gave us every one a kiss,
And said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life!
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

The Use of Glasses.

Speaking from over twenty years' experience, I can sum up in a few words some of the results of indiscrimate use of glasses. In the case of odd eyes—gradual weakening of the good eye and making it much more susceptible to disease such as glaucoma, iritis, etc. In cases of astigmatism unsuitable glasses will cause neuralgic pains in the eyes, frontal headache, nausea, paralysis of the accommodation, resulting in permanently impaired vision which no skill can restore. The time will come, and I hope soon, when sight-testing opticians will be placed on the same footing as dentists and chemists, and have to pass an examination before being allowed to practice. Very truly,

IN REPLY TO GARDNER

Sir Charles Tupper Again Denies the Existence of Pleuro-Pneumonia.

WHY NOTICE WAS NOT GIVEN

The Canadian Contagious Diseases Act Regulates Such Notifications—The Disease Found Among the Animals Was Due to the Conditions of Transit.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Sir Charles Tupper, Canadian High Commissioner, has published a reply to Mr. Herbert Gardner's statement in behalf of the government, concerning pleuro-pneumonia in Canada. He says:

"The offer of Canada to pay the expenses of an inquiry by veterinary surgeons is made without qualification or question as to the cost or the result. I challenge the Board of Agriculture to deny that. If any of the alleged cases since 1890 had this pleuro-pneumonia, the disease must have appeared in many parts of Canada before this. No case was discovered before 1890 or since."

As to Mr. Gardner's advice that Canada henceforth gave notice of all cases of pleuro-pneumonia found within her borders, Sir Charles says: "He evidently has overlooked Canada's Contagious Diseases Act, which regulates such notifications. As pleuro-pneumonia has not existed in Canada, no notification has been given. The disease found among animals arriving in England was unknown in Canada and was due to the conditions in transit. Hence it is called transit pneumonia."

In conclusion, Sir Charles writes: "The Canadian Government feels aggrieved that the representations already made in London, and the information sent, proving that Canada is free from pleuro-pneumonia, has not led to the removal of the restrictions."

FROM THE CAPITAL.

An Alleged Murderer Pardoned — Cree Indians in Arms.

OTTAWA, Dec. 1.—His Excellency, the Governor-General has pardoned Wm. Preeper, the alleged murderer of a man named Doyle, of Halifax, who has been in Dorchester penitentiary since 1888. Preeper was well acquainted with Doyle and his wife and frequently stayed at their house. Doyle was supposed to be pretty well off. One day his body found in the woods outside the city. He had been shot. Preeper was arrested, tried and convicted of murder and sentenced to be hanged. In the evidence it was stated that Preeper and Mrs. Doyle were very intimate with one another, and it was supposed by some that Preeper had got Doyle out of the way so that he could marry the widow, and thus come into possession of a good home. His sentence was subsequently commuted to life imprisonment and he was placed in Dorchester penitentiary. He is reported to have obeyed all orders and acted in the most kindly and genial manner possible.

The Department of Indian Affairs was informed by telegraph from Butte City, Montana, that 300 Canadian Cree Indians were up in arms against the whites, and cattle were being fired on and stolen. Department officials are of opinion that the Indians are not Canadians, having emigrated after Riel's execution. They claim that Canadian Indians cannot leave reserves without permits.

General Herbert has gone to New York, where he will meet his wife, who is returning from England.

FRANCE AND MADAGASCAR.

The Queen Issues a Manifesto—Respect for British Residents.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—The last mail despatches from Antanarivo say that on October 30th the Queen of Madagascar issued a proclamation which was read in the presence of 15,000 persons. The proclamation gave the main points in the French ultimatum and the reasons of the Malagassy Government for rejecting the same. The Prime Minister, speaking in the Queen's name, said that the French had left the country and that all the remaining foreigners were friends and must be treated with the greatest kindness and respect. The people's delegates replied that they had always regarded the British as friends and would be glad to show their appreciation. This declaration was received with great applause.

The Hova authorities do not desire a conflict with the French and probably would concede much to avoid war. The British community in Anatanarivo deeply regret the rupture of pacific relations.

A Royal Abbess Dead.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 1.—Princess Louise of Schleswig-Holstein Sonderburg Glucksburg, sister of King Christian IX. of Denmark, and aunt of the Dowager Czarina of Russia, the King of Greece and the Prince of Wales, died yesterday from the effects of an operation performed upon an abcess. She was 74 years of age. She was appointed abbess of the convent of Itzehoe, Holstein, in 1860, and remained in that institution until her death.

SERGT.-MAJOR RUNDLE'S BENEFIT CONCERT.

A Highly Successful Entertainment Held Last Evening.

The benefit concert to Sergt.-Major Rundle in the opera house last evening was patronised by a good sized audience, and the programme presented was an excellent one in every respect.

The concert opened with a chorus of fifty voices, girl pupils of the Public school. This chorus, as well as the one in the second part, was well rendered.

Next followed a grand march by a number of young ladies, together with a tableau posing, (three figures.) The different movements in this number were well executed, and the young ladies acquitted themselves admirably.

Miss Maggie Butcher next contributed a pianoforte solo and was rewarded with a warm encore.

The cymbalette drill by twenty young ladies was one of the best numbers on the programme, the performers going through the different movements with remarkable ease and grace.

Mr. Everett Hall in his whistling solo created a very favourable impression and was greeted with a recall, while the different exercises on the flying rings by Herb Carleton were well executed.

The Union Jack drill and march, grand chorus, "Rule Brittania," and tableaux "Protection," by twenty young ladies was a very pretty sight and undoubtedly the best feature of the programme. Miss Flossie Hall took the solo part in splendid voice.

The Misses Belleghem, in their vocal duet, did themselves credit, singing with taste and expression. They were forced to respond to a hearty encore.

Twenty young ladies, in the calisthenic stick drill, gave a faultless exhibition of that exercise and were warmly applauded.

Misses Coveney, Borland and C. Belleghem, in their club swinging exercise, went through the different movements with great freedom and proved to have complete control in the handling of the clubs.

The programme concluded with a selection by the Harmony Club.

Sergt. Major Bundle has reason to be proud of his young pupils and of their performance last evening. The young ladies, as they appeared on the stage, were models of health and physical strength, which clearly illustrates the beneficial results of the calisthenic exercises taught in the schools by the Sergt.-Major.

The accompanists of the evening were Misses Vina Belleghem, Kate Henderson and Fred. Benton.

THE NEW ASSOCIATION ELECTS OFFICERS.

The Constitution and Bylaws Discussed and Adopted.

The Property Holder's Association met last evening and adopted the constitution and bylaws, along the lines suggested, by a committee appointed at the inaugural meeting.

The following officers were elected:

President—T. E. Bradburn.
1st Vice-President.—Peter Hamilton.
2nd Vice-President.—C. McGill.
Sec.-Treas.—W. G. Morrow.

Executive Committee.—Messrs. J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., D. W. Dumble, John Carnegie, E. H. D. Hall, R. M. Dennistoun, Dr. Geo. Burnham, T. G. Hazlitt, P. J. McNamara, R. S. Davidson, W. Rudkins, Henry Denne, W. J. Langford, J. J. Hartley Edg. Pearce, A. L. Davis and G. W. Hatton.

The meeting was one which inspired all with the belief that the new organization had a bright future before it and that its sphere of usefulness would be a large one. Among those present last night were Messrs J. J. Hartley, Edg. Pearce, Alex. Greaves, W. J. Langford, R. A. Morrow, R. B. McKee, D. W. Dumble, A. L. Davis, W. A. Morrow, W. G. Morrow, T. E. Bradburn, Henry Denne, W. J. Hall, C. McGill, Geo. Dunsford, Peter Hamilton, Wm. Bradburn, C. W. Sawers, R. E. Wood, Jno. Carnegie, C. Halpin, W. H. Hill, J. H. Burnham, G. W. Hatton, Justus Dunn and Harry Denne.

The association will hereafter meet regularly on the second Tuesday in each month in Mr. Thos. Bradburn's office.

THE TROUBLES OF BUSINESS.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR.—In your issue of the 26th, you published an excellent report of the sermon preached by the Rev. Mr. Davidson, rector of St. John's church, on Sunday evening 25th.

I listened to the sermon and was very much interested and pleased with the sound advice and good suggestions given in it.

I would advise any merchant who was not there to get a copy of your paper and read it.

No doubt a very small percentage of the population know the trials and troubles of the business man, and I wish to call attention to one or two matters in this connection which Mr. Davidson omitted, no doubt inadvertently, to deal with.

One of these is the practice which I am afraid prevails to a considerable extent by some of our citizens, going out of town, chiefly to Toronto to make their purchases. Now this is unfair to the local merchants as is obvious to any person thinking for a moment. The golden rule would suggest that the man who makes his money in town by the help and patronage of the citizens generally, merchants included, should spend it in the town.

Another matter is the harm that results to the legitimate trade and the credit of the town by inexperienced men embarking in business with the result that failure is certain. bankrupt stocks are flung on the market at cut rates and trouble is added to the loss of the legitimate merchant.

Still another evil that seriously affects business men is the failure of creditors to pay promptly when in scores of cases it is in their power to do so. Many a man is driven on the rock who would weather the storm if his creditors would make prompt payment. I have thrown out these mere suggestions, feeling that their justice will commend itself to the good sense and fairness of the readers. I have not time to make the obvious comments their nature calls for, and, indeed, lack of time has prevented me from sooner referring to these matters.

Yours very truly,
MERCHANT.

THE CAVAN-MANVERS SANITARY SQUABBLE.

The Rejoinder of Cavan—An Investigation Demanded.

A few days ago, the EXAMINER reprinted from a Toronto paper, the following charges made to the Provincial Board of Health, by Manvers against Cavan, in respect to an outbreak of diphtheria:—

1. That houses in which diphtheria cases existed had not been placarded.
2. That sanitary police were not employed.
3. That houses in which deaths occurred from infectious diseases were not placarded.
4. That the Medical Health Officer was not in attendance at the burial of persons who died from diphtheria.
5. That houses in which diphtheria existed had not been fumigated.
6. And that persons residing in houses in which diphtheria occurred were allowed to mingle with the public.

Having published these charges, in justice to Cavan, the rejoinder of the latter is given, as in the subjoined extract from the resolution unanimously adopted by the Cavan council:

And whereas all the above charges are grossly untrue. Therefore be it resolved,

That we, the members of the local Board of Health, of the municipality of the Township of Cavan, do most emphatically deny all of the above charges and that we condemn the action of the Manvers Board of Health for passing said resolution of condemnation, without taking any steps whatsoever to find out whether the charges made were true or false, but based said charges on idle rumour. That we demand that the Provincial Board of Health shall make a full investigation into the charges made forthwith, feeling assured that when the investigation is made, that this board will be fully exonerated from any blame whatsoever in the premises, and that the secretary be instructed to forward a copy of this resolution to the secretary of the Provincial Board. Carried unanimously,

ALIEN CANAL CONTRACTORS.

The Dominion Government has no conspicuous record for interest in the behalf of Canadian labour, and now there is an apparently justifiable "kick" among Canadian contractors over the fact that the contract for a section of the Trent Valley Cana was given to an alien—Onderdouk—a name that arouses malodorous reminiscences. According to the Ottawa Free Press this "alien" cry is raised. It is certainly rather singular upon the surface that a "home industry" government should go to the United States for its contractors to the exclusion of those in Canada. But when it is understood that Onderdonk's contract is for a very high figure, much beyond what others tendered for, and, as the disappointed ones say, much beyond what would, if the work is ever done, give a good profit, the singular action of the government may be understood. The elections are at hand. The Free Press has received a letter written by Mr. Charles Shiraz who reminds it that Mr. Onderdonk has a record ; that he is an alien contractor introduced to the country by Sir Charles Tupper and that the introduction cost the taxpayers $1,118,000. It will be remembered that in the matter of the Kamloops and Port Moody sections of the C.P.R., Onderdonk's tender was $226,000 higher than that of Charlebois & Macdonald, but the "alien" got it. Then he bled the country in the matter of some old rolling stock, and another $202,000 was paid for material which the arbitrators appointed had previously valued at $72,000. So far the loss to the country footed up to $428,000. The inventory of the articles appraised by the arbitrators consisted of 29 locomotives and 397 flat cars, but when the material arrived at the government stores there were only 8 locomotives and 180 flat cars—the remainder having mysteriously disappeared. But the ball still rolled. The C.P.R. when they took over the Onderdonk section claimed that the road had not been completed according to contract and they brought a suit against the government for $575,000. They got judgment with $100,000 costs against the government, making a total of $1,118,000 cost to the taxpayers for the pleasure of a brief acquaintance with Mr. Onderdonk. That brief acquaintance is to be renewed, apparently, and the Trent Valley Canal affords the opportunity. Doubtless the country will see something of an old play in a new dress in connection with the latest contract letting and read it in some blue book of the future. But Mr. Onderdonk is in possession of "writings" of a peculiar nature which were rather freely exhibited in public on an unfortunate occasion a few years since and—well a general election is looming up in the near future. Those who run can read the very evident moral of the Trent Valley Onderdonk contract. Even the simulated indignation of Conservative members will simmer down when they see how manifest is the necessity for them to apply that moral to themselves. The sinews of war must in some way be forthcoming.

THE public accounts of the Province of Quebec have been presented to the Legislature. The receipts for 1894 were $4,320,427, and the expenditure $5,526,056. Quebec, with a debt of about thirty million, and running behind at the rate of nearly a million and a quarter a year, will not be long, one would think, in reaching the bankrupt stage. Ontario might have been in as deplorable a condition if it had been as badly governed.

A BUSINESS MAN'S TROUBLE.

So Badly Crippled With Rheumatism That he Lost all Power of Feet and Legs—How he was Cured.

Mr. M. E. Douglas, says the San Francisco Chronicle, a young man who owns a harness shop in this city, tells a tale of a remarkable cure of rheumatism after he had suffered for years and had almost given up hope of being cured. The story told the reporter is as follows :—

"About four or five years ago I began to be much troubled by severe pains in my feet and ankles, and it annoyed me so greatly that I could only keep at work with difficulty. I tried hot water bathing and also used mustard water. I got some relief from the bathing, but it was only temporary and my trouble was constantly increasing. At last I went to a physician and he gave me a prescription, but it did no good. I was now so badly off that the acute pain had gone up beyond the calves of my legs. I used to have sit down very often, and frequently when I would try to stand up I would fall right over. I completely lost power over my feet and legs, and was almost paralyzed. My father, mother and I used to live at Woodstock, Ont. We got the Woodstock Sentinel-Review, which contained a number of reports about the wonderful properties of a medicine called Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I thought that if one-quarter or one-tenth of what was said about them was true they might do me some good. We got $2.50 worth of them and I began to take them. I was also suffering from a severe attack of piles which gave me a great deal of trouble. After I had been taking the Pink Pills a while I noticed that the piles left me, and then my rheumatism just went away from me so easily that I hardly thought of it until it was gone. I had given up all other treatment and was taking nothing but the pills, so it must have been the pills that cured me. I cheerfully recommend the Pink Pills, and I think that anyone, who takes them is sure to receive benefit. As I said, we still keep the pills in the house all the time and would not be without them."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont., or Schenectady, N. Y.

A Graduate of Toronto University says : "My children have been treated with Scott's Emulsion from their earliest years ! Our physician first recommended it and now whenever a child takes cold my wife immediately resorts to this remedy, which always effects a cure.

NEGOTIATIONS FOR PEACE.

Some Chance of Conciliating Japan—Great Britain's Naval Display.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The Shanghai correspondent of the Central News sends this despatch :—"The British warship Porpoise has returned from Port Arthur, where she arrived on November 20. The Japanese forbade the captain to take his vessel into the harbor. The officers of the Porpoise landed on November 22, after the capture of the town. They estimate the Japanese loss as 600 in the two days. There was no close fighting. The Chinese had splendid trenches and the best Krupp guns. The Japanese employed Chinese coolies to bury the dead. The work was complete on November 23, and anybody looking over the field could hardly realize that a bloody battle had been fought there."

The Times correspondent in Kobe, Japan, says that the whole nation seems to be intent upon the prosecution of the war and that preparations for the winter campaign proceed rapidly. The native newspapers in Kobe assert that Japan will refuse to receive any peace envoy from China and will not accept the proffered mediation.

A despatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Chefoo asserts that terms of peace between Japan and China have been very nearly completed through the intervention of the United States government.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The Herald's Shanghai special says: "England is evidently preparing a coup de main with a view to protecting her interest in China. There can be no doubt she resents the manner in which she is being excluded from the discussion of terms of settlement between the two belligerents and she has arranged a naval demonstration at Chausen on December 11. The Alacrity, Pigmy and Redpole have left here with sealed orders. They go to join Vice-Admiral Fremantle's flagship Centurion and the other war vessels under his command. This, it is supposed, is being done as a measure of precaution, lest the Japanese should carry the war into Southern China, now that winter is arriving, and the northern approaches to the empire will become icebound and difficult.

The central provinces, especially the province of Anhui, are pouring troops southward to Canton, where Li-Hung-Chang's brother Li-Han Chang is viceroy.

The denunciation of Li Hung Chang by the Seniors continues. They declare he is entertaining rebellious designs, and indeed this looks probable enough. He is being guarded by his own soldiers at Tien Tsin, while outside the city trusted Imperial troops are watching him. These forces, which are composed of Huanese and Manchus, regard the Viceroy as a rebel. If any general in this country had such a reputation as would enable him to place himself at the head of a popular movement the Chinese would undoubtedly overthrow the dynasty, Li Hung Chang and entire present system of government. All the Chinese have now been converted into hatred of their own rulers. The court is relying altogether upon Lu Kung Yah to checkmate Li Hung Chang. The Viceroy of Fukien, Tan Chang. Lin, has been appointed to succeed Liu Ping Chang, Viceroy of Szechuena, who is accused of personating a Tartar general.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Unofficial advices received here state that the negotiations for peace between China and Japan with the United States ministers at Pekin and Tokio as the medium of communication are proceeding satisfactorily. Neither of these gentlemen will be permitted either by the United States Government or by Japan to specify the conditions on which China is willing to make peace. It is their duty to bring the two nations together and this being done their official connection with the matter ceases. The report that Great Britain purposes making a great naval demonstration at Chusan falls flat in diplomatic circles. It is argued that the time has passed when Japan can be influenced by any movement of that character.

American Trade Report.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Bradstreet's says :—There is no general or rational improvement in business at the south, the southwest or the north-west. But in central western states, and particularly at some important cities in the old, middle and New England States the reverse is true, a material gain in demand for many seasonable samples having shown itself, with a corresponding increase in volumes of goods distributed orders for future delivery. This is independent of the stimulus to trade in certain lines due to the approaching holidays, and in spite of the check to the volume of general business within the week, caused by the Thanksgiving holiday. Bank clearings throughout the United States this week are sharply checked, the total being only $809,890,000, or 21 per cent. less than last week.

Burned to Death in a Guard House.

CHARLOTTE, N.C., Dec. 1.—Three negroes were burned to death in the guard house at Polkton, N.C. All were accused of stealing. Many citizens were aroused by screams from the guard house and hastened to the place, but were too late to save the prisoners. The building was all of wood, small but very strong, and burned rapidly. After the house burned down the charred remains were taken from the embers. Evidently the negroes tried to burn their way out, and losing control of the fire brought upon themselves their own destruction.

A Townley Agent Sentenced.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—In the Central Criminal Court, Old Bailey, yesterday, Col. Jacques, the agent for the American claimants to the Townley estates, was found guilty of fraud and sentenced to 20 months' imprisonment at hard labor. A similar sentence was imposed upon Howell Thomas, solicitor for Col. Jacques, who was convicted of fraudulent practices a short time ago.

Musicians Attention!

The piano to be used at the Herr Yunck concert on Dec. 4th, is a cabinet, grand specially selected and loaned by Whaley, Royce & Co., Toronto, and is manufactured by the Reimer Piano Co., and contains one of Weasel, Nichol & Gross' best American actions. The touch is light and elastic—the very acme of perfection. It has great power and volume of tone, combined with a rich quality that delights and captivates. A Tone Liberator, a Patent Muffler, which, when put into operation, produces the softest tone possible, and enables the performer to practice at any hour of the day or night, without disturbing any one in the house or neighbourhood and a Metallic Key-board Support, are special features of these instruments. If this instrument is not sold within a few days after the concert, it will be returned to the show rooms on Yonge street, Toronto.

As Well as Ever

After Taking Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cured of a Serious Disease.

"I was suffering from what is known as Bright's disease for five years, and for days at a time I have been unable to straighten myself up. I was in bed for three weeks; during that time I had leeches applied and derived no benefit. Seeing Hood's Sarsaparilla advertised in the papers I decided to try a bottle. I found

SEELEY THE ABSCONDER

Something About the Man the New York Police Are Wanting.

CONSPICUOUS FOR INTEGRITY

While Enjoying the Trust and Confidence of His Employers He Was Robbing Them Systematically for Years —$5,000 Reward Offered for His Capture.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The Shoe and Leather Bank directors had a meeting yesterday. After the meeting it was announced a reward of $5,000 had been offered for the capture of Seeley. Ten indictments were handed in to-day by the grand jury against the defaulting bookkeeper, alleging forgery and grand larceny. The detectives tracked Seeley as far as Hamilton, Ont. There a change is made for Montreal and Toronto on the G. T. R., and from that point they could trace him no further.

Samuel C. Seeley, the missing bookkeeper of the National Shoe and Leather Bank, whose enormous defalcation caused a universal sensation, was a man whose personal habits and characteristics previous to the astounding revelation of his crime would refute any intimation reflecting on his integrity or honesty. For many years a trusted and valuable employe of the institution which he so systematically and extensively plundered for a long period, he had gained the respect and confidence of his superiors to such an extent that no examination of his accounts beyond a somewhat superficial scruting by a State official was ever thought to be necessary. Every detail of his private life, too, tended to strengthen the good faith reposed in him by his employers. His home life was of the most domestic character and he enjoyed the reputation of being a very devoted and affectionate husband and father. Apparently no vices abided with him and he was a synonym of all that the head of a happy household should be. He was remarkably regular in his habits and was never known to have frequented either clubs or saloons.

Although not a member of the congregation, he rented a pew in the Central Congregational church on Hancock street, Brooklyn, and attended the services in company with his wife. He was of a more than ordinary secretive nature, and he invariably abstained from forming the acquaintance of any person in the neighborhood of his home. In the light of recent events, this characteristic is held by some to indicate that Seeley always feared that the detection of his crime was inevitable and that when the exposure of his rascality would make it necessary for him to seek safety in flight, his escape would be rendered easier if his identity had not become impressed on the minds of his neighbors.

The mental suffering which his misdoings have inflicted on him of late was plainly evident. His former healthy appearance had given way to one of much emaciation; his face had lost its wonted roundness and become painfully cadaverous, and the heavy lines traced by care and worriment told of the heavy strain to which his mind was subjected. His manner had also grown preoccupied, and the long standing stoop of his shoulders had become more pronounced. A physical peculiarity of Seeley was that one of his shoulders was so much higher than the other as to be quite noticeable.

Seely was about 35 years of age. He was something over five feet ten inches in height and weighed about 190 pounds. He had a blonde complexion and his hair and moustache were of a lightish color.

About ten years ago Seely married a Miss Bennett and they have one child, Clarence, who is about three years old. For a long time his mother-in-law, Mrs. Emily Bennett, and his brother-in-law, Samuel Bennett, have resided in the modest two-story and basement brick building which Seely occupied at No. 422 Haisey street, Brooklyn. This house is valued at $5,500 but Seely's equity in it is not known.

Three Children Cremated.

Drowned in a Waterworks Reservoir.

HANOVER, N.H., Dec. 1.—Arthur Camp, 18 years old, and John M. Marshall, aged 20, were drowned in the reservoir of the Hanover waterworks. They and a boy named Dewey were skating, when the latter and Marshall broke through. Camp hurried to the rescue, but was soon chilled and exhausted, and with Marshall went down. Dewey managed to crawl out.

South Essex Conservatives.

KINGSVILLE, Ont. Dec. 1.—The Liberal-Conservative convention of South Essex met here yesterday. The object of the convention was to ratify the nomination of Dr. S. A. King to represent this riding in the Dominion Parliament. There was a ballot taken, a large majority being in favor of the doctor's nomination, which was then made unanimous.

Montreal Police Investigation.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—The investigation into the workings of the Montreal police force was continued yesterday. Chief Detective Cullen made the important admission that certain members of the force had received bribes from keepers of disorderly houses, but had been reduced from the ranks in consequence.

It's a Queer Woman

who can't have confidence in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Here is a tonic for tired-out womanhood, a remedy for all its peculiar ills and ailments—and if it doesn't help you, there's nothing to pay.

What more can you ask for, in a medicine?

The "Prescription" will build up, strengthen and invigorate the entire female system. It regulates and promotes all the proper functions, improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and vigor. In "female complaints" of every kind and in all chronic weaknesses and derangements, it's the only guaranteed remedy. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in the case of every tired-out or suffering woman, she'll have her money back.

Nothing urged in its place by a dealer, though it may be better for him to sell, can be "just as good" for you to buy.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation, piles, biliousness, indigestion and headaches.

Coughs, colds, sore throat, asthma bronchitis, and all lung troubles are quickly cured by Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam.

A Noble Benefactor.

His Grand Discovery has Blessed the World.

Paine's Celery Compound Cures Mr. C. F. Kevill, of Dunsford, Ont.

Most Important Testimony from the Cured Man—Kidney Disease was Dragging him to the Grave—Intense Sufferings Borne for 15 Years—All the Ordinary Medicines had Failed to Meet the Case—A Trial was Made of Paine's Celery Compound—Two Bottles of the Life-Giving Medicine Banished every Every Trace of Disease.

The world has never had a grander or nobler benefactor that Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M.D., LL.D. He was the discoverer of Paine's Celery Compound, the marvellous curing medicine that has dragged so many victims of kidney disease from the brink of the grave.

Thousands of cured men and women have already contributed their grateful testimony to the extraordinary curing powers of the great medicine in cases of kidney and liver troubles, Bright's disease palpitation of the heart, dyspepsia and indigestion, nervousness, loss of sleep, depression of spirits, sick headache, loss of vital forces, rheumatism, sciatica and neuralgia; and new testimony is coming in every day from all sections of Canada.

MR. C. F. KEVILL, DUNSFORD, ONT.

Paine's Celery Compound is doing work among the sick and diseased that no other medicine has ever done; it cures the worst cases and raises up those who have been pronounced incurable. The following testimony from Mr. C. F. Kevill, of Dunsford, Ont., is strong, convincing, cheering and comforting:—

"I wish to testify in favour of the wonderful curative powers of Paine's Celery Compound for two reasons; first in justice to the proprietors; and secondly, for the benefit of suffering humanity.

"For the past fifteen years I have been troubled with diseased kidneys. I am engaged in the manufacture of cheese and am obliged to work more or less in a stooping posture. At times I found it almost impossible to work owing to severe pains across my kidneys. Often, after working in a stooping position for a time, I would find it very difficult to straighten up at once, and could only do so after repeated efforts.

"Of late years, while labouring under these severe attacks, I became very nervous, and continually had tired, worn-out feelings. My rest at night seemed to do me no good, and I always felt tired out in the morning.

"I had been taking various medicines and was getting worse all the time. At last I decided to give Paine's Celery Compound a trial. I procured a bottle, and found its effects wonderful. Before I had used the first bottle I began to improve; after I had used the second bottle I felt as well as ever I did in my life. It had banished all aches and pains, my nervousness was all gone, and the tired and worn-out feelings were banished. I can go to bed now and sleep well, and rise in the morning rested and refreshed.

"I have recommended Paine's Celery Compound to my friends who were suffering from the same troubles as I had, and all have been greatly benefitted. Knowing what it has done, I can cheerfully recommend it to any person suffering from kidney disease."

The Vatican's Finances.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—A despatch from Rome to the Central News says the Finance Committee of Cardinals have presented to the Pope the papal budget for the ensuing year, showing that the expenditures have been reduced by £12,000. The subsidies paid to the Vatican journals and the amount set aside for the poor, which have hitherto aggregated £13,000, will hereafter amount to only £2,400.

Three Desperadoes Heavily Sentenced.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Dec. 1.—Thurman Balding, alias "Skeeter", Jesse Snyder and Will Ferris, all members of the Cook gang, were sentenced in the United States court. "Skeeter" received 30 years, and Snyder and Ferris 20 years each. The house of correction at Detroit, Mich., was designated as the place where they must serve their long sentences.

Hon. Mr. Patterson Nominated.

GODERICH, Ont., Dec. 1.—The Liberal-Conservative Association for West Huron met in convention yesterday at McLean's Opera House to nominate a candidate for the Dominion House. The meeting was largely attended. The Hon. J. C. Patterson was unanimously nominated to represent the Conservative cause.

Five Horses Burned.

HAMILTON, Dec. 1.—A fire in rear of Bartholomew Moriarity's premises, 567 John St., north, yesterday, caused the destruction of his barn and five horses. The horses were insured for $75 each and the barn for $100 which will about cover the loss.

ERIE, Pa., Dec. 1.—John H. Eidt, the athlete, was accidentally stabbed by his brother Charles, and will not survive. The Heidt brothers were practising a dual scene, using knives. John Heidt made a lunge at his brother, when he stumbled and fell forward. The knife pierced him in the breast.

U. S. Postal Rates.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Postmaster-General Bissell has decided that after January 1st, the postal rates now applicable to Europe and other countries of the Universal Postal Union shall also be applicable to all of the countries of the world except Canada and Mexico, with which countries more liberal rates are made.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Dec. 1, 1894.

Canadian barley in Oswego is selling at 60 to 68c.

The advance in wheat on the Toronto grain market is being well maintained, although there is no corresponding rise in price in other parts of the province. Manufacturers of fancy goods have caused the increase here, and when they get supplied a decline will probably follow. Some 1,000 bushels were offered on the street, white bringing 62 and red 59 to 60 1-2c.

Shipments of wheat, both coasts of Canada and the United States, amount to 2,667,000 bushels this week, against 3,312,000 bushels last week.

There are 307 business failures in the United States this week. Last week the total was 295.

The Buffalo barley market ruled firm with good inquiry, but prices remained unchanged. No. 1 Canada is quoted at 64c.

Wheat continued to advance in Chicago in sympathy with foreign markets. Corn followed wheat with a gain of 1-4c. Oats were firm and 1-8 to 1-2 higher.

At East Buffalo sheep and lambs closed very dull and weak, with a number left over unsold. Fair to choice Canada lambs, $3.65 to $3.90.

The London stock markets were fairly good. Mining shares are still booming. Americans were steady but neglected. South Americans were firm. Two prominent dealers, Nickalls and Paxton, deserted Americans for the mining market.

As everyone expected, sugar certificates led the New York stock market's movement at the opening. Within 20 minutes, on sales one-fourth as large as last week's total record, the price broke 3 3-8 points. The railway list at first was rather firm, some stocks advancing, but the whole industrial group was forced down in sympathy with sugar stocks. In the afternoon professional selling was resumed throughout the list and some of the railway stocks closed weak, but there was no general demoralization and final prices were irregular.

Care for the Horses.

When the ice appears upon the streets before the horses are sharp-shod for the winter's work, much cruelty to these noble animals may be looked for. They are as helpless on ice as a boy who has just drawn off his skates; and yet they are required, under persuasion of whip and cry, to draw heavy loads up steep, icy hillsides. The horses are plainly willing enough, but their feet slip back in spite of their painful efforts to drive their hoofs into the ice. Straining of this kind is apt to bring on spavin and other dangerous effects; so, if for no other reason than profit, the owners of the horses should see that they are sharp-shod in time for the first ice.

St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham.

Tomorrow being Advent Sunday, the annual corporate Communion of the Guild will be held at 8:30 a. m. Tomorrow afternoon, at 3 p. m., the Rector will commence a course of afternoon lectures on "the Bible." In addition to the regular members of the class, members of the congregation and the public generally are invited to attend. There will be a short opening service followed by the lecture, together taking about three-quarters of an hour. The annual tea and sale of work will be held in the school house, on Thursday evening, commencing at five o'clock. In addition to the usual attractions, a special programme of music, readings, etc. is being prepared by Miss Tivey. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Admission 25c.

PERSONAL.

Mr. E. C. Gay, of Oshawa, is registered at the Oriental.

Mr. A. Hater, of Millbrook, is in town on business to-day.

Mr. Thomas Telford is out, to-day, for the first time this week.

Mr. Thos. Blezard, M.P.P., was present at the funeral of the late John T. Warrington in Belleville yesterday.

Mr. Geo. J. Hopkins represented the Peterborough Hockey Club at the annual meeting of the O. H. A. in Toronto to-day.

Miss S. Cochrane, of Peterborough, was visiting her cousin, Miss Lottie Cochrane, a few days this week.—Millbrook Reporter.

Mr. Wm. Johnston, Belleville, District Inspector of Weights and Measures, is in town on a business trip. An interview with him regarding Peterborough's market is unfortunately crowded out, but will appear in Monday's issue of the EXAMINER.

The Omemee Mirror speaks in the following complimentary terms of the Peterborough market: "We heard, in conversation recently, that the farmers residing five miles west of Omemee, drive to Peterborough with their grain, they being able to realize more out of it. Peterborough is reported to have one of the best markets in the province."

Mr. A. Sherin, brother of J. W. Sherin, of Omemee, has been elected County Judge for Marshall County, South Dakota, on the Populist ticket during the elections held in the United States. Mr. Sherin is editor of the Britton Sentinel, published in the town of Britton in the above state. He is very popular in the county where he resides, and has been very successful in business since he went there ten years ago. We congratulate him on his election to such a high position as he has been favoured with. Another brother, George A. Sherin, has a very lucrative position in New York, on that popular monthly, Munsey's Magazine.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

Saturday Night contains the following interesting account of the wedding of Miss Minnie M. Clark, of Toronto, and Mr. C. S. McClelland, of Peterborough:—"A quiet but very pretty wedding graced the home of Mr. O. Clark, 143 Robert street, on Thanksgiving Day, when his second daughter, Minnie M., was united in marriage to Mr. Charles S. McClelland, of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Griffin, while the bridesmaid and groomsman were Miss Winifred Clark and Mr. Will McClelland. The bride looked charming in her going-away gown of brown and fawn tweed, with brown velvet trimmings and velvet bodice, and carried a loosely arranged bouquet of white roses. The house was artistically decorated with chrysanthemums and smilax, which presented a very pleasing appearance. The bride was the recipient of many handsome presents, the gift of the groom being an exquisite pendant of gold, in star design, set in pearls and turquoises. Mr. and Mrs. McClelland left amid hearty congratulations for Buffalo and points east, and will reside in Peterborough, where both are well and favourably known."

Mrs. McClelland will receive next week in her pretty cottage on Downey street.

A FALSE STATEMENT CONTRADICTED.

The rumour having been circulated by interested parties that Ostrom's were not receiving Chicago meats, the following letter is published in contradiction of such an unfounded statement:

MESSRS. OSTROM BROS., Peterborough, Ont.

GENTLEMEN,—In accordance with instructions received through our representative, Mr. Clerihew, we have entered for shipment to-morrow 1,000 lbs. of tenderloins, which will go forward on the 3 o'clock train as desired. We are very much pleased to send these meats, and hope you will find it to your advantage to use them regularly. We are confident the grade of the meats will please you in every respect and will certainly give any orders entrusted to us our most careful attention.

With thanks for the favour, and hoping to hear from you soon again, we remain,

Yours truly,

SALVATION ARMY NOTES.

We have previously announced that the Salvationists are having their self-denial week, during the week, December 1st to 8th, and efforts are now being put forth in a practical way, as we conclude from the contents of the "War Cry," and the special pamphlets and appeals, which are being distributed by the soldiers and officers. The proceeds of previous Self-Denial Weeks in Canada, have been continually increasing, and there are many reasons to believe that this year's effort will exceed the former.

Many officers and soldiers have determined to live actually on bread and water—others next to it—in order to raise a good share of the total aimed at. Soldiers have been told off to visit from house to house, and solicit contributions. In other places, the bands have arranged to serenade, and by this means raise something towards the "target."

CAUSE AND EFFECT.

Death the Invariable Result of Neglected Kidney Disease.

LOWER JORDAN BAY, N.S., Dec. 1—The majority of human ailments can be traced, either directly or indirectly, to a diseased condition of the kidneys. Kidney disease may not be suspected for the reason that these organs have few nerves of sensation, and may even be in a condition of advanced disease before the true condition is discovered. Ninety per cent. of all diseases may be prevented by using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Samuel Locke's case, which caused such interest throughout the province, is a case in point.

Be sure and see Grafton's four favourite Overcoats at $5, $8.50, $10 and $12.

Young Women's Association

Rev. Mr. Young will address the service this evening, commencing at 8.30. Good music in the early part of the evening. All young women welcome.

Regular meeting of the Board of Directors will be held on Monday afternoon at 3.30. It is to be hoped all committees will send in reports.

Change of Business.

Messrs. J. B. Oke & Co., who have for some time conducted a successful wholesale business on Water street, has purchased the business formerly carried on by Mr. Frank Mercer, and will conduct it in a first-class manner, which their long experience will enable them to do. The reader will kindly consult their advertisement.

"A large fashionable and appreciative audience assembled in the Opera House, last evening, to hear a magnificent rendition of Charles Dicken's favourite work, "David Copperfield," condensed and dramatised by Grenville P. Kleiser. His impersonations of the different characters familiar to the readers of Dickens, were pathetic, humorous and wonderful. At one moment he is the perfect fac-simile of "Uriah Heap" and in another instant he is transformed in voice and figure to "Micawber.' His rendition of "Fisherman Peggotty" was pathetic and natural."—Brockville Times. Mr. Kleiser will give his "David Copperfield" at the entertainment, to be held in the Opera House, on Friday, Dec. 7th, in connection with the Collegiate Institute commencement exercises. 1td

Paragraphs Picked Up and Pencilled for Public Perusal.

—No arrests.

—First of December.

—The grain outlook is better.

—The Bay of Quinte is frozen over.

—Additional local matter on first and eighth pages.

—As the cold weather advances more weddings are talked of around town.

—The morning service at St. John's will consist of the communion service and sermon.

—This morning's market was probably the largest held in Peterborough in many months.

—The Belleville bread combine has "bust," and the staff of life is now obtainable in that city at 9 cents a loaf.

—Dr. Potts will deliver a short address to the George street Sunday school at 3.30 to-morrow. Parents and friends invited.

—The workmen are now engaged on the last span of the new steel bridge at Hale's, and its completion is looked for at an early date.

—The annual sermon to St. Andrew's society will be preached in St. Paul's church to-morrow evening by Rev. Dr. Torrance.

—The boys are having lots of sport on their skates going up and down the sidewalks and making it much more slippery for pedestrians.

—There is nothing that would make a better Christmas present than to send the EXAMINER to some far away relative or friend for the ensuing year.

—The snow shovel has been dug out from the rubbish in the woodshed and is now showing itself by being put into work cleaning off the snow on the sidewalks.

—The Board of Education will meet on Monday evening next. For certain reasons the regular date has been changed for December, from the first Tuesday, to the first Monday.

—The item in yesterday's EXAMINER, referring to the good skating on Spaulding's pond and along the edge of the river to the C. P. R. bridge, drew a crowd of several hundred skaters to the ice, last night.

—The term of Adam Dobbin expired this morning in the county gaol, and on his request he was committed for another three months, until the hardest part of the winter is past. He regards the gaol as his only home.

—An Ashburnham boy who took a slick $28 suit back to the lumber shanties with him, last month, writes home that his broadcloth disappeared at the same time as did an agreeable stranger who stopped at the shanties for a day or two.

—Plan of hall for the Yunck concert is now open at Sallsbury's Book Store, where tickets can be obtained. General admission 50c, reserved seats 75c. Doors open at 7:30; concert begins at 8. The public will kindly, if possible, be seated before that hour.

—A Mr. Sugarman, of Alexandria, is said to have become the purchaser of Mr. Thomas Kelly's George street stock yesterday. The purchase was made through a closed bid, which is understood to have been sixty cents on the dollar.

—A runaway occurred this morning on Charlotte street. A team became affrighted at a newspaper blowing across the street and bolted. Two bags of flour were thrown out on the roadway and the contents flew far and near. The horses were stopped at the Grand Trunk station.

—Mr. Fred Cook has just completed the painting of a most handsome sign for Mr. Thos. McGrath, proprietor of the L. X. L. laundry. The sign is forty-three feet long, and the red and white letters stand out most clearly on a background of black. In design the lettering is a work of art indeed.

—To-morrow will be Educational Sunday in George street church. Rev. G. W. McColl, B. A. B. D., will preach in the morning, and Dr. Potts, the eloquent General Secretary of Education, in the evening. A rich treat may be expected. Dr. Potts will address the Sunday school in the afternoon.

—Some persons who profess to be culturned musicians are unfortunately unable to appreciate the violin. "Of all instruments" says Lord Lytton in Zanni, "unquestionably the most various and royal in its resources and power over the passions." This will be exemplified at the Yunck concert, Opera House, Dec. 4th.

—Sight is priceless. It comes too expensive to trifle with your eyes, and the sensible way to improve and preserve them is to unreservedly place yourself in the hands of a competent optican. Mr. Laurence will be at John McKee's drug store, Dec. 5th, 6th and 7th. If you intend consulting him, do so early. 1d

—An amusing incident occurred at one of Herr Yunk's appearances. From the first delighful sound of the strings a perfect quietude reigned in the house, the people were charmed and listened with rapt attention until the end of the number. A Komoka Scotchman was heard saying aloud, "Sic fiddlin' I never heard in my life before, an' I wadna' ha' missed it for twa dollars." Don't fail to hear this great artist on Dec. 4th, Opera House. Plan of hall at Salisbury's now open, where tickets can also be obtained.

ACCIDENT TO MR. JOHN LANG, EX-M P.

Three Toes of His Foot Severed.

On Thursday last, Mr. John Lang, ex-M.P., while working in the woods met with a painful accident. He was using an axe, which, catching upon a twig, deflected the blade so that the blow fell upon his foot, completely severing three toes. Two medical gentlemen were called and replaced the severed toes and fastened them with stitches in the hope that they would unite. Mr. Lang's many friends will sympathize with him in his mishap.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

You will hear stories of well-known hymns at the song service to-night. Take your walk if you want it, but bring up at the rooms at 8.15, and enjoy a good sing.

To-morrow afternoon we expect to have an address from Dr. Potts of Toronto. Dr. Pott's reputation as a speaker will insure a crowd of men to hear him. That male quartette will be "on deck." Expect a good meeting, and be there to help in making it one.

ST. ANDREW'S DAY SERVICE IN ST. JOHN'S.

The Members of the Brotherhood in Other Places.

Corporate communion was dispensed to the members of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew yesterday morning at six o'clock in St. John's church, and in the evening a service was held in the church. It was taken by Rev. C. B. Kenrick, director of of the local branch of the Brotherhood.

The sermon was delivered by Rev. Wilson McCann, of Omemee. He dwelt to considerable length on the beauty of the laity of the church bearing witness so nobly to the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. The lessons were read by Rev. Mr. Hedley, of St. Luke's.

Telegrams were sent to the branches of the Brotherhood in Toronto, Kingston, Ottawa and Montreal, containing greeting and quoting the first line of that beautiful hymn, "Blest Communion, Fellowship Divine." Answers were received last night conveying cordial wishes for prosperity, from Toronto and Kingston. The telegram to the Toronto branch was read at an early breakfast, where the members were eating with the Bishop after a six-o'clock communion service in the Cathedral.

In the evening the various Chapters of the Brotherhood had the pleasure of listening to a most eloquent sermon in Grace church by Rev. Mr. Muckleston.

The members of the local branch dined together during the day in Harry Long's restaurant.

POLLUTION OF THE OTONABEE.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—One of the local witnesses before the sewer arbitration, is reported to have testified when speaking of the pollution of the river by sewage, that the river water was used by the passengers on the steamers for drinking purposes. I wish to positively assert that such a statement is entirely wrong. The steamers that ply the river are daily supplied with a sufficient quantity of pure spring or well water. During the past twenty years no passenger has been supplied with river water for drinking. The only uses to which the river water is put are for making steam and for flushing purposes. In the interests of travellers and in justice to the steamboat owners, I ask space to correct an injurious misstatement.

Yours truly,
GERMS.

SCOTS IN THE NEW HOME REMEMBER THE OLD.

The Annual Banquet of St. Andrew's Society—Magnificent Spread at the Morgan House — Greetings From Brither Scots—The Toast List—A Delightful Night of Reminiscence. Speech, Song and Story—The Wee Sma' Hours Ayont the Twal.

Some Scots of every rank and trade,
In Canada guid names hae made;
Land of their choice they lo'e fu' dear.
Still Scotia to the hearts is dear.—TELFORD.

There was a great gathering of the clans at the Morgan House last night. The occasion was the annual banquet of the local St. Andrew's Society, an occasion when thoughts of the dear old home are revived and the tie of fellowship drawn closer.

About sixty guests composed very largely of Scotchmen and Scotch Canadians though liberally interspersed with English, Irish and native Canadians, assembled around the festive board for which mine host Morgan had made a beautiful setting. The spacious dining room was very finely decorated. The walls and ceiling were most profusely adorned with bunting and flags, artistically and tastefully disposed, while festoons of tartan and the red cross of St. Andrew gave a national feature to the tout ensemble. A finely dressed effigy of a Highland laddie kindly loaned by Miss Budkins, who also supplied the tartans, was given a pedestal of honour in the middle of the dining hall. The decorations which were very effective, were designs of Mr. Morgan himself, efficiently and carefully carried out by Mr. Alf. Klugscote.

THE MENU.

Of the bill of fare presented, it is only necessary to say that it was in Morgan's best style, both as to quality of food and excellence of preparation, as well as tasteful disposition and prompt and satisfactory service. The tasteful decorations in addition to the silver, consisted of beautiful blooming flowers, supplied by Messrs. Jordan Bros. The guests highly appreciated the excellent feast provided and did full justice to it. The following is a copy of the menu:

THE TOAST LIST

received attention.

The chairman in opening the toast list, began by heartily welcoming the company to the 36th annual dinner of the Peterborough St. Andrew's Society, and he returned his thanks to the members for placing him in the honourable position of president. He briefly adverted to the objects of the society, and then read two letters of regret:

From the ex-President of the society. Mr. R. M. Dennistoun, who was absent on account of recent family affliction.

From Mr. James Stevenson, M.P., who was absent on account of an accident from from which he had not yet recovered.

GREETINGS.

The President read the following greeting from the Toronto St. Andrew's Society:

May Scotland's thistle ever wave,
Emblem of all that's true and brave.

ALLAN CASSELS.

To this the following reply was sent:

This night when a' leal Scotchmen meet,
The chiels o' Peterborough greet
Their brither Scots Toronto way
And wish them joy St. Andrew's Day.

D. N. CARMICHAEL, M. D.

The chairman then proposed the toast of the evening, "The Queen," which was very loyally received and "God Save the Queen" sung by the company.

Dr. Caldwell, first vice-president in proposing the second toast on the list, joined with the president in extending a cordial welcome, and congratulated the chairman on the honour to which he had been elevated, and a position to which he (the speaker) was sure he would do credit. He proposed the "Governor General and Houses of Parliament," coupling with it the names of Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., and Mr. Dawson Kennedy.

Mr. Stratton thanked the president for the honour of an invitation to be present at the annual banquet, and he congratulated the president upon being placed in the position of head of a body with the beneficient objects of the St. Andrew's Society. The speaker then went on to point out that the system of government in Canada was the best in the world (cheers,) and he also pointed out its superiority over the less elastic system of our neighbours to the south. The public men of Canada in parliament, and in the local legislatures were equal to those in a corresponding position in any country in the world. He also showed that outside of the question of trade and commerce, the legislative functions of the Ontario legislature touched the people at more numerous points than those of the House of Commons. Referring to the prominent position taken by Scotchmen in the ranks of statesmenship, the names of Sir John Macdonald, Sir Oliver Mowat and Lord Aberdeen were mentioned amidst applause. Reference was made to the duty of Scotchmen holding their native land in remembrance, and to the desirability of Canadians cherishing the same loyal affection to Canada, which was in the highest degree worthy of the most enthusiastic loyalty of her sons.

Mr. Dawson Kennedy, in replying to the toast gave it as his opinion that the House of Commons was too full of Grits and Tories. (laughter.) He paid a high compliment to the people and climate of Canada, and though born an Irishman, he was proud to boast of being a Canada. (Cheers.)

Mr. W. Fraser favoured the company with a splendidly performed selection of Scotch airs, given with great spirit, his instrument being a concertina.

Mr. W. Menzies, secretary, in a few neatly put remarks, proposed the toast of the "Army, Navy and Volunteers," coupling with it the name of Lieut.-Col. Bell. "Rule Britania" was sung by the company with great enthusiasm.

Lt.-Col. Bell referred to the prominent position occupied in the British army in all parts of the world by Scotchmen. They also held a prominent position in the navy, which was a great factor in the preservation of the peace of the world. He paid a high compliment to the volunteers, who were composed chiefly of Canadians, who were all Canadians, though the sons of Scotchmen, Englishmen, Irishmen, Frenchmen and Germans. In closing Dr. Bell, in view of the distress likely to arise the present winter, appealed to the members to supplant the funds of the society, so that its beneficient objects could be effectively carried out.

Mr. J. W. Garvin sang with excellent effect a sterling Scotch song.

THE TOAST OF THE EVENING.

Mr. Charles Cameron performed the duty which he has so well performed for so many past St. Andrew's dinners, that of proposing "The Day and a' wha Honour it,' connecting with it the name of Mr. Thos Telford, who being absent on account of illness, had delegated Mr. W. Menzies to read a written address:

Mr. Telford, after a graceful reference to the occasion of the gathering, paid a glowing tribute to the song and poetry of Scotland, whose bards and poets were surpassed by those of no country in the world. Touching reference was made to members of the society who had graced past gatherings but had now passed away. He recalled the fact that of those who embraced the "Scottish bairn"—the infant St. Andrew Society—only himfelf and Mr. Charles Cameron remained to welcome the company on the 36th anniversary. In view of this fact, Mr. Telford suggested that Mr. Cameron favour the company with "The Land o' the Leal," or "The Last Rose of Summer," either of which he thought would be acceptable.

THE POEM OF THE BARD.

Mr. Wm. Telford, the bard of the Society, prefaced the reading of the annual poem by stating that though he had been suffering from ill health he could not forbear coming to the annual dinner, for even if his head retained its strength, he feared that his sight would never enable him to see another St. Andrew's dinner. He had attended every annual meeting of the Society for thirty-five years, without interruption. He then read the following poem, which was received with deafening cheers:

MY BROTHER SCOTS, WHAT BROUGHT YOU HERE TO-NIGHT?

What brought you here to-night I ask, are you prepared to tell?
Was it to see November die and hear its parting knell?
The change of time may move the Scots with sorrow or delight,
But could not draw the crowd I see around this board to-night.
At night no common thing will draw a Scotchman out to roam,
By nature, as a rule, he is endeared unto his home,
Set snug with paper and his pipe, he heads no bawl or shout,
For it would take a ten horsepower to draw a Scotchman out.

What brought you out, you need not tell for I can guess it right,
It was the love within your breasts for dear St. Andrew's night,
It moves an impulse in your mind with ten fold stronger force,
Than all their grand electric power, wind, water, steam or horse.
It brightens up your hearts with joy as sunbeams deck the morn,
In fancy you tread Scotia's soil and place, where you was born,
Once more beneath the auld thatched cot, set on the clean hearthstone,
Where faither and loved mither sat—perhaps the baith are gone.

What brought you out to-night in glee, the real cause I have got,
It was around this festive board to meet your brither Soot;
Though old your hearts the true Scotch blood still courses through your veins,
And only on such nights as this free utterance it obtains.
The love for home, instilled from birth, within your hearts still lives,
And burst forth with the mirth and joy this annual gathering gives,
The home, the boy, the scenes of youth, come back with vivid power
And treasured memories of years return in one short hour.

What brought you here to-night? it was the auld Scotch sangs to hear,
Composed one hundred years ago, to you they still are dear;
Their words and tunes sound in your ears, enchanting, sweet and deep,
As when your mither sang them low to close your eyes in sleep.
Auld Scots to-night forget their cares, join mirth and laughter loud,
Their hearts bound like the sun when he bursts from behind a cloud;
It fans afresh the love not dead, still smouldering long life burns,
Leaps out in flaming splendor as St. Andrew's night returns.

Canadian Scots, what brought you here, your presence me assures
The Scotch blood from your parents' veins by birth still flows in yours,
Though you claim Canada as home, a second love still flows,
For Scotia fathers' birthplace where the broom and heather grows.
I blame you not because you love this dear land of your birth,
A better home for thrifty Scots you will not find on earth,
While you enjoy life's comforts here with hopes and prospects bright,
For father's sake join with old Scots upon St. Andrew's night.

I ask our guests in kindly words, what reason brought you here?
Was it to hear the boisterous Scotch, in speech, in song and cheer?

Prepare yourselves to hear them spout, as at each call they rise
To praise the Scotch, and Scotia raise up to the very skies.
Canadians, English, Irish, French, all welcome guests, indeed,
To-night Scots give a brother's hand to every race and creed,
Your voices swell the sound of mirth, your presence gives delight,
Once more with Scots you celebrate this grand St. Andrew's night.

'Tis natural that I ask myself what impulse brought me here,
It was to meet with brither Scots and talk of home so dear,
Forty-four years have passed since I left the land I adore,
To-night my love is deep and strong as when I left her shore.
A low voice whispered in my ear so home-like and so sweet,
It said, this is St. Andrew's night, I sprang up to my feet,
Scotia I could not reach because of the broad raging sea,
One hope was left, I seized the chance to spend the night with ye.

I came to crack the oatmeal cakes, to me they still taste sweet,
And share the reeking haggis that few folks but Scots can eat.
As for hot Scotch, on looking round in truth I do see none,
The Scots have joined the temperance pledge and let the bot alone,
For thirty-five successive years I joined Scots kind and true,
Of all I meet with the first night I only see but two.
I hope for all that's present now a few years still remains,
To meet around the board before death dries our Scottish veins.

WILLIAM TELFORD

Mr. Wm. Breckenridge sang with great spirit "The Tinker's Wedding."

The President in a few well chosen works, proposed the toast, "The Land we Left and the Land we Live In."

Song, "Auld Lang Syne."

Mr. R. R. Hall made an eloquent response, pointing out the high position of Scotland and the good sense Scotchmen showed in leaving their nature land, in coming to a country like Canada, whose judicial, educational and material and social advantages were referred to in telling and eloquent terms, the speaker closing his sparkling little speech amidst loud applause.

Mr. Garvin sang "The Maple Leaf," the company joining in the chorus with a will.

The vice-president proposed the "Mayor and Corporation," but there were no members of the council present to respond to the toast.

Mr. White, of the White House, was called upon and he said that he knew nothing about the mayor or corporation, but he would propose a toast—"May the hinges of friendship never rust nor the wing of love lose a feather," which was drank with hearty enthusiasm, Mr. Wm. Breckenridge singing "Will ye no come back again?" Mr. Miller also played with fine effect a concertina solo 'Of all the airts that wind can blaw," and "Caller Herrin.'

Mr. Councillor Cahill having in the meantime come in, he was called upon, and to give him time to compose his thoughts, Mr. G. J. Horkins, ex-councillor of Campbellford, was called upon, who in the course of his remarks, referred in most complimentary terms to the vigorous poem of the bard, Mr. William Telford.

Mr. Cahill having had opportunity to collect his thoughts, made a capitally humurous little speech, containing graceful references to the poetry of Scotland and to the amenities of the occasion.

Mr. John Cleghorn sang a hunting song and the company in compliment to Mr. Cahill sang "The Harp that o'er Through Tara's Hall's."

The treasurer, (Dr. Bell) proposed "The Ladies" which was briefly responded to by Mr. C. N. Brown.

Mr. Alex. Gibson proposed the toast of "The Learned Professions" to which response was made by Mr. Inspector Garvin, who paid an eloquent tribute to the virtues of the Scotch character and referred in detail to the illustrious names of Scotchmen who had cast lustre upon the learned professions. He also referred to the prominent part Scotchmen had taken in the inception of an advanced system of education.

Dr. Caldwell proposed the "Mercantile Manufacturing Interests," which was heartily honoured.

Mr. John Gilchrist in the course of an eloquent and thoughtful address, made reference to the commercial interests of Great Britain and Canada. Referring to the world-wide depression, the speaker pointed out that the country which had suffered the least was this little Canada of ours. (Cheers.) The credit of Canada was among the best of any country in the world.

Mr. A. C. McCallum responded on behalf of the manufacturing interests of the toast, and made a capital and coherent speech, bristling with hard facts.

Mr. John Cleghorn, third vice-president, responded in a vigorous speech on behalf of the farming interests.

The "Press" was proposed by Mr. H. W. Watson, and responded to by representatives of the evening papers present.

Mr. Yokome proposed "The English Guests Present," which was very heartily received.

Mr. Walters Barlow responded in cordial terms of reciprocation, and Mr. Wm. Whittaker sang a splendid sentimental song, one of the best of the kind heard for many a day.

Mr. Fairbairn volunteered a few remarks in reference to the prominent position taken by Canadians in the United States.

"The Host and Hostess," was proposed by Mr. Gemmel, second vice-president, and honoured with the greatest enthusiasm.

Mr. Morgan responded in a neat little speech, in which he mentioned the fact that this was the sixteenth dinner that he had provided for the Scots—a circumstance which ought to permit him to rank as a Scotchman.

A vote of of thanks was most cordially tendered to Miss Rudkins, who had kindly given the use of her figure of the Highland laddie to decorate the dining hall.

The proceedings concluded by the singing of "God Save the Queen" and "Auld Lang Syne." One feature of this was that a trio, consisting of an Englishman, Irishman and Scotchman, who could not very conveniently join the large circle, formed a little circle of their own and thus creditably represented the three chief national elements of the Empire.

WHY GOLF IS CHARMING.

It Fascinates Because It Usually Beats the Player and Ever Spurs Him On.

To obtain a full appreciation of the charms and difficulties of golf you should have acquired a settled conviction of its inferiority as a game requiring either skill or experience; you must have looked upon it with supreme contempt, and catalogued it as a sport for invalids and old men, says C. W. Whitney in Harper's. When you have reached this frame of mind go out on to the links and try it. I never believed a club could be held in so many different ways but the right one until I essayed golf, nor dreamed it so difficult to drive a ball in a given direction. The devotion of the golfer to his game is only equaled by the contempt of him who looks upon it for the first time. You wonder at a great many things when you first see it played, but your wonderment is greatest that a game which appears so simple should have created such a furor.

The secret of its fascination rests largely in the fact that it beats the player, and he, in his perversity, strives the harder to secure the unattainable.

The game is by no means easy; in fact, one of England's foremost players asserts that it takes six months of steady play to acquire consistent form. You must hit the ball properly to send it in the desired direction and you must deal with it as you find it; you cannot arrange the ball to suit your better advantage nor await a more satisfactory one, as in baseball and cricket. The club must be held correctly and swung accurately in order to properly address the ball, from which the player should never take his eye, while at the same time he must move absolutely freely, and yet maintain an exact balance. Besides which, it demands judgment and good temper, and if you fail in the latter your play will be weakened on the many trying occasions that arise.

It is a selfish game, where each man fights for himself, seizing every technicality for his own advantage, and there is no doubt that to this fact its popularity may in a large measure be attributed. Unlike cricket, baseball, or football, one is not dependent on others for play. You can usually find some one to make up a match, or you may go over the course alone, getting the best of practice and fairly good sport, or at least there is always a caddie to be had for the asking, and the usual small fee.

The exercise may be gentle, but whosoever fancies golf does not test the nerves should play a round on popular links. Unless he is a veteran of tried experience he cannot be indifferent to the scrutiny to which his form is subjected at the tee, nor does it make him more certain of his swing to know that he is being mentally criticised by the most skilled players in the world. If he is a novice, he is pretty apt to top his ball on the drive, and fancy all kinds of maledictions heaped upon his duffer play by those awaiting their turn at the tee. I should advise a beginner to serve his novitiate on little-frequented links, if such are to be found in Great Britain, for on popular ones both his pleasure and form are likely to suffer. He is sure to make wild drives and erratic iron shots in his anxiety to play hurriedly and keep out of the way of following golfers, and it is not calculated to increase his accuracy to hear balls dropping around him and to know that he is delaying the game of a dozen or more back of him. But the duffer's trials are suspended for the time being once he has reached the putting-green, since tradition rules that here on this golfing sanctuary no man may drive into or molest him. And yet his respite is but half enjoyed, and not at all shared by his partner, if he be a foursome match, for the desirability of always being "up" in his puts having been vigorously impressed upon him, he is likely, in his zeal and wish to win a look of approval from that patient individual, to entirely overshoot the hole.

HURRAH FOR DIAMONDS, DYE

AIR: HURRAH FOR CANADA.

Hurrah! hurrah! for Diamond Dyes,
So honest, fast and pure;
Hurrah for dyes the ladies prize!
Grand colors that endure.
No other make with them compare,
None used with so much ease;
They work with wonders everywhere,
They never fail to please.

Hurrah! hurrah! for Diamond Dyes,
A million voices sing;
The "Diamond" brand, so say the wise,
To housewives pleasures bring,
Long may these "Diamonds" live to bless
With re-creating powers;
Long may they show their usefulness
In this Canada of ours.

ABERDEEN IN NEW YORK.

He Makes a Speech at the Banquet of the St. Andrew's Society.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—St. Andrew, the patron saint of Scotland, was duly honored last evening by the St. Andrew's Society of this city, the occasion being the 138th anniversary and dinner of the society.

It was 7 o'clock when the 350 members and invited guests marched into the large banqueting hall at Delmonico's headed by Wm. Clelland, the piper, who was in his national costume and who played "The Camerons are Coming" on the pipes.

After dinner the opening address by the president was delivered and then three honorary toasts were duly honored. "The Queen" was drunk standing, "God Save the Queen" being sung the while; and "The President," to which the guests assembled sang "The Star Spangled Banner."

The toast "Land We Live In," was responded to by Chauncey M. Depew in his usual humorous vein, and then the toast, "Our Neighbors of the North," was responded to by the Earl of Aberdeen. He began his speech by expressing cordial thanks for the manner in which his health had been proposed and received, and his appreciation of the friendly reference to Canada. He then alluded to the Scottish features of the occasion. It was St. Andrew's night, and they were mentally on their native heath. He hoped that any non-Scottish friends who were present would excuse them if they used the occasion as a safety valve, for such indeed was one of the advantages of such a festival.

His Excellency's speech abounded in humorous sketches of Scottish character, and in conclusion he congratulated the society upon the practical work of benevolence which they had been able to carry on among their less fortunate fellow-countrymen in a time of exceptional distress and difficulty, and expressed the earnest hope that their operation and their resources might be yet more widely extended.

COLBORNE BADLY SCORCHED.

Several Dwellings and Stores Destroyed by Fire—The Loss Heavy.

COLBORNE, Ont., Dec. 1.—Yesterday fire was discovered in Elford's general store on King street, which quickly spread east to Reeve's large brick and wood skating rink, Martin's butcher shop, dwelling and barn, and Windover's bakery, dwelling and barn. On the west side it spread to Huyck's dry goods house, Brown's barn, Peterson's barn, Yeoman's livery and Chase Bros.' block, which is badly damaged.

All the buildings mentioned were entirely destroyed with the exception of Chase Bros.', Black & Yeoman's livery, and these are badly damaged.

W. H. Elford & Co., dry goods merchants, totally destroyed, block and contents. Building insured for $1,200; stock, $3,000. Spreading west to Thos. Brown's block, occupied by T. Hayck, dry goods; building insured for $8,000; total loss. From there to Yeoman's block, occupied by himself as a livery stable and dwelling; insured only in part. Thence to Burleigh's livery stables; building and contents insured in Western; building total loss, contents partly destroyed. The fire also spread east to Simmons' block, occupied by J. Reeve as flour, feed, farming implement and stove store and storage, total loss; building insured for $1,200; loss, $2,500; stock insured for $1,000, loss in part; from there to Martin's block occupied as a butcher shop and dwelling; building insured for $500; loss total. Then to Windover's bakery and dwelling; insured for $500.

Trade in the Dominion.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—General trade remains quiet. At Toronto a better demand exists in a few lines, including wheat, but collections in Eastern Ontario are unsatisfactory. West and northwest collections are quite slow and sales more moderate. In Quebec sales of staples are moderate and collections only fair. The Newfoundland shore cod fishery, lobster and lumber business have been fairly satisfactory. Labrador reports only half a catch of cod fish. Bank clearings at Hamilton, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax aggregate $19,480,000 this week, as compared with $16,794,000 last week, $19,080,000 one year ago. There are 35 business failures reported from the Dominion this week. Last week there were 24; one year ago the total was 50, and two years ago 35.

Mortality of New York State.

ALBANY, Dec. 1.—The bulletin of the State Board of Health for October shows that the daily average mortality was 390 which is identical with that of the corresponding months last year. The average daily death rate for the preceding nine months was 336. The death rate per thousand population annually during October was about 16.60 against 17.50 in September and 19.13 in August. In 150 cities and villages representing 75 per cent. of the population the death rate was 17.75 against 18.85 in September.

Triple Domestic Tragedy.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Frederick Freisch quarrelled with his son-in-law, Theodore Eckhart, and the quarrel developed into a fight. Mrs. Eckhardt, seeing that her husband was getting the worst of the encounter, drew a revolver and fired at her father. The latter snatched the revolver from her hands and shot both his daughter and her husband in the head inflicting fatal injuries. He then fatally shot himself.

A Sudden Death in Hamilton.

HAMILTON, Nov. 30.—George Lloyd, a stove merchant, belonging to St. Catharines, while walking down James st. on his way to the G. T. R. station, was taken suddenly ill. He was carried into Gerrie's drug store, and a physician was called, but Lloyd died before the latter arrived. Death was caused by apoplexy.

The Rebellion in Waziristan.

BOMBAY, Nov. 30.—In consequence of the serious news from Waziristan another large force from various regiments has been ordered to Dera Ismal and others have been warned to be in readiness. Despatches state that the Waziris are pouring into Baddar Shakar to join Chieftan Powiadah, who is rousing the country against the British.

Recovering from the Earthquakes.

ROME, Nov. 30. — Inhabitants of the districts shaken by the recent earthquakes are recovering slowly from their panic. In Calab Ria and Northern Sicily temporary barracks are being built for the homeless. By royal decree the payment of taxes was suspended yesterday in the provinces of Reggio and Catanzaro.

Reported Death of the Czarewitch.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The Daily News correspondent in Odessa says: As to the report of the Czarewitch's death nothing official is known. It is stated that the grief and excitement caused by his father's death overtaxed his wasted condition. The city is depressed. The suspension of business for many days in connection with Alexander III.'s death told severely on the workingmen. The city was illuminated on the 26th, the ex-Czarina's birthday. Persons failing to display candles in their windows were heavily fined.

A Peculiar and Fatal Accident.

WINDSOR, Nov. 30.—A few days ago James Miller of Comber undertook to hit a cow with a club because while leading it by a rope it had become unruly and had jerked him into a ditch. In jumping to avoid the blow the cow threw Miller against the fence, where he was found unconscious several hours after. It was supposed at first that he had been injured internally as there were no outward marks on his body. This turned out to be the case, as he gradually sank and yesterday he died.

Blackmailing French Deputies.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—In the Chamber of Deputies yesterday M. Habert interpellated the government in regard to impunity in the matter of blackmailing influential persons which the members of the press appear to enjoy. We declared in the course of his remarks that the list of persons subsidized by the ministery of the interior tallied with the list of principal blackmailers on the press. Premier Dupuy replying to M. Habert said the government was firmly determined to repress blackmail no matter who the culprit might be.

A Terrible Experience:

Mr. Geo. Tribe, of Straffordville, Ont. a pretty village near the shores of Lake Erie, went through an experience lately that he will never forget. He tells it in his own words:

"For three years I suffered from skin disease in its worst form. I tried Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura remedies, and doctored one year with the best physicians in the land, but got no benefit; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but failed to remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard, white scales; the itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. I can truly say I owe my good health to B. B. B., and I advise all sufferers to use this splendid medicine.

MAKING A TRAMP LOOK DECENT.

It Only Cost $15, but the New Order of Things Didn't Last.

A group of business men chatting on upper Broadway late one warm night was approached by a beggar, who unassumingly begged for a nickel, says the New York Sun. He was a most abject-looking object. His hair was long and matted, his beard grizzly, and in general he looked as if he might be the original of Walter Jones' make-up as a tramp. One of the men whom he addressed asked:

"Boys, how much would it take to get that into a semblance of respectability?"

"Can't be done, George, at any price," was the opinion of two of his companions, while the third suggested that about $40 and a week's training would reform the tramp into a fairly good imitation of a man."

"That's your idea, is it?" observed George contemptuously. "Now, I'll bet you fellows anything you like that for—well, say $15—I'll rig that chap out complete from top to toe, and make him as respectable a citizen as you want to see. Now, here's a bet. You fellows put in $10 each against my $30, and I'm so sure I'll win that I'll pay for the outfit myself and let you chaps be the judges. Is it a go?"

It was a go. The beggar, who had been standing in open-eyed and open-mouthed wonder, was told to meet his prospective benefactor on a down-town corner at 9 o'clock the next morning, and the whole party were to meet at the place where the bet was made in the evening at 8 o'clock.

At the set time the other three parties to the bet met on the corner appointed for the deciding of the wager. At 8 o'clock sharp the proposer of the wager appeared alone.

"Where's your $15 beggar, George?" inquired the others.

"I've left him in charge of my valet," returned George. "He'll be here soon now."

Five, ten, fifteen minutes the party waited, George showing increasing signs of nervousness. The others had begun to banter him, when a young man rushed around the corner and, running up to George, cried:

"Mr. ——, that fellow you left with me gave me the slip after getting his dinner, and I can't get any trace of him."

"Well, that's a nice thing," returned the gentleman. Then turning to his companions he continued: "Boys, how are we going to settle this? Here's my man tells me that our beggar, after having got all he could out of me, has flitted airily hence."

"Joke's on you, old man." "You lose." "You're bound to produce the man; that was part of the bet." "Come, pay up like a little man, George."

"Oh, I don't know," retorted George, pointing to the man who had brought the news. "Gentlemen, let me introduce to you my rehabilitated beggar, fitted out at an entire expense of less than $15. Do I win?"

The other three looked in surprise and amazement at the supposed valet, and could hardly believe that the neatly, almost sprucely, attired individual now grinning cheerfully at them was the tramp of the night before. He wore a jaunty straw hat, a comfortable looking loose gray sack suit, a colored negligé shirt, a well-tied bow necktie, a pair of tan shoes, and a prevailing air of entire respectability.

"You win," said the three in a breath, "if you did it within the price."

Producing a slip of paper, he handed it to his companions. The account was as follows:

Shave, hair cut and shampoo	$ 35
Room for dressing and bath	25
Suit of underclothing	68
Pair of socks	15
Negligé shirt, collar and cuffs attached	75
Necktie	1.5
Pair of strong tan leather shoes	3.00
Straw hat	90
Suit of clothes	7.00
Pair of cuff buttons	25
Pair of suspenders	25
Total	$14.00

"There, boys," said he, "you see I had enough left over to buy him a luncheon for 20 cents and a dinner for 30 cents and give him some change. And I think he looks good enough to pass in any crowd."

"But what are you going to do with him?" asked the others.

"Oh, I'll get him a job somewhere. And I fancy that besides winning that bet I'll make a respectable man out of that chap."

Ten days later the same four business men met by chance on the same Yonge street corner, and while talking there they saw the same ragged, unkempt object of misery shuffling toward them. Before he could escape they surrounded him. His hair and beard were a trifle more respectable than on the previous occasion, but otherwise he was as complete a Weary Raggles as before. A volley of questions saluted him.

The object, seeing no chance of escape, whimpered feebly and said:

"I got fired from the job fer oversleepin' myself. I had ter come back ter this, an' I sold the togs."

"Sold the togs? What the devil did you do that for?"

"How could a feller make any money panhandlin' with good clo'es like them on?" he enquired plaintively.

Endurance of Indian Runners.

An Indian has been known to carry a letter from Guazapares to Chihuahua and back again in five days, the distance being nearly 800 miles. In some parts where the Tarahumaris serve the Mexicans they are used to run in the wild horses, driving them into corral; it may take them two or three days to do it, sleeping at night and living on a little pinole. They bring in the horses thoroughly exhausted, while they themselves are still fresh. They will outrun any horse if you give them time enough. They will pursue deer in the snow, or with dogs, in the rain, for days and days, until at last the animal is cornered and shot with arrows, or falls an easy prey from sheer exhaustion, its hoofs dropping off.—Scribner's.

My Toothache!

Is an exclamation heard every hour in the day. Toothache is the most common ailment of young and old, and in the aggregate inflicts more suffering than perhaps any other single complaint. A one minute cure is just what every person desires to possess. AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees.
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease).
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want;
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I miss,

They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life!
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

VANITY THAT COST A MILLION.

The Folly of a Jockey Threw Away a Fortune at the Post.

A number of racing men were chatting in an uptown hotel on Broadway a few evenings since, says the New York Sun, and one of the party, who had been abroad in company with Walton, the famous plunger, when that heavy speculator made his second trip to England, told how near the American came to creating a sensation which would have made the country ring from one end to the other.

"The vanity of a jockey," said this man, "cost Walton and his friends $1,000,000 and this is how it all happened. Walton had in his stable among other horses Mr. Pickwick, Sutler and the 3 year-old Hopeful, which he still owns and has in the stud somewhere near New York. We had been winning our share of the money, both on our own horses and on those of other owners and the season had opened up in the most propitious fashion. All of the American contingent took advice from 'Petie,' as we called Walton, and we had made the ring wince several times on settling day. Sherwood, who trained for Walton, had a very high opinion of Hopeful, and wanted to run him in a stake race, but we begged him to hold off and pick out a selling event instead, and prepared to make a coup that would be talked about for months to come. After seeing the City and Suburban run we ran back to London, and from there took the train to Epsom, where our horses were quartered. It was our purpose to deceive everybody as to our intentions, and that morning the horses were brought out, trotted and centered, and carefully put away, as though they had had all their work for that day. In the afternoon, when the Downs were deserted, Hopeful and Sutler were brought out in company with Richmond, a high-class horse, then trained by Sherwood but afterwards bought by Walton and brought to this country, running third in Pontiac's Suburban. The trial was a great success and showed us that Hopeful was a grand three-year old, of quality sufficiently high to win many stakes for race horses of his age. Richmond beat him about a length, and the three year old beat Sutler away off; in fact we were in high feather and considered the money we intended to place on Hopeful in the coming race as good as won.

"Racing in England is vastly different from the sport in this country, and the great public knows far less about the merits of the horses than they do in America. Horses run fewer races, are trained privately, and sometimes are not seen in public for months together. As a consequence form is much harder to follow, and those who have a bottled-up good thing and know how to guard their secret get a price that is at times astonishingly good. We were amazed to get as good as 10 to 1 against Hopeful, and the strangest part of it all was that the more we bet the more the ring seemed capable of absorbing. We told our jockey (I won't mention his name, but he was a good one in his day, and most of you know him) that we stood to win a fortune and to take no chances. From the start Hopeful was in a good position, and after making a splendid turn at Tottenham Corner we began to cheer, for our chestnut beauty was striding along in front and moving over the turf in magnificent style. A hundred yards from the finish we were exulting in our triumph, and fifty yards from the line nothing but a miracle could keep us from getting the money. Whips were flying behind us and our colt was still in hand. When I think of what happened then I grow faint and want to swear. Our jockey, with the insane desire of showing what a good thing it was, took a pull at Hopeful's head, the great, long-striding colt became tangled and was thrown off his stride. Webb was on the nearest of his competitors, and he had all but given up riding, but, like the great horseman that he is, he gathered his horse, and, by one of the grandest efforts I've ever seen, nailed Hopeful and beat him on the post. I went broke over the race, but nothing could stay Walton's luck that day, for despite his losses on the race he quit the day $36,000 to the good. What would he have won if our jockey hadn't blundered? Fully $1,000,000; and the entire story of his life might have been changed. Had he got that much money together they never could have made him surrender. I'll never forget what Webb said after the race. It was this: 'The over-weight beat you!" pointing to his upper lip, which, like all of England's jockeys, was clean shaved. Our man had a moustache."

A Civil Servant Drowned.

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.—Henry R. Moore, of the Auditor-General's office, was drowned yesterday in St. Louis dam in the suburbs of the city. He was skating on the dam and in endeavoring to rescue a friend who was with him, Mr. Walker, of the Government General's office, he was dragged into the water himself and got below the ice. Walker was saved although for a time his recovery was doubtful.

AN ADJOURNMENT OF THE ARBITRATION.

NOT TO RESUMED UNTIL NEXT FRIDAY.

Judge Ketchum Wants Time to Consider Before he Delivers His Award —Mr. Watson Will be Busy in Toronto Until About Friday.

Dr. Fryce, physician and secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, was called by the town. His duties consisted in investigating the source of water supplies and inspecting sewerage systems. He had examined sewerage systems in Canada and the United States extensively. He related briefly what had occurred on his previous visits to the town in company with other members of the Provincial Board of Health. At that time he had advised the discharge of the town sewer into the river and he had since had no reason to change his opinion. The town might discharge its sewage into the river at a point below the town without endangering

THE HEALTH OF ANYONE.

In his opinion anthrax was the only disease cattle were likely to contract through the flooding of low lands by streams into which sewage from a town was discharged. The anthrax germs originated in the fact that the hides of South American cattle which had died of this disease were largely used. If the sewage from a tannery was tanked and treated with a germicide, the danger would be removed. In his estimation the pollution of the Otonabee by the sewage would be comparitively slight—1 pound to 2,225,000 pounds of water. The greater part of this would be disposed of quickly by sedementation. The rays of the sun were a germicide and most destructive to bacterial life. If the river was to be used by any other town situated at below Peterborough, he would not recommend the town to discharge its sewage into the water. If the sewer was run out into the centre of the river all evidence of that fact to the eye would disappear within a few feet and all evidence to the nose within a few hundred yards. The statement made by previous witnesses to the effect that a nuisance upon the shore would be engendered by the sewage was most ill-founded The chance of anyone taking typhoid fever from a mouthful of the river water if the sewer was discharged into it, was so very small that it was beyond human computation almost. It would be almost impossible for cattle to be affected except by the possible germ of authrax. A typhoid germ would have no effect on cattle whatever.

AN APPRECIABLE DISTANCE

He could not conceive how there could be any danger in the use of the ice for cooling purposes. Ice of any kind should never be placed

DIRECTLY UPON FRESH MEAT.

Such a proceeding was most unsanitary as the ice when placed in direct proximity with the meat caused it to decompose.

Regarding the statement made by previous witnesses to the effect that the sawdust beds would prove likely breeding beds for typhoid germs the Doctor gave such statement his unqualified contradiction. The lifetime of a typhoid germ was most brief except on such days, as when the large amount of vegetation washed down by a flood has consumed a great deal of the oxygen in the water, or when the action of the sun was not apparent on the surface of the water.

When Mr. Watson took up the cross-examination, he asked Dr. Bryce if he was getting paid for his evidence. The Doctor took considerable umbrage at the question, and apostrophized it as impertinent on the part of Mr. Watson. He stated that he had spoken of no remuneration and expected none. He was only interested in the matter as far of the citizens of Peterborough was concerned.

AS THE PUBLIC HEALTH

Mr. Watson asked if he then did not consider the health of the Monaghan people, but the doctor answered that he was as much interested in their well being as that of the townspeople.

Mr. Watson quoted exhaustively from previous reports of the witness, but with what object it was difficult to conceive, as all bore on the point of using water in which sewage entered for domestic purposes, whereas Dr. Bryce stated during the early part of his evidence that he would not recommend the Otonabee water to be used for such supplies.

Several papers which the witness had written on milk were then taken up by Mr. Waton, but the passages which he criticized did not bear on the point at issue, as the Otonabee to the "sewage infected streams" mentioned.

COULD HARDLY BE COMPARED

Dr. Bryce did not agree with Hiram F. Mills in his statement of "the insufficiency of the self-purification of streams."

Several little brushes occurred between the witness and Mr. Watson, which considerably enlivened the proceedings. When Mr. Watson rather jeeringly asked the doctor where he studied certain diseases of cattle, the doctor promptly called him down and told him not to be impertinent. The counsel lost his temper at this point and asked the judge to rule as to whether the witness could use such language. Judge Ketchum, however, thought that maybe Dr. Bryce had reason to be annoyed at the close cross-examination.

Mr. Watson resumed, but the evidence of the witness was perfect and such a thing as a flaw,

WHICH WAS NOT EXPLAINABLE,

did not appear for the opposing counsel to lay hold of. The witness admitted that the present system of sewage was being laid on the conditional approval of the Board of Health, i.e. if it was ever found to be injurious to the health of any other municipality, a change would have to be made. When the system was planned he understood perfectly that no public water supply was to be drawn from the river below Peterborough. He would never have consented to the system otherwise, and had advised, when the system was contemplated, that it should be laid in a manner to make a change, if considered necessary at any time, as inexpensive as possible.

The re examinaton of Dr. Bryce by Mr. Edwards gave the witness the opportunity of explaining that the various extracts read by Mr. Watson, in which he had condemned the pollution of water by sewage, referred in every case to water which formed the public water supply for other municipalities and which could not possibly be compared to the Otonabee and deductions drawn.

FROM HIS PREVIOUS REPORTS

After about five hours and a half in the box the witness was finally released and a motion for adjournment considered.

The town was most anxious to have the case go right on as the contractor will finish the present stretch of work by about Tuesday and will be forced to dismiss his men and be put to considerable expense if he cannot proceed. The Judge, however, has engagements for the first part of the week and Mr. Watson until Thursday or probably Friday. It was finally decided that Mr. Watson should telegraph the Judge and the town on Monday as to when he would be able to return to Peterborough and again take up the case for the townships.

CANNOT POSSIBLY BE FREE

The date upon which the award should have been made was just a month from the date of the order for the arbitration, but this month expired the second day after the arbitration was commenced, consequently a new date had to be set. Mr. Edwards was anxious to have the award made a month from the date of the final signing of the order on Nov. 6th last, but Judge Ketchum is anxious to have more time and it will probably be well on toward the end of the month before any decision in the matter is reached by him.

In order to facilitate matters, Mr. Watson has agreed not to take any longer in cross-examining witnesses than Mr. Edwards takes in his examination in chief and he is willing to confine his argument to one hour if Mr. Edwards would do likewise or he was willing to submit the case without argument.

Trent Valley Canal.

A CHANCE FOR THE PUBLIC AS WELL AS THE CONTRACTORS TO MAKE MONEY.

A SUIT OF CLOTHES AND A NEW DRESS THE PRIZES.

In order to stimulate public interest in the Trent Valley Canal, and also to get at some idea of the public feeling in reference to the date of completion of this important local public work, which has been hung up before the eyes of the public for the past half century; and which to the eyes of the Government seems to assume a vastly increased importance just previous to an election, the EXAMINER offers the following prizes as an inducement to some of our expert mathematical and logarathmic specialists to exercise their estimating powers.

Any person sending in to the EXAMINER five of the following coupons, containing their estimate of the time when they think the sections will be completed, will have a chance to compete for the following valuable prizes:

To the lady making the nearest average estimate, A NEW DRESS.

To the gentleman making the nearest average estimate, A NEW SUIT OF CLOTHES.

No estimate considered unless accompanied with five of the following coupons, which will be printed in the DAILY EXAMINER, every day this week.

Our 60 Day's Sale

A Pronounced Success

Nothing succeeds like success, and nothing succeeds thats lack the element of Real Worth. If a thing have worth in it and if it supplies a need, it will make its way.

It is because our 60 Days' Sale possesses this element that it to-day enjoys such extensive patronage and popularity.

During November

Up to the present date, sales have been the largest we have ever had; and if this is to be the index, this Clearance Sale of the lines we have advertised, will be ranked as the most remarkable of our record.

Thanksgiving Week

Prices will continue every day much below even Clearance Prices and your experience every day will prove that our VALUES are THE BEST in the trade—that you get more for your money here—that "the Ribbon is Ours."

"It's Fair's Way." We're all enthusiasm—

Now for the Proof

FOR INSTANCE—

TAKE MANTLES!—There is no dormant energy in this department. Fair's is the people's Mantle House—

—200 High-Class German Tailor-Made Mantles, ranging in price from $8 $15 each, can be purchased now for $3.50, $5 and $8 each.

—300 yards Tweed Ulsterings, reduced from $1.50 to 75c.

TAKE SEALETTES!—30 per cent. reduction on Lister's celebrated Sealettes ought to convince skeptical readers that we have reduced in earnest. Here are the figures to prove it:—

$12 00 per yard Sealette for $9 00
11 00 per yard Sealette for 8 00
8 50 per yard Sealette for 6 00
6 50 per yard Sealette for 4 50
5 00 per yard Sealette for 3 00

TAKE FLANNELS!—Surely these are things you need. What are the facts:—

—40 pieces All Wool Grey Flannels, worth 20 and 25c., sale price 15c per yard.

—30 piece Flannelettes, worth 8c., for 5c per yard.

TAKE UNDERWEAR!—There will be urgent need of heavier Underwear from this on. We have all the wanted kinds for men and women, but the whole secret lies in selling first-class quality at a second rate price. Look here for value:—

—Men's Knights of Labour All Wool Shirts and Drawers, worth 85c., sale price 65c.

—10 dozen Men's Natural Wool Shirts and Pants, worth $2.00, the garments clearing at $1.25 each.

—20 dozen Ladies' Undervests, worth $1.10 each, sale price 85c.

—15 doz. All Wool Vests, former price 75c., sale price 65c.

TAKE DRESS GOODS!—We want to "shame" the other fellows out who are crying Bargains under the ordinary conditions:—

—50 pieces Black and Coloured High-class Dress Goods, imported to sell at 75c. to $1.25 per yard, your choice for 50c.

—500 yards 54-inch Dress Tweed Suitings, worth $1.00, sale price 50 to 60c. per yard.

—300 yards All Wool Black and Coloured Dress Goods, worth 50 to 60c., sale price 35c.

—500 yards Double-Fold Costume Cloths, your choice for 25c. per yard.

—$1.00 B & C Corsets really selling at 65c., and Fair's Half dollar Corsets at 35c.

And so on all over the store. If you are paying "regular" prices elsewhere, you are not doing yourself justice, that's all.

Children at school are often abused and laughed at because of their "dullness," when the whole trouble is imperfect vision; for although they see perfectly well when at play outdoors, and quite well when they first take up a book, they cannot continue to read for more than a few minutes at a time. Such children will sooner or later become Cross-Eyed unless the defect is properly corrected by an eye specialist.

AN ARMISTICE POSSIBLE

Japan Announces its Willingness to Negotiate for Peace.

MARCHING UPON WEI-HAI-WEI

This Stronghold the Next Point of Attack—The Chinese Generals in Command at Port Arthur in Danger of Losing Their Heads for Their Defeat.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—The Chee-Foo correspondent of the Central News says: The prevalent impression is that the Japanese will abandon the march on Pekin. Part of the Japanese fleet has been seen in the gulf off Wei-Hai-Wei, but it has made no attack. It is reported that an army of 250,000 Chinese expects to intercept the Japanese on their march toward New Chwang.

The Chinese surrounded a detachment of 500 Japanese in a town recently and captured them. Probably all the captives were killed.

All traffic to the northward will cease in ten days, and the Japanese will have to be quick if they intend to attack Pekin in 1894. It is reported that the next attack will be made upon Wei-Hai-Wei, but General Chang, a brave and competent officer, commands the defence of this stronghold, and he is assisted by several foreigners.

A Chinese refugee from Port Arthur says that six generals had equal commands in the defence and all fought bravely, but the plans lacked combination, hence the defeat.

Two generals escaped, one to Chee Foo, where he is in hiding, and the other to Tien-Tsin. It is likely that they will be beheaded.

Part of the Japanese fleet was lately at Wei-Hai-Wei, but has since departed. The Chinese fear that if peace be concluded now the disbanded troops will plunder the whole country within their reach. The last reliable report is that Japan informed the United States Minister that she was willing to negotiate peace. China has done this; therefore, an armistice is probable.

The Times hears from Kobe: "The government has published a statement that Commissioner Detring was not properly accredited by China to negotiate for peace and that China must accredit a high offical with complete powers.

CLARKE WALLACE'S DENIAL.

He Gave No Letter to Chamberlain, the Personator—Capital Notes.

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.—Before leaving for Winnipeg Controller Clarke Wallace was asked what truth there was in the report about Mrs. Chamberlain, wife of Chamberlain, the personator, now in Stoney Mountain penitentiary, having certain letters that he (Wallace) gave her husband before he left for Winnipeg. "I did not know that Chamberlain was going to Winnipeg," said Mr. Wallace, "therefore I could not nor did I give him any letter. I know nothing about what Mr. Small has done. I have already made two or three newspapers apologies for statements they have made in this direction and I intend making any paper smart that will say that I did give any letter to Chamberlain. Not having any letter, I could not have purchased what I did not give."

The C. P. R. and Ottawa Electric railway companies have made application for a charter to build a bridge across the Deschene Rapids for railway and general traffic, and to allow of the crossing of electric cars or other railways across the river from Ottawa county, there will be a toll upon all foot and vehicular traffic.

Want the Fight in Quebec Province.

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—An effort is said to have been lately made to have the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight held in Montreal. There arrived in Montreal two days ago a gentleman named Edgar Moore, claiming New York as his place of residence and he registered at the St. Lawrence Hall. He sought out a certain newspaper man and made it known to him that he was the agent for an American syndicate headed by Mr. M. F. Dwyer, the well-known turfite, and the object of his visit was to ascertain if there was a possibility of having the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight take place in or near Montreal, or in fact anywhere in the province of Quebec. Mr. Moore stated that he had been through Ontario, but everywhere he met with reverses to the scheme and finally decided that it would be advisable to seek a more lively place and came right on to the Canadian metropolis. He wanted the ideas of a few sporting men on the point first, and he got them yesterday. They crushed his hopes by telling him of the strict laws that existed here, the same as up west, and there was no chance of having the contest take place anywhere hereabouts.

Sunday Newspaper Suspended.

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—The Sunday Morning News, of Montreal, the pioneer Sunday paper, which has been in existence for over two years, has ceased publication. For some time a lively fight has been going on between the News and the Sunday Sun, which was established by the old staff of the former paper, and as there was no room in this city for two Sunday papers it was only a question of time when one had to go under. The News has eventually succumbed, leaving the field of Sunday journalism in Montreal, which is only a limited one at the best to the Sunday Sun.

JOHN BURNS ARRIVES

England's Labor Delegate Receives a Welcome in New York.

SPEAKS ON LABOR QUESTIONS

The Class of Middlemen Being Abolished in England—"Frock Coats and High Hats" Doomed—A Socialist Organization Decides to Ignore the Leader.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—John Burns, M.P., and representative of amalgamated labor in England, arrived on the steamship Etruria. Samuel Gomper, president of the American Federation of Labor, and a couple of local labor leaders, went down the bay on a revenue cutter and boarded the big liner at quarantine to receive the noted Englishman. The real welcome, however, did not occur until Mr. Burns ran down the gangway and landed breathless among a hundred members of different trades' unions who had gathered to meet him.

Mr. Gompers in a few words welcomed Mr. Burns in the name of the united trades union of America. As Mr. Gompers finished, Mr. Dumas, representing Typographical Union, No. 6, stepped forward and delivered an address.

On his way up West street many stevedores who had worked on the London docks recognized their champion, and grasping his hand saluted him with a "Good luck to you, John." Mr. Burns commented on the incident later at his hotel and spoke of the pleasure he experienced when he was remembered and addressed so familiarly.

Messrs. Burns and Holmes visited the Central Labor Union in the afternoon. When the visitors came upon the platform they were greeted with cheers.

Chairman Callahan made a brief speech warmly greeting the representatives of the organized labor in Great Britain.

Mr. Burns, in reply, said that this was the most eventful period in the history of international trade unionism. He hoped to stay long enough in this country to make a careful study of the conditions of the working classes.

The labor movement in England he said was passing through the international phase and this was causing alarm to the politicans who seemed to be frightened at its development. He continued: "You believe with us in England that frock coats and high hats have had their day and that the time has come when fustian and corduroy should have their innings. If so we have got to fight for labor along the lines of the least resistance."

Mr. Burns did not seem to like the middlemen. He told his hearers that in England more than in any other country the class of middlemen is being abolished. There were some 250 town and county councils in Great Britain that employed workmen directly at standard union wages.

Mr. Burns then went to the meeting of Typographical Union No. 6, where he was also enthusiastically received. He told the delegates that workingmen ought to get more carpenters and blacksmiths and printers in the municipal councils and state legislatures and congress.

The Central Labor Federation, which was making preparations to give Mr. Burns a special reception decided not to do so. The federation is composed almost entirely of unions of socialist faith and it received word from leaders of the Social Democrat Federation of England that Mr. Burns was no longer to be regarded as a regular representative of that organization.

Dense Fog on the Thames.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—A dense fog prevailed throughout central and southern England on Saturday. River traffic was stopped generally. In London several collisions of vehicles occurred in the streets resulting in some severe injuries. An omnibus fouled a gate near Oldham and fourteen occupants were hurled down a steep embankment, the majority being seriously hurt. Several isolated cases are reported in which persons accidentally fell into docks or canals in consequence of their inability to see through the fog. Some of these persons were drowned. Many vessels ran aground. In the British channel navigation was suspended.

A Football Player's Bad Injuries.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The condition of Bahan, the captain of the Georgetown college football club, who was so seriously hurt in the game with the Columbia Athletic Club on Thanksgiving day remains about the same. His spine is fractured and the pressure on the spinal cord has produced paralysis from the chest down. He will be removed to the hospital to-day, where an effort will be made to remove the fractured pieces of bone. The operation is to be made as a last resort and his recovery is doubtful. The other players are either entirely recovered or out of danger.

A Big Electrical Concern Goes Under.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—The Great Western Manufacturing Co., one of the largest electrical manufacturing concerns in the country, having its general offices and warehouses in this city and an extensive factory at Duluth and branches it Pittsburg and Denver, passed into the hands of a receiver on Saturday. The concern has been embarrassed for some time.

A Charity Hospital Destroyed.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 3.—The charity hospital, a magnificent structure, erected at a cost of about $40,000, was discovered to be in flames, and owing to its situation outside the city limits was totally destroyed. There was no fatalities as the inmates succeeded in getting out. The fire was the work of an incendiary.

Won the Walking Wager.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 3.—J. M. Raport, who left New York city May 10 last, on a wager of $5,000 that he would reach San Francisco on or before December 1, walking the entire distance without spending a cent other than what he earned on the journey, arrived here with six hours to spare.

LONDON CABLE LETTER

The Liberal Programme for the Next Session Practically Settled.

INACTIVITY IN THE CABINET

Salisbury's Article on the Situation—A Disappointment to His Followers—The Manchester Ship Canal a Financial Failure—France in Madagascar.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—In England it has been a week of very little political activity except, perhaps, in the cabinet and except one strong speech from the Duke of Devonshire. The cabinets are understood to be over for the present, and the Prime Minister has gone north.

The programme for the next session is settled so far as it is in the power of the ministers to settle it. Certain bills have been agreed on in the outlines and the order of their precedence. Even the famous resolution which is to demolish the House of Lords must be supposed to have been framed, presented to the cabinet and approved with more or less cordiality.

It is no secret that on this as on some other important subjects the cabinet is divided against itself. Half of Lord Rosebery's colleagues were against him on the question of the second chamber. He is in a position to enforce his views if he chooses, but Mr. Asquith has not been so far as the public know, disciplined for his Birmingham speech. Men of far less ability and importance than Mr. Asquith are still allowed to proclaim publicly and privately that they differ from their chief on this question.

They all know, nevertheless, that Lord Rosebery cannot be turned out without an appeal to the country; that he cannot be superseded as the party leader any more than he could be replaced as Prime Minister expect by bringing in the Conservatives. He could have his own way if he cared to. The fact that he loosens the bonds and relaxes his authority is known to mean that he has other means of attaining his real end that those which lie on the surface. Week by week it has to be said that the doubts whether he means or expects to abolish either the Lords or their veto gain strength. It is evident that the Radicals do not trust him. Sir Charles Dilke, who knows well what the Radicals think, has come out against Lord Rosebery and his House of Lords programme and against his second chamber. He implies that Lord Rosebery is betraying his party or that wing of his party with which Sir Charles wishes to be identified. Discredited and distrusted as he is his testimony on this point is of value.

Not much is added to the discussion by Lord Salisbury's article in the December National Review. His friends in the press call it disappointing. The paper is entirely critical. Some of it is very good criticism, but what the country wants from Lord Salisbury is an affirmative statement of policy. The agitation against the Lords has for the present fallen flat. It is a party move. Still a great party is committed to it and something must be done to bring the House of Lords into line with modern ideas. Lord Salisbury says in a vague way that he would favor some reform. The country has a right to know what. The Duke of Devonshire spoke far more to the purpose when he said that revolutions such as Lord Rosebery proposes cannot be manufactured and do not come from above, but neither does the duke say what he would do or how far he would go in putting the House of Lords on an elective basis. Probably neither of them regards the agitation as very formidable. If it becomes formidable it will be because such men as Lord Salisbury and the Duke of Devonshire do not see the danger in time and do not avert it.

The Manchester Ship Canal.

The Manchester ship canal is thought by the Times to be both a financial and commercial failure. It has been open eleven months. Its business shows no sign of increase since the beginning, but of late diminishes rapidly. If there were paying business to do there is not sufficient dock equipment. The gross receipts of the canal for a year will be less than $400,000 less than is needed to pay interest on the first debentures. The debt is $85,000,000; the resources relied on for reducing it have vanished. The corporation of Manchester has found this great sum, and must find more if the undertaking is not to come to a standstill. Five millions are urgently wanted. If they are found the yearly liabilities of the company will be $2,500,000, with a revenue of less than half a million. Whichever way it is looked at the prospect before Manchester is as black as its atmosphere.

France in Madagascar.

The Madagascar bill passed the French Chamber by rather more than the expected three to one majority. It is a curious illustration of the French proneness to see red whenever they look toward England that M. Ribot, the ex-Prime Minister, implored the Chamber to seize Madagascar lest Mr. Cecil Rhodes should seize it. So once more, as in Tunis and Tonquin, France is entering upon a career of conquest on false pretences and by perfidious methods.

Lady Somerset's Crusade.

The report that Lady Henry Somerset intends participating in the total abstinence and purity crusades in America is causing some unkind comments here. She has very large estates in England and complaints from her tenants are very rare. She recently undertook to provide a large number of new hop houses for those who make a living by raising this crop on her land. This genuine kindness on her part is turned into reproach by captious critics, who see inconsistency in thus helping to provide the essential ingredient for the manufacture of the deadly beer.

REPRESSION NOT ADVISABLE.

A petition to the Quebec Legislature is being circulated setting forth that there are thirteen P.P.A. lodges in Quebec now. It also sets forth that the tendency and aim of the Association is "to destroy the harmony and the good understanding which ought to exist between the different subjects of Her Majesty in this country." The petition prays the Quebec Legislature "to adopt a law necessary to put a check on the invasion of this dangerous fanaticism." This is not, it seems, a wise course. Such repressive action would speedily be construed into persecution with the result of arousing the sympathy of those, who might not even sympathise with the objects of the Association, but would object to any action that would restrict freedom of opinion. Now any organization not founded on just and equitable principles, dreads nothing so much as being left severely alone. In other words, give it what spread it desires; and, becoming top heavy, the insufficient foundations will give away and the superstructure will tumble into ruins.

CERTAINLY IN A PREDICAMENT

Just How Mr. McCamus is to get Rid of His Visitor is What is Puzzling Him.

For some time past, says the Bobcaygeon Independent, Mr. Thos. McCamus has heard noises in his cellar, and imagined that perhaps rats had found their way in. The house is built upon the rocks at the edge of the river, and in excavating a cellar the crevice between the rocks, from six inches to a foot in width, were filled in with gravel, small stone, sawdust, etc. The action of the water has, unnoticed, washed out one of the crevices and made a passage to the cellar. One morning this week Mr. McCamus heard the noise and quietly lifted the trap door in the kitchen. He had just landed below when he saw a large animal approaching him. He first thought that it was a skunk, and Mr. McCamus very naturally skipped up the steps, just as the animal slipped underneath. On investigation it was found that the animal was an otter, having a slide down the crevice to the river, and a snugly prepared nest on the cellar bank, not eighteen inches beneath the kitchen stove. Now according to the Game Act, the taking of otter is prohibited until Nov. 1st, '97. The question arises, what is to be done? Is a natural born Britisher to permit an otter to sneak into his premises, and go through his winter's provisions? Is he to sit calmly in his arm chair and hear the otter mopping up his mutton stew? Is he to lay awake at nights knowing that a blooming otter is lushing itself in his rasoberry jam? Is he to bear upon his mind by day and by night the burden of the thought that his victuals are being consumed by a tenant whom he dare not evict? This country is getting so much law, that a man is not sure he is safe in calling his soul his own. In such a case what course is Mr. McCamus to pursue? He wishes to be a law-abiding citizen, and he desires to have peaceful possession of his own premises

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS.

This is the month when the newspapers abound in articles describing Christmas gifts that can be made by clever fingers; when the shops are overflowing with rich and beautiful gifts ready-made; when the streets are thronged with shoppers, and the out going and incoming mails are heavily laden, for the whole world becomes tributary to Santa Claus.

In all this bustle and confusion the spirit of Christmas is sometimes lacking. The faces of the shoppers have a worried, driven look, as if pursued by a sense of duty, more than by the pleasure of giving. On all sides one hears complaining, "Oh, it's so hard to know what to give, so and so has everything already that money can buy;" or, "I must spend at least five dollars on this friend, she never gives less than that for my gift, though I really cannot afford it this year."

This person would consider it an insult to send her friend a five dollar bill as a return gift, and yet this is exactly the spirit in which her return gift is made.

Your rich friend will value—if she is a true friend—any little token you send her, because of the giver, if she knows you are grateful to her for her rich and beautiful gift, for real gratitude is something her money cannot buy.

If the Sunday schools of wealthy churches whose members have a surfeit of Christmas gifts at home, would only have a tree or festival, not for themselves, but for the poor—let the children give it themselves—and hand out the gifts, not simply give the funds—they will enjoy it, and realize that it is indeed more blessed to give than to receive.

SLY DOGS.

A few days ago the EXMINER published the squib: "A business man on a trip to Peterborough a day or two since remarked that he never ran across a town where the citizens were so much addicted to taking short cuts across corners as were the residents of Peterborough. He thought it was a good sign of the proof that Peterboroughians were hustlers." The Lindsay Post comments as follows: "The visiting business man was not very observant—if he jumps at conclusions is that fashion he will die poor. It is a historical fact that when a Peterborough man cuts "cross corners" he is heading for a saloon." Brer Wilson evidently doesn't know Peterborough very well. If he did he would have observed the citizens gliding for the rear door, rather than making a break across a corner for a drink. The Peterborough citizen generally goes for a drink in the most roundabout way possible unless he happens to be in Lindsay, where he thinks the villagers are too sleepy to notice what he is doing. Oh the Peterborough citizen is a sly dog.

HEART DISEASE.

Due to Kidney Disease—A Fact Generally Overlooked—May be Avoided.

BRAMPTON, Dec. 3.—Weakness or failure of the heart action is one of the most prevalent diseases known, and also one of the most dangerous if neglected. The cause of heart disease must be sought for outside the heart itself. First of all, the condition of the kidneys must be examined, as in more than ninety per cent. of all cases of heart disease, palpitation, neuralgia, and heart failure, the blood will be found impure, the result of the retention of effete matter, usually uric acid poison, which the kidneys have been unable to excrete. Dodd's Kidney Pills are a perfect heart tonic and blood purifier. Use them at once if at all troubled, is the advice of James Crisp, of this town.

A Boon to Mankind.

Neuralgia, swelled neck, enlarged glands, lame back and all muscular pain, lameness and soreness are speedily and effectually cured by Hagyard's Yellow Oil. It removes all pain in a few applications.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

U. S. CONGRESS ASSEMBLES.

The Work for the Ensuing Session Outlined—The Bluefields Affair.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Congress assembled to-day. Most important among the bills, from a political point of view, are the four so-called "pog gun" tariff bills sent over from the House at the close of last session and reported favorably to the Senate on August 20. Mr. Jones, of Arkansas, and Mr. Harris, of the Finance Committee, have said that they intended to call these bills up and especially the sugar bill at the earliest possible moment, but it is not likely that they will urge them during the first week. As it now stands on the Senate calendar the House bill providing for free sugar was amended by the Senate Finance Committee by imposing a duty of 40 per cent. on all sugars.

The House bill providing for free coal was amended by the senate finance committee by imposing a duty on bituminous coal when imported from any country that levies a duty on American coal, this being understood to be directed chiefly against Canada. The House bill admitting iron ore free was reported by the senate finance committee without amendment, but the fourth bill as to free barbed wire was reported by a substitute providing for the free admission not only of barbed wire but of the materials which might enter into its manufacture.

In view of the recent complications at Bluefields, Mr. Morgan will take the earliest opportunity to bring to the attention of the Senate his bill relating to the construction of the Nicaraguan canal. This measure is bound to be the cause of much discussion and will be championed by Senators Morgan and Frye. There is thought to be but little doubt that it will pass the Senate, but its fate in the House is less certain.

The House bill to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy, which was favorably reported to the Senate on the 31st of July last, will be a matter of earnest discussion, and the anti-option bill may protrude itself early in the session. The House bills to admit the territories of Arizona and New Mexico to the sisterhood of states are also pending and Mr. Faulkner will endeavor to add these new stars to the flag before the fifty-third Congress dies.

PIRATES ATTACK A WRECK.

A Frost-Bitten Crew Lands Upon an Inhospitable Shore.

HALIFAX, N. S., Dec. 3.—Capt. Daniel Fraser, of the schooner, Hasty, ashore at Pollett's Cove, C, B., relates a hard experience with pirates infesting that place. His vessel was from Alberton, P. E. I., for Grape, Que., with a cargo of produce. He says: "We encountered the frightful storm of the past ten days, and after battling with the elements until the vessel was in danger of foundering and the crew were frost-bitten and thoroughly exhausted, I ran her ashore at Pollett's cove at noon and at once tried to save the cargo, but as fast as it was put on the beach it was carried away by the inhabitants, who began to cut and break up the schooner to get at the cargo. I was quite at the mercy of this gang of pirates, who pillaged the vessel of everything on board, even to my clothes. When I landed I was wet and cold, the mercury registering 12 degrees above. I believed that had I beached the vessel at night, my life would have been in danger. I am a ruined man. The schooner and a portion of her cargo belonged to me and nothing was insured."

Consumption—Low Condition

Wonderful Results From Taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Miss Hannah Wyatt
Toronto, Ont.

"Four years ago while in the old country (England), my daughter Hannah was sent away from the hospital, in a very low condition with consumption of the lungs and bowels, and weak action of the heart. The trip across the water to this country seemed to make her feel better for a while. Then she began to get worse, and for 14 weeks she was unable to get off the bed. She grew worse for five months and lost the use of her limbs and lower part of body, and if she sat up in bed had to be propped up with pillows. Physicians

Said She Was Past All Help

and wanted me to send her to the 'Home for Incurables.' But I said as long as I could hold my hand up she should not go. We then began to give her Hood's Sarsaparilla. She is getting strong, walks around, is out doors every day; has no trouble with her throat and no cough, and her heart seems to be all right again. She has a first class appetite. We regard her cure as nothing short of a miracle." W. WYATT, 69 Marion Street, Parkdale, Toronto, Ontario.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

WILL CURE YOU

"Backache means the kidneys are in trouble. Dodd's Kidney Pills give prompt relief."

"75 per cent. of disease is first caused by disordered kidneys.

"Might as well try to have a healthy city without sewerage, as good health when the kidneys are clogged, they are the scavengers of the system.

"Delay is dangerous. Neglected kidney troubles result in Bad Blood, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and the most dangerous of all, Bright's Disease, Diabetes and Dropsy."

"The above diseases cannot exist where Dodd's Kidney Pills are used."

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

SUICIDE IN MONTREAL.

An American Guest at the Windsor Cuts His Throat.

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—H. C. Falle, an American, who has been a guest at the Windsor hotel here for six weeks or more, cut his throat in his bedroom. Little is known about the man. He was about 50 years of age and supposed to be a New Yorker.

He was of quiet disposition and spent a great portion of his time in reading, being one of the best patrons of the hotel newsstand had. In appearance he was short and stout. Dr. Villeneuve made an examination of the room in which the poor fellow committed the deed. It is stated that for a week past a close watch had been kept on Falle's movements, as it was feared he would do something rash.

Falle was suffering from mental trouble and was greatly disturbed by the strikes in the States, which seemed to fill his mind with terrible forebodings for the future.

He was found lying on his bed this morning with his throat cut from ear to ear. A bloody razor was lying by his side and a pool of clotted blood covered the bed. From the blood sprinkled on the floor and dressing table. It would appear that he committed suicide standing in front of the mirror, as drops of blood cover the floor from the bureau to the bed. During the past two or three days he had sent numerous letters and telegrams to his friends in the United States who evidently became alarmed over his condition, as one of his friends, H. C. Wait of Jersey City, arrived in the city only to find him dead.

During his stay here he had been under the care of Dr. Kenneth Cameron. In his pockets were found $126 in bills and $20 in silver, and on the table were two letters addressed to relatives. One of these asked that his body be buried in his native town, Jersey City. Mr. Wait paid all the bills contracted by the deceased, and the body was taken to the morgue.

An inquest was held on the body. The jury returned a verdict of suicide while temporarily insane. The remains were taken to Jersey City, where the deceased has relatives, for interment.

Diamond Swindlers in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—For the last two weeks this city has been the scene of operations conducted by a very dangerous gang of diamond swindlers, composed of three women and two men. They previously carried on business in Boston and Cleveland, the robberies in each place amounting to about $8,000. Since coming here they have lived in gorgeous style, and concocted an elaborate plan to rob leading jewelers of diamonds and other precious stones. The establishments of Richard Hemsley and Mr. Cochenthaler, on St. James street, have been robbed by substituting paste stones for real jewels, and the stealing was most cleverly done. The gang will be shortly broken up, as the police are after them.

Looking Out for a Big Swindler.

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—The police have been asked to be on the look-out for a man named G. Alba Raymond, a Frenchman and director of the LaFayette College, Boston, who had skipped away from that city after having swindled his creditors to the extent of $30,000. Raymond had always been considered as honest and was highly esteemed in and around Boston, where he was engaged in a lucrative business and had filled many important positions, among these, that of President of the French Club of Boston. In addition to the above defalcation Raymond also swindled one of his compatriots named Bailley of a sum of $4,500. Raymond is supposed to have come to Montreal and the police are now endeavoring to locate him.

Died in an Open Boat.

HALIFAX, Dec. 3.—Last Wednesday James Wagner, a married man living at Black Rock, Luenburg county, after purchasing a flask of whiskey at Lunenburg, started for home in a small sail boat. The night was dark and squally. Next morning a boat was found at anchor and in it was Wagner's body. He is supposed to have died of exposure. Over a year ago Wagner accompanied a man named Tanner on his way home near the same place. Next morning Tanner's body was found frozen stiff. Wagner was arrested, charged with causing Tanner's death, but acquitted. Wagner's father was drowned and his grandfather frozen.

A Cotton Cargo on Fire.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Dec. 3.—The British steamer Starlight, of West Hartlepool, Captain Voss, bound from Galveston to Liverpool, cotton laden, arrived here yesterday with her cargo on fire. The fire was discovered on Friday morning. Measures were promptly taken to keep it under control and the ship at once headed for this port. The fire gained progress gradually, the deck became heated, and had to be constantly flooded with water. On arriving here pipes were constructed by means of which steam will be sent through the cargo. The work of unloading will be begun to-day.

Success of Anti-Toxine.

HAMILTON, Dec. 3.—Dr. Edgar, of the city hospital, has inoculated several persons suffering from diphtheria with the anti-toxine remedy last week and in every case upon the application of the lymph the patient began to recover. Some of the tests were of the most severe nature. In one case an infant one year old, whose constitution could not have stood out long against the disease, was saved, and another case was that of a four-year-old boy, who would certainly have died under ordinary treatment. Light cases of diphtheria were reported to the medical health officer for the week.

It's a Queer Woman

who can't have confidence in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Here is a tonic for tired-out womanhood, a remedy for all its peculiar ills and ailments—and if it doesn't help you, there's nothing to pay.

What more can you ask for, in a medicine?

The "Prescription" will build up, strengthen and invigorate the entire female system. It regulates and promotes all the proper functions, improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and vigor. In "female complaints" of every kind and in all chronic weaknesses and derangements, it's the only guaranteed remedy. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in the case of every tired-out or suffering woman, she'll have her money back.

Nothing urged in its place by a dealer, though it may be better for him to sell, can be "just as good" for you to buy.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation, piles, biliousness, indigestion and headaches.

A Narrow Escape.

People who are exposed to the sudden changes of our northern climate have little chance of escaping colds, coughs, sore throat and lung troubles. The best safe-guard is to keep Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam at hand. It is a quick relief and reliable cure for such complaints.

Sick headache and constipation are promptly cured by Burdock Pills. Easy to take, sure in effect.

David Christie Murray on Copyrights.

HAMILTON, Dec. 3.—Mr. David Christie Murray, in an interview here, gave expression to his views upon the Canadian copyright question, upon which a controversy is in progress between Mr. R. T. Lancefield, of this city, and Mr. Daley, London, England, in the London Times. Mr. Murray said: "These letters have been published since I left England, but from what I am informed on the subject I certainly favor the Canadian view very strongly, and wonder why England and English authors should object at all. As I understand it, Canada proposes to take the copyright into its own control. The Canadian Government will license a Dominion firm to publish so many copies on payment of an author's royalty of ten per cent., and hand that amount over to the British author. It seems to me an admirable arrangement, and a great improvement on the present method of dealing from England with New York for the United States and Canadian copyright, I can see that your government is interested in developing your Canadian publishing trade, and I think the change will be jointly advantageous to the English author and Canadian publisher."

Wedding Party Attacked by Wolves.

BUDA PEST, Dec. 3.—News was received here of the almost total annihilation by wolves of a party of wedding guests who were returning to their home from the village of Hindos, where the ceremony which they had attended had been performed. The route of the party lay through a dense forest. Soon after entering the forest cries of the wolves were heard, and despite all efforts at flight, the party were soon overtaken by the animals and thirteen of their number were dragging down and devoured. Few of those who succeeded in escaping were not without injuries of a more or less serious nature. The survivors made their way to the nearest village, and a relief party was at once organized, which proceeded immediately to the scene of the slaughter, where they found scattered about fragments of flesh, bone and clothing.

Massey Still Looks to the States.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Dec. 3.—H. A. Massey, president of the Massey-Harris company of Toronto, and two or three directors of the company were in the city and had a conference with officials of the power company. It has already been stated that there was a good prospect of this company locating an extensive branch in this city, and those in a position to know are very confident that they will. The Toronto gentlemen inspected several available sites.

Revival.

Telfordian Temperature Topics.

Monday, Dec. 3.—At this morning's observation the self-registering thermometer indicated 17 degrees above. The wind has only changed a little, but I think the snow fall is over, with a lower temperature, unless we get wind from the east.

They talk about a woman's sphere,
As though it had a limit;
There's not a place in earth or heaven,
There's not a task to mankind given,
There's not a blessing or a woe,
There's not a whisper, yes or no,
There's not a life, a death, a birth,
That has a feather's weight of worth

Can. Gen. Electric Co. Notes.

Mr. Wm. Clunan, foreman painter, left for his home in New York last Tuesday morning on receipt of a telegram stating that his father was very ill. He is expected back in a couple of weeks.

Mr. H. McIntosh, student, received a severe electric shock, burning his hand considerably, which will debar him from duty for a week at least.

Mr. H. T. Hartman is at present in Montreal on business.

For Winter Reading.

The following new books have been placed on the shelves of the Mechanics' Institute library: Leisure Hour, 1894; The Romance of Electricity, Munro; Lectures and Essays, Goldwin Smith; The Highway of Sorrow, Stretton; The Old, Old Story, Carey; Tennyson, Brooke; Some Emotions, and a Moral, Hobbes; A Study in Temptation, Hobbes; The Sinner's Comedy; Kitty Alone, Baring Gould; Conspiracy of Silence, Colmore; The People of the Mist, Rider Haggard. A good Christmas present is a ticket for the Institute, which may be procured from the Librarian.

To Horsemen.

During the past ten years, the interest of the horse-owning public, of this district, in the trotting horse has increased fully one hundred per cent., and the importation of gilt-edged stock from the "other side" has been the cause of the great improvement, which has been attained. That our "horsey" readers may keep abreast of the times, we desire to call their attention to the superb Christmas number of the Chicago Horseman,—the leading and most instructive journal published in the interests of equine matters. This year, the mammoth edition will excel all former attempts of the kind, and will contain a world of information—stories, poems, etc., by the best authors,—and a galaxy of beautiful engravings, such as were never published before at the same price—35 cents. Better still, send four dollars for a year's subscription and receive the Xmas No. free. The Horseman is a beautifully printed, illustrated weekly and is cheap at the price. It is published at 325 Dearborn street, Chicago. Leave your orders in advance at the Peterborough Bookstore for the grand Christmas number.

Be sure and see Grafton's four favourite Overcoats at $5, $8.50, $10 and $12.

A. O. U. W.

A special meeting of the members of Peterborough Lodge, No. 135, will be held at Clegg's furniture shop at 7.30 o'clock this evening to make arrangements for the funeral of the late German A. Mitchell. By order, WM. MULHOLLAND, Master Workman.

The beautiful piano promised by Whaley, Royce & Co., to be used at the Herr Yunck concert will not be here in time but will be sent later. Mr. Hoover has however secured from Thos. W. Crosby, the local agent here, a Cabinet Grand, manufactured by the Morris Piano Co., Listowel.

The December Marriage Market.

There are more marriages in December than any other month. There may be no profit in discovering the reason of this fact but there is profit in remembering that Mr. W. J. Green, merchant tailor, has a fresh supply of marriage licenses, and can furnish along with the license a wedding suit and ties, so that you can be mated, tied and suited, a combination that will insure a happy wedded life.

For Sweet Charity's Sake.

It is learned that at a meeting called by the mayor a few days ago, of the Charity Committee of the town council and the ministers of the town, at which Rev. J. C. Davidson took the chair, it was resolved that Rev. W. R. Young, Rev. Archdeacon Casey and Rev. J. C. Davidson be a committee to lay before the council this evening a scheme for the better distribution of charity during the coming winter. Statistics from other cities and towns were produced and it was evident that Peterborough's charity is costing the town too much in comparison with that of other towns of the same size and of less prosperity.

To-morrow is the Date

When Peterborough will be visited by one of the leading violin virtuosos on this continent. Herr Yunck, soloist of the Court Orchestra, Vienna, Germany, will be assisted by Mrs. Martin-Murphy, soprano, Mr. H. Blight, baritone, Mrs. Blight, accompanist. The people of Peterborough may not have an opportunity again of hearing a programme presented such as to-morrow night, as the amount of expense connected with it, not counting the work of the manager, is a matter of no small consideration. Tuesday, Dec. 4th. Plan of hall at Sailsbury's bookstore, where tickets also can be obtained. Doors open at 7.30. General admission, 50 cents; reserved seats, 75 cents.

Collegiate Entertainment.

GALT, Oct. 27th, 1894.

Mr. Grenville P. Kleiser gave his "David Copperfield" last night in connection with our Commencement exercises, to a delighted audience. From the beginning to the end Mr. Kleiser carried the audince with him, and was greeted with frequent rounds of applause. During the last ten years we have had the best readers available at the entertainments given by the Collegiate Institute, but I regard Mr. Kleiser as second to no one of them.

THOMAS CARSCADDEN,
Principal Collegiate Institute.

Mr. Kleiser will appear in the Opera House, Friday Dec. 7th, in connection with the Collegiate Institute Commencement exercises.

A Painful Accident.

On Saturday afternoon a little before five o'clock, John Beavis, an employee of the Wm. Hamilton Works, was engaged in breaking scrap iron by the aid of a steam hammer, weighing about a half a ton, which works something in the principle of of a pile driver. He was breaking a fly wheel, and when the hammer descended a large fragment rebounded and struck Beavis heavily on the side, knocking him down, and when the piece descended it it struck his left leg, producing a fracture of both bones a short distance above the ankle. The injured man, who lives on Cedar street and is married, but without children, was placed in care of Dr. King, and removed to the Nicholls Hospital. The company has provided a recess into which the workman may step till after the hammer descends, and thus be out of the danger, but on this occasion this means of protection was not made use of.

The Late G. A. Mitchell.

This morning Mr. German A. Mitchell, a well known resident, passed away at his home on Stewart street, at the age of 50 years. His death is said to be due to the result of injuries received by being crushed between two mail trucks at the G.T.R. station some months ago. The deceased gentleman was a native of the township of Emily, but has passed the last 30 years of his life in Peterborough. For ten years of his life he was engaged at teaching school, the last three of which were spent in the Auburn school. Of late years he has given a good deal of attention to the sewing machine business, but of later years he had che contract of conveying the mails from the post office to the stations. He was married 29 years ago last Hallow'een, to Miss Sophronia Baker, of Rochester, who, with five children survives him. The three daughters are Mrs. B. Jinks, Mrs. R. Hounsell and Mrs. W. J. Allison, all of town; one son is in the post office, and the other, eight years of age, is at home. Mr. Mitchell was a member of the George street Methodist church, and as a citizen was highly respected for his many good qualities. The funeral, on Wednesday at 2.30 o'clock from the late residence, Stewart street, between Charlotte and Simcoe will be conducted under the auspices of the A.O.U.W., of which deceased was a charter member.

NEWS NUGGETS

Paragraphs Picked Up and Pencilled for Public Perusal.

—Town Council to-night.

—Winter's at the bat—Spring's on deck.

—The Ashburnham Village Council will meet this evening.

—The Board of Education meets in regular session to-night.

The regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y.M.C.A. was held this afternoon.

—The Young People's Association of St. John's church, meet in the Sunday school this evening.

—A good bottom of ice is being put in the rink, but it is not probable that it will be open for use until next week.

—A large number of the citizens took advantage of the light fall of snow yesterday, and were out with their cutters and sleighs.

—In the police court, this morning, a young man from the country was fined two dollars and costs for being disorderly in the Kennedy House, some time ago.

—In the EXAMINER's report of St. Andrew's supper, the fact that James Blaine, towards the end of the banquet, sang a good song in good style, was inadvertently unmentioned.

—Two young gentlemen from Ashburnham, will contribute five dollars and costs each to the civic treasury for being participants in a row, which occurred recently at the resort kept by Mrs. Woods on College street.

Plan of hall for the Yunck concert is now open at Sailsbury's Book Store, where tickets can be obtained. General admission 50c, reserved seats 75c. Doors open at 7:30; concert begins at 8. The public will kindly, if possible, be seated before that hour.

—Mr. J. L. O'Brien has shown the EXAMINER a little mechanical contrivance named the Vogt Vocalizer, designed to produce the proper potion of the mouth, requisite to give full effect to the voice, one of the most difficult things ta acquire. Mr. O'Brien is introducing the Vogt Vocalizer, which is worthy the attention of all teaching or learning singing.

—The first to cross Pigeon lake from Harvey this season were Mr. George Esson and his sons George and Thomas, who came over the ice Friday morning. They took the ice at Black Point, north of Crowley's Island, and made the shore on Wm. Hunter's farm, near Jas. Falls. The ice was not in condition for skating, and anything but good walking as it was lumpy and glare in places. It has been broken by the wind and is now frozen together in blocks. It consequently varies much in thickness, some places being about two inches and in others nearly four.

—A youth, while engaged in a game of "shinny" with a number of other boys, in and about the shores of the Otonabee, in close proximity to the Locks dam, on Sunday morning, in following the "puck," broke through the ice. The puck lodged against a snow drift, as he thought, but it, however, turned out to be a rock projecting a foot or two above the surface of the ice, which was very thin at this particular spot. He was rescued from his perilous position by his comrades and cared for. Parents should see that their boys' skates are "out of sight" as the ice is only an inch and a half thick. Skating season is not in yet.

DEATH AND BURIAL OF A PRIEST

Rev. Father James O'Connell Dies at Fenelon Falls—His Remains Brought to Peterborough For Burial.

Rev. Father James O'Connell, of Kansas City, Diocese of Kansas, died at the residence of his brother, Rev. Thos. O'Connell, Fenelon Falls, on Friday last, at the age of 35 years. The deceased priest was a native of Ireland. He was educated for the holy office at All Hallows' College, Dublin. He was also ordained in Dublin, and went direct from there to his Kansas mission. But the hard work, and the harder climate, told upon his health, and about last July he was compelled to retire from active work, and he came to stay with his brother at Fenelon Falls. His disease, however, resisted all medical treatment and loving care, and he died last Friday.

This morning his remains were brought to Peterborough for interment. The body, on the arrival of the mid-day G.T.R. train, was taken to St. Peter's cathedral where the office of the Libera was chanted by the choir, His Lordship, Bishop O'Connor, pronouncing the Absolution and Rev. Fathers Conway and McGuire filling the offices of deacon and sub-deacon respectively. The following clergy of the diocese were present to pay the last tribute of respect to their departed brother:—Rev. Father Brown, V. G., and Rev. Father Keilty, Douro; Rev. Father Conway, Norwood; Rev. Father Connolly, Campbellford; Rev. Father Lynch, Port Hope; Rev. Father Bretherton, Downeyville; Rev. Father McColl, Ennismore; Rev. Sweeney, Lindsay; Rev. Father McGuire, Bracebridge, and the cathedral clergy. A large number of citizens showed their sympathy by being present at the service. The priests in a body followed the remains to the grave where the burial service was sung by Rev. Father Brown, V.G.

DISTRIBUTION OF CLOTHING.

The Arrangements Completed to Begin the Distribution on Friday Next—Two New Rules Adopted.

The Rector of Peterborough very gratefully acknowledges the large amount of clothing that has been contributed by the citizens of Peterborough, which will be distributed to the deserving poor without regard to religious bodies. It is stored at the residence of Mr. W. H. Roberts, 496 Stewart street, where needed repairs are being made. Distribution under the superintendance of Mrs. S. White on Friday next, between the hours of 3 and 6 p. m., and on subsequent Fridays at the same hours, so long as the supply lasts. Some criticisms having been made in regard to the undue facility with which applicants were supplied with clothing, etc., the following two rules have been made to govern this year's distribution:

1st.—All applicants must present a recommendation, signed by a minister of the Gospel, (no matter of what denomination,) or the town relief officer, Mr. Robert Pope.

2nd.—Small sums from 25 cents down to 5 cents will be accepted in each case, as a contribution towards the expense of collecting the clothing.

In this connection, thankful acknowledgement is made of the generosity of Mr. Alex. Elliott for the free loan of his horse and delivery van for the collection of the clothing, which has extended over nearly three weeks. There was not as much clothing contributed as last year, but it is of a better quality.

HOCKEY.

The Peterboroughs and Volts were both represented at the meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association, at the Queen's Hotel, Toronto, on Saturday. Messrs. J. Horkins and Perry Goldsmith were there on behalf of the Peterboroughs and Messrs. D. M. Rogers and S. Smith looked after the interests of the Volts.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: president C. A. B. Brown, Granite; first vice-president, J. A. MacFadden, Stratford; second vice-president, W. Gilmour, Varsity; secretary, Tiffin, formerly of Stratford, and now of Osgoode; treasurer, A. Creelman, Toronto; executive committee—A. F. Barr, Varsity; A. F. R. Martin, Osgoode; G. J. Horkins, Peterborough; J. D. McMurrich, Trinity; W. B. Laidlaw, London, and G. F. McDonnell.

RUGBY FOOTBALL.

The members of the town Rugby football organization banquetted their president, Mr. R. B. Rogers, Saturday night at the Palace Restaurant. The chair was taken by Capt. Colyer of the team, and a number of toasts were proposed and responded to in a vein, which made the evening pass most pleasantly. The first toast was "Rugby football," and after that followed those of President Rogers, Capt. Colyer, Secretary and Manager Max. Poussette and "Monty" Montgomery. Speeches were made by Messrs. Poly Strickland, Lefevre, Colyer, Roger, Moore, Montgomery and others, and some capital songs were sung by Messrs. Leefe, Strickland, Moore, Robinson, and Corrie-Smith. The supper closed the football season for the year.

CHURCH CHIMES.

The regular consecration service of the Epworth League will be held this evening in the George street Methodist church.

The collection taken up in the evening in the George street church last night will be devoted to the educational fund of the church.

Miss Vina Belleghem took the solo part in the anthem "The Billows Swell," in particularly sweet voice in the George street Methodist church last night.

The Bobcaygeon Independent speaks as follows, regarding the necessity of sermons being preached on every day life:—"The smallest hamlet in the province is not without at least two churches; villages have half a dozen; and towns have them by the score, yet in commerce we find dishonesty, in politics corruption, and the whole mass of society saturated in dishonour. The Rev. Mr. Davidson, of St. John's church, Peterborough, gave a sermon, last Sunday, on commercial honesty and the building was packed to the door with men. Let a parson give the regulation sermon on the Mysterious Birth, Salvation, the Miraculous Resurrection, or some of the fourth century abominations, and he will sing his lullaby to a handful of estimable old ladies. Let a minister give a practical sermon on the plain simple principles taught by the Nazarene, those principles so penetrating in their plainness, so sublime in their simplicity and every foot of standing room is occupied by men, eager to hear the truths applied to daily life. Is there not an impressive, a glaring pointer in this?

C. B. ROUTLEY,

379 GEORGE STREET.

AN EDUCATIONAL SERMON BY DR. POTTS.

THE ELOQUENT EDUCATIONAL SECRETARY.

The Teachings of the Prophets Not Made Enough of by Preachers of the Gospel—Philosophical or Sensational Sermons a Mistake.

Even the slide seats in the George street Methodist church had to be utilized last night to accommodate the large congregation which assembled to hear Rev. Dr. Potts, of Toronto, expound on matters educational.

The eloquent Educational Secretary of the Methodist church in Canada, took as his text the words "Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture and preached unto him Jesus."—Acts viii chap., 35 verse. Preaching, said he, is the chief factor in the world of civilization. In the New Testament are to be found great accounts of gospel preaching. In successful preaching there are THREE PRINCIPAL FACTORS.

These are the preacher, the hearer and the Holy Spirit. No subject at present weighs more on the minds of the ministers than ministerial success in the pulpit. Many and many a minister, after a service, had gone to his study and actually wailed on account of the lack of success which had attended his exhortation. For success in preaching all three of the principal factors mentioned must act concurrently. The action of the Holy Spirit and the teacher cannot attain the grand result unless there is also the concurrent action of the hearer. No teacher had ever presented the subject with equal clearness as the Prophet of Nazareth and Galilee. If only the three factors could be fulfilled at the present time, Dr. Potts was assured that no unsaved man would leave George street church at the close of the service. There was the presentation of the Spirit, he was sure, was present, and if only the hearer was willing the desired end might be accomplished.

GOD'S HOLY TRUTH,

Even if the preacher knew that nothing could be done without the concurrent action of the other two factors in the saving of souls, yet he should always prepare himself for the pulpit as thoroughly as though everything depended on his efforts alone.

The main object of the Educational Soicety of the Methodist Church was to prepare preachers for the pulpit, so the present sermon on preaching and preachers would be seen to be appropriate. In preaching a minister should not branch out on a philosophical discourse, neither should he go to the other extreme and dwell on sensational subjects. It was a message of God which should be delivered and all should, like Philip,

"PREACH OF JESUS."

He could conceive of great works being accomplished without the presence of the Holy Spirit. An artist could conceive and execute a portrait which could almost speak, so perfect would it be. Yet the whole work might have been accomplished without one thought of the Holy Spirit.

A doctor might diagnose a case, prescribe for the patient, pay visits again and again—see vigor and strength return to the sufferer and accomplish a wonderful cure and yet may never once have given a thought to to the Holy Spirit.

A lawyer could acquit himself admirably in a case and cover himself with glory withoutponce thinking of the Almighty, yet all things being equal, these great works were all the more likely to be accomplished effectually if the help of the Spirit had been invoked, but yet it was apparent such might be done without, but no man could be unless he was assured of the presence of the Spirit. "O, my brethren," urged he, "if the man Jesus Christ needed the Holy Spirit to qualify him for preaching the Gospel, surely, surely we poor mortals must invoke the same aid also." All ministers must have the help of the Holy Spirit with the gift of the guidance and grace of the Lord.

The very remarkable and beautiful occurrence in connection with the conversion of the man of Ethesopia was then related by Dr. Potts. He dwelt on the fact that the man had come all the way from Ethiopia to attend the great festival at Jerusalem and was returning home when he was met on the way by Philip.

Philip, the evangelist, had been in Samaria and all were talking of him and the great work which he was doing in the Master's vineyard, as at present Canadians are talking of the great work of Rev. Mr. Moody. In the an angel suddenly appeared to him and instructed him to "go to Gaza, which is desert." Thither Philip repaired and watched and waited, soliquizing why and for what purpose he had been sent to this place. Suddenly a chariot appeared in view and it was suggested to Philip to join the cavalcade, which he did, and observing the Ethiaopian riding in state and reading the book of the Prophet Isiah, as he travelled, Philip accosted him, saying, "understandest thou what thou readest?" The same spirit which prompted Philip to stop the chariot was influencing the man of Ethiaopia and prepared him for the abrupt question. No matter how far one may be in the depths or how far remote apparently from any succor, God will always send some Philip in the way of a minister or some other worker to RECLAIM THE WANDERER.

MIDST OF HIS WORK

Here was the Ethiaopian, apparently the first man of his race who had ever attempted to accomplish the wearisome journey across the desert. He was the finance minister and the confident of his queen and apparently beyond the reach of any humble apostle, yet was he brought within reach of Divine grace. He, like us, was beguiling the time by reading when on his journey. He was reading the book of the Prophet Isaiah and was a most earnest seeker after the truth. He said to Philip, "He seated." Mark his humility. This proud noble had become docile and teachable through reading this book. "Oh, my friends," said he, "put yourself in the attitude of an enquirer and heaven will assuredly send some Philip as an instructor and leader.

Did it ever occur to you, queried the doctor, that Philip was closely following in the footsteps of his blessed master, when he TALKED WITH THE ETHIAOPIAN.

He too delivered his greatest sermons to single individuals. As in the case of Nichodemus, when he began by saying unto him "Marvel not that I say unto you, ye must be born again." Then again there was the case of the woman of Samaria, and the illustrations in Luke xv. The doctor concluded his remarks by continuing his relation of the narative concerning the conversion of the Ethiaopian by Philip, who preached from a providence prepared text and urged that the teachings of the prophets were not dwelt on sufficiently by the ministers of the present day. Expository and explanatory teaching concerning the books of the prophets were what was needed.

LO, THE POOR INDIAN!

A Young Cow Buck From Hiawatha Gets Into Difficulties.

Bobbie Cow, a young half-breed buck from Hiawatha, presented a pitiable spectacle indeed this morning when he entered the prisoner's box at the police court and turned to face the magistrate. His right eye was blackened and swollen to such an extent as to completely obscure the vision of that optic. The chief considered that the young Indian had been already sufficiently punished for being drunk on Saturday by the injuries he had received coupled with the fact that he had remained in the cells all Sunday.

DURING THE DEBAUCH,

The way the young buck received his facial disfigurement is a tale in itself. It seems that during the afternoon he got fairly well loaded with "red eye" and went off on a glorious "toot." The police heard of his capers and instituted a search for him but failed to locate the wily savage. Later on in the evening Cow wandered in through an alley to Leary's livery stable in the rear of the Cox block. In returning to the street again he upon which the floor will be laid in the new building and the special Providence, which always seems to guard drunken men, stood by him and enabled him to prance gaily over the dangerous path without a fall. Just as he had almost gained the street his lucky star deserted him and he walked into a trap, when he suddenly stepped through the opening left for a a cellar window; with a rattle and a bang poor "Lo" went down into the cellar on a tour of investigation.

WALKED THE JOISTS

A tall citizen came along shortly afterwards and together with some others out of the cellar, where P. C. McGinty walked him down to the police station followed by the crowd. In the excitement the tall man who went down into the cellar was forgotten and shabbily left to shift for himself. It was clearly a case of the fox and the goat in the well, and the tall citizen had worked himself up into quite a rage by the time that Mr. Billy Green came along and hearing him swearing softly to himself, rolled a barrel down and assisted him out.

ASSISTED THE INJURED INDIAN

Cow was dismissed this morning by the magistrate, and told to go and look after his eye, and to "mind his eye" next time he came to town.

A FALSE STATEMENT CONTRADICTED.

The rumour having been circulated by interested parties that Ostrom's were not receiving Chicago meats, the following letter is published in contradiction of such an unfounded statement:

MESSRS. OSTROM BROS., Peterborough, Ont.

GENTLEMEN,—In accordance with instructions received through our representative, Mr. Clerihew, we have entered for shipment tomorrow 1,000 lbs. of tenderloins, which will go forward on the 3 o'clock train as desired. We are very much pleased to send those meats, and hope you will find it to your advantage to use them regularly. We are confident the grade of the meats will please you in every respect and will certainly give any orders entrusted to us our most careful attention.

With thanks for the favour, and hoping to hear from you soon again, we remain,

Yours truly,

WILL BEGIN ON SATURDAY.

On Saturday, Nov. 24th, the sale of the China Hall stock will begin, and continue for two weeks—or until the whole stock has been disposed of. The goods have been reduced from 25 to 50 per cent., and in some cases 75 per cent., so there will be big bargains for everyone. Dinner, Tea and Chamber Sets, Silver Ware, Lamp Goods, Ornaments, etc., at prices that cannot be repeated again. Buy now for Christmas. China Hall and Silver Bazaar, Saturday, Nov. 24th.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The attendance at the Saturday night song service was almost double that of the last meeting. Five of the fellows gave interesting stories of well known hymns, and seemed to put new meaning in the verses we so often sing. T. H. Martin "held the reins."

Fifty men enjoyed a very earnest address by Rev. G. W. McColl, and a selection by the male quartette at yesterday afternoon's meeting. The quartette—Messrs. Squires, J. Millar, A. Millar and Skitch—sang "Go gather them in," and Mr. McColl presented the "true life" to the men present.

Those interested meet in the parlours at 9.15 to-night to form a Glee Club. Mr. Mulligan will have charge, and under his leadership the club will be sure to amount to something." All singers are invited to join, whether members or not, and we can assure those who come "an evening a week" of pure pleasure and profit. Details arranged at this meeting.

QUESTION FOR PEDRO PLAYERS TO ANSWER.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—Would you kindly give space to the following question in your columns, through which medium I would like to receive an answer:

A party of four are playing pedro. Four hands of nine cards each have been dealt, when the dealer is detected taking a sly glance at the bottom card of what remains of the pack.

The question I wish to have settled is, whether this remaining portion of the pack should be shuffled, or what should be done under the circumstances?

Thanking you, Mr. Editor,
I am, yours truly,
PEDRO PLAYER.

NOTE.—As there is no positive authority on pedro to fall back upon for an answer, would it not be a good way to settle the matter by prohibiting the dealer from bidding?

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.
